Choosing the second of these we climbed upstairs to a drooping gallery. This gallery encircled, almost continuously, the greater part of the inside of a square. Above it was another equally unsafe looking gallery. On each were dozens of children.

Thick mud filled the yard below. This maze of rickety galleries, stairways, with gates at the top of them and clotheslines and clothes filled most of the upper air.

One house consisted of four sets of rooms on each floor, the entrances being from the galleries.

Each of the tow upper floors contained four of these groups of three rooms. For each a rent of $10 a month was paid.

That is, the rooms opening on the two upper galleries of one of these wretched buildings produced altogether $80 for that landlord. The ground floor, which had sunk into a basement, was let for $20 to a Chinese laundry.

That is, $100 monthly for what was really one house—and such a house!

Of course in order to live at all the Italians had to pack themselves like rabbits into this warren.

In one of these groups of rooms were twelve people. Seven boarders slept in a room which seemed made to surround three double beds and a single one.

The husband and wife and three children divided themselves between the kitchen and an 8 by 10 bedroom.

Everyone of the men is out of work. They have no money; there is little prospect of getting any. When they do, some will go back to Italy. Meanwhile they are living on nothing.

It will soon be time to pay the rent. The landlord is said to own many such houses; but these people fear he will turn them out.

The highest rent was on Latour street. There a house of three flats, each containing four rooms, cost $17.50 for each flat. The landlord received $67.50, the rent of the basement being $15. These figures were given by the people themselves and corroborated by my guide.

On the first floor of one of these houses there were six boarders, a man and a wife and seven children—fifteen people living in three rooms and a kitchen.

The front room was of fair size. It was occupied by the householder and his wife and two of the children.

The middle room, beside which was the kitchen, was a large room. The six boarders lived in it and even had room for a table.

In a little back room were the other five children of the family.

One of the boarders had just come in with a hat full of fine Canadian apples. He had bought them for a few cents. It was Saturday night and they would do for the supper of the six boarders.—Beck's Weekly.

Neuralgia of the Heart

Mr. James G. Clark, Fosterville, York County, N.B., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from what the doctors said was neuralgia of the heart. The pain started in the back of the neck and worked down into the region of the heart. Though I had taken a lot of medicine of one kind and another, I could not get anything to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"When I began this treatment I could not rest in bed, except by sitting upright, on account of the dreadful pains about the heart and the quick, loud beating. The change which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has made in my condition is wonderful. It has entirely overcome these symptoms, and is making me strong and well. If this statement will help to relieve the suffering of others, you are at liberty to use it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a true tonic and the greatest of nerve restoratives. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Orangemen Celebrate

The members of Prince of Wales L. O. L. No. 320 held a Fowl Supper in their Hall on Thursday night, Nov. 5th, to commemorate the Discovery of the historic Gunpowder Plot. The event attracted a splendid gathering of the members and their friends. Roast geese, hot potatoes, coffee and other seasonable delicacies were provided by the ladies who served the tables in a manner that left nothing to be desired. After ample justice had been done to this part of the entertainment W. Bro. A. E. Porterfield, Master of the Lodge, took the chair and short speeches, appropriate to the occasion, were delivered by W. Bro. Robert. Curry, Past County Master of Dufferin, Bros. J. A. Marshall and T. J. Parks, reeve and deputy-reeve of Mono, Revs. A. J. Fowlie, H. A. Meek and W. M. Morris and Editor A. D. McKitrick, of The Banner. The tables and seats were afterwards cleared out of the hall, which was then given over to the younger people, who spent a few hours in tripping the light fantastic to the melodious strains of violin music. L. O. L. 320 has a membership of 90 or upwards and is now one of the strongest lodges in Dufferin County.

St. Mark's A.Y.P.A.

On Monday night next the A.Y.P.A. of St. Mark's Church will hold the second of the Scientific Evenings. Part Two of "Egyptian Explorations," will be given, illustrated by Lantern Views. On Monday evening last the A.Y.P.A. had the honor of a fraternal visit from the members of the Methodist Epworth League. A most enjoyable evening was spent by the members of the two Societies. The programme took the form of an Evening with Beethoven, the great Master of Composers. A Paper was read by Miss Arkell on the life of the great musician. Selections of his music were tastefully rendered by several members of the League. Miss Sprae Lathwell gave a splendid recitation, "The Story of the Moonlight Sonata" and this was also played during the course of the Reading. The Ladies Quartette was encored for their selection. Mr. Webster had charge of the opening proceedings, afterwards handing the meeting over to Mr. R. P. Allin. Refreshments were served in a very tasteful style at the close of the programme. About 150 young people were present at the meeting.

Orangeville Presbytery

Orangeville Presbytery transacted considerable important business at its meeting in St. Andrew's Church on Tuesday. Motions were passed sustaining a call from the congregations at Maple Valley and Singhampton to Rev. R. Drinnan, of Sudbury, and making arrangements for the induction service at Maple Valley on November 27th. Presbytery also sustained a call by Waldemar and Tarbert congregations to Rev. N. A. McDonald, of Sutton, and made provisional arrangements for the induction in the event of Mr. McDonald accepting the call. The induction was fixed for November 24th at Waldemar and Rev. A. J. Fowlie, Moderator of Presbytery, was appointed to preside. Reports were received regarding the recent Sunday School Institutes which were a splendid success. The same is true of the Social Service Congresses held at Caledon and Proton Station. Presbytery spent considerable time discussing the Budget in its different phases.

SALISBURY PLAINS.

Soldiering with First Canadian Contingent.

Interesting Letter from Mr. F. Malyon.

Mrs. Geo. Hillyard, of Caledon, has just received an interesting letter from Mr. Fred Malyon, who is now in camp on Salisbury Plains with the first Canadian contingent. Malyon, who is a member of F. Company, of the 48th Highlanders, lived with Mr. and Mrs. Hillyard until shortly before he enlisted for overseas service. He also sent a short note to Councillor Jas. R. Hillyard. Letter and note read as follows:—

West Down, South Camp,
Salisbury Plains, Oct. 19, 1914.

Dear Mother:

No doubt you will be surprised when you get this letter to know where I am. I intended coming over to visit you before leaving, but could not get time after I enlisted. But if the old Kaiser's army doesn't bowl me over, why I can see you after I return. I am sorry that I didn't see you before I left, but under the circumstances it was impossible for me to do so. I often think of you while I am over here and I would like to hear from you at any time to let me know how Mr. Hillyard is getting along. I hope to see him well when I return.

I suppose you will think I am foolish for offering up my life for my country, but I am only going out to fight to maintain the liberties and freedom that we enjoy in Canada, which our forefathers shed their blood to gain.

I wrote while at Valcartier but my letter must have gone astray as I haven't heard from you as yet, but there might be some mail forwarded to me from Canada.

Now I don't want you to worry about me as I am getting along alright and it will be about three months before we go to the battle field as we are going on garrison duty here for most of the winter. My Regimental No. is 27820, so that if anything happens me while on active service you will see that number in the papers and you will be notified immediately.

We have church service every Sunday morning and it sure does look nice to see 30,000 men grouped in a field and everyone singing. We have the Y.M.C.A. boys with us and they hold services every night in their tent and do a lot to help the boys.

We had a splendid trip across the Pond and it was a great sight to see our fleet of 32 troopships lined up on the ocean accompanied by five battleships. The English people certainly use us good and they call us the sunburnt giants from Canada. Enclosed find piece of heather which I picked up while on march this morning. It grows here as thick as clover in Canada. Please write.

Sincerely Yours,
FRED.

Dear Jas:

Well here I am again as large as life, twice as natural and feeling in the best of condition to go and take a crack at old 'Sour Krout's' army. I am in good shape now to run that race at the Fair, but I guess you will have to call it off. While you are shooting hay down to the horses this winter, I'll be trying to shoot down the Germans. I can hit the bullseye nearly every time now. We are going to be reviewed by the King shortly. Be sure and write to

Your Friend,
FRED.

RUSSELL BEFORE THE COURTS.

'Pastor' Russell's Knowledge of the Greek Language.

Admitted in the Witness Box that He Had Never Been Ordained.

"Pastor" Russell was compelled to make some admissions when he was placed in the witness box during the trial of his action against Rev. J. J. Ross, of Hamilton, for defamatory libel. Although he declared that he knew Greek he was unable to read the letters of the Greek alphabet when a copy of a Greek New Testament was placed in his hands. He was also forced to admit that he had never been ordained by a bishop, clergyman, Presbytery, council or any body of men living.

The story of the trial as far as it related to "Pastor" Russell's scholastic standing may be best learned by reading the following excerpt from Mr. Ross's pamphlet "Facts and More Facts":—

In writing further about Russell, or Russellism, the authority for what I state is not "hearsay" evidence. I have before me the evidence obtained in the Court of Common Pleas No. 1, of Allegheny County, Pa., U.S.A., June term, 1903, before Honourable F. H. Collier, P.J., and a jury, when S. J. Porter and D. F. Patterson, Esquires, acted for Mrs. Russell and J. McF. Carpenter and W. M. McJunkin, Esquires, represented Mr. Russell. Mr. Alexander Callow, the Official Reporter of the Court of Common Pleas, No.1, of Allegheny County, Pa., U.S.A. certifies, under oath, that this document numbering from one to two hundred and fifty-two inclusive contains a full and correct transcript of all the evidence taken. I have also beside me the evidence obtained in the Superior Court of New York, U. S.A., which was held in the presence of Justice Charles H. Kelvy, Esq., and a jury, in Mr. Russell's libel case against the Brooklyn Eagle for damages amounting to $100,000. Then I also have in my possession a complete and correct transcript of all the testimony obtained from Russell himself there in the police court of Hamilton in his case against me for criminal libel, held before George H. Jelfs, Esq. Together with these documents I have his books, papers, letters written by him, etc., and knowledge secured from personal investigation into his life, character, teaching, and business methods, etc. What I now tell the reader is first hand knowledge and I will be prepared to defend it in the Court of Law.

When Mr. Russell's case against me came up for its first hearing on Dec. 9th, 1912, it was necessary for him to be present in person to identify himself and to deny the charges, or whatever charges which he claimed to be untrue, contained in the leaflet. Under oath, he positively and most emphatically denied every charge made against him. The leaflet was read part by part to him and he was asked by the Crown Attorney, "Is this true?" His answers throughout were "No, no, no," "Absolutely untrue," "Decidedly untrue," "That is not true," etc., until he came to the "miracle wheat," and then he said, "The item about the miracle wheat might be said to have a particle of truth, just one grain of truth in it in a sense." This is the only admission of truth, he allowed, in the charges made against him. By denying these charges, he claimed for himself a high scholastic standing, having a knowledge of the dead languages, having taken a course in theology, systematic and historical theology, ordination, church affiliation and so on. But now what are the facts as they were brought out by the examination on March 17th, 1913? As to his scholastic standing, he had sworn that what was said about it was not true. Under the examination, he admitted that, at most, he had attended school only seven years of his life, that the public school, and that he had left school when he was about fourteen years of age just at the opening of the adolescent period, when the directional element is so necessary in a boy's life. "Do you know the Greek?" asked the Attorney. "Oh, yes," was Russell's reply. There he was handed a copy of the New Testament in Greek, by Westcott & Hort, and asked to read the letters of the alphabet as they appear on the top of page 447. He did not know the alphabet. "Now," asked Mr. Staunton, "Are you familiar with the Greek language?" "No," said Mr. Russell, without a blush. When he saw that he was caught, he admitted that he knew nothing about Latin, and Hebrew and neither had he ever taken a course in Philosophy, Systematic Theology and neither had he ever attended any of the higher schools of learning. A trap had been set for him at every one of these points, and having been caught in the first, he thought it best for him to "own up before he was shown up." As it was, he was shown up. This is the man who goes about claiming that he alone has the proper understanding of the Scriptures, condemning the translators of the Bible and denouncing all ministers and teachers of the Word except himself, and his little satellites, as ignorant, empty-headed and deceitful. Russell has made quite free use of the dead languages in his books, but this is evidently not done by himself, but another, with the end in view of misleading the ignorant, and trying to catch the educated. He has familiarized himself with a few big Greek terms which have become Anglicized, such as "Apocalypsis, Epiphaneia, parousia, parakletos," etc., puts his own meaning into them and then goes about using them before his audiences, and those who do not know any better think him a highly educated man. This is the man also who condemns all books and papers except those written by himself or published by the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society.

Now as to his ordination. Remember that the self-styled "Pastor" is still under oath and that he says, "The oath is sacred." It is indeed sacred to him. "Is it true that you were never ordained?" asked his counsel. "It is not true," replied Mr. Russell. But my counsel takes him in hand and being wileful, it is difficult to keep the arch-heretic to the point. His Worship, the Magistrate, was appealed to and Russell is informed that he must answer yes or no. "Now," said Mr. Staunton, "You never were ordained by a bishop, clergyman, Presbyterian, council, or any body of men living." After a considerable pause and his eyes fixed on his feet in the witness box, he said, "I never was." He was caught again! and he was not abashed. This is the gentleman that gives himself forth all over the world as a fully accredited minister of the gospel. What a low standard of morals he must have! What a seared conscience he must possess. He swore he would tell the truth, all the truth and nothing but the truth, and that under the eyes of Almighty God. But how artful he is even under oath in devising falsely! In other words, what a fabricator.

ST. VITUS DANCE.

Another Severe Case Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

St. Vitus dance is a common form of nervous trouble, which affects not only young children but men and women as well. The only cure lies in plenty of pure blood, because good blood is the life food of the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure the most severe cases of S. Vitus dance, because they actually make the rich, red blood that feeds and restores the starving, shattered nerves. This has been proved in hundreds of cases, among them that of Mrs. John Duncan, London, Ont., who says: "About a year ago I found myself becoming nervous. At the outset I did not pay much attention to it as I thought the trouble would pass away. In this I was disappointed, for I soon found myself rapidly growing worse. My right arm and leg began to jerk and twitch all the time, even when I was in bed, and I found great difficulty in walking or doing any work. Finally the trouble affected my speech and it was with difficulty I made myself understood. Of course I was doctoring for the trouble, but was not being helped, and finally the doctor wanted me to go to the hospital for treatment. This I did not care to do, and it was at this stage that I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. By the time I had used four boxes I felt much better, and in a short time longer I was quite well and strong. My neighbors look upon my cure as quite wonderful, and indeed I think it is, and shall always be grateful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or can be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SOUTH AFRICA.

Civil war has unfortunately broken out again in South Africa. The official despatches encourage the hope that Botha may prevail before the uprising becomes serious. The Governor, Lord Buxton, asserts that "the very great majority of the citizens of every province of the Union are thoroughly loyal." It is, however, reasonable to suppose that De Wet and Beyers, who lead the rebellion, would not be likely to take up arms without the assurance of a strong support. Both are men of note and experienced in public affairs and public leadership. De Wet won a great reputation in the Boer War. He was the last of the leaders to yield in Kitchener's final campaign. Beyers is younger and a trained politician as well as a soldier. He presided at the Vereeniging Conference in 1902, at which the Boers at last gave up. He has been Speaker of the Transvaal Legislature and was lately in command of the militia. It would be surprising if only twelve years after the conclusion of a war fought with so much determination its passions were not still smouldering. But there is not in the news the slighest suggestion of a cause for breaking the pledges of 1902, unless it be that Botha had resorted to conscription to raise a force to attack German Southwest Africa. The object of the uprising, which is unknown, must be to snatch independence while Britain is engaged. At all events it is not conceivable that the Boers would cast off a British to take on a German colonial dependence.—Weekly Sun.

IS THERE A "CRIME TRUST" IN MONTREAL?

Are Pickpockets and Other Crooks Protected by an Organized System Which Guarantees "Exclusive Rights" and Immunity?

Two years ago Benny Wolfe, an expert American "dip," was arrested in Montreal, charged with picking pockets. He was arraigned in the usual way and — also in the usual way—liberated on bail. Benny then dropped from sight.

Some weeks ago a man was arrested for the same offence and taken to police headquarters. There he was identified as Benny Wolfe. Now on the occasion of his escape from the previous arrest a bench warrant had been issued for Benny. That this warrant existed was not discovered during the identification.

Then Benny appeared in court and was let out on bail. He is still out and has apparently made another get-away.

On October 14th last, a local amateur thief, named Eddie ——— was found guilty by the Court of Special Sessions, of "attempting to steal from the person of a woman in a St. Lawrence street store"—so read the charge.

The records show that he was not a professional crook. He was a machinist by trade. There was no one to furnish bail. He was sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

Benney had "squared" the local The member of the protective organization and the casual!

These two stories tell the difference. They show how the machinery of the law can be controlled and guided (not with the cognizance of the judges themselves, but by means of the lesser officials and their hangers-on) so as to protect the man who stands in with the Crime Trust and to leave the unprotected man to the utmost rigor of the law. For there exists in Montreal, according to those who claim to know, a powerful organization for systematizing, protecting, and levying upon certain branches of criminal activity. It is the growth of several years, but its present state of high efficiency is only quite recent. It started apparently with a few expert criminals and others. Additions drifted in, the money-making possibilities and the safety of the business were soon established, and now the Trust can depend on the friendship and assistance of men of influence, and is so strong that a private citizen robbed by a Trust member has practically no chance of securing a conviction. The revenue of the heads of the organization must be extremely substantial.

The Methods of the Trust.

There have been repeated instances in the last few months of men being arrested for very serious offences against the laws concerning theft from the person, swindling or gambling, being arraigned on these charges in the first hearing, and the charge being subsequently reduced, before any evidence has been heard, to some very minor offence, such as having opium in possession, loitering, vagrancy or disorderly conduct. Nominal bail is fixed on this reduced charge, and the prisoner leaves twon a free man, and the courts know him no more. Frequently they do not even keep his bail money, for there various ways of getting bail money back from the courts, even if the bailed party fails to show up. Sometimes the charge is withdrawn altogether, without any other being substituted, and the prisoner is not even held in bail.

A common procedure after such an arrest is to send an agent of the trust to the citizen who has had his pockets rifled, when such a citizen has made a charge. This agent tells a "hard luck story," pleasing for mercy for the prisoner and offering to return the stolen money, if the charge is not pressed.

Should the victim of the robbery appear to be anxious to go on with the case, he is told that if he does so the prisoner will be let off and the money will be lost, anyway.

If a man has been robbed of a couple of hundred dollars he will usually be glad enough to have the money returned and agree to say no more about it. But in a few—a very few—cases he will defy the agent and press the charge.

The prisoner is arraigned. His lawyer asks that bail be allowed. If there is any difficulty about this — sometimes the figure is set too high —the prisoner is taken before another judge, who is more tender-hearted, is given bail or has the amount reduced.

Within a few hours the criminal gets bail. If he has the money he pays it himself; if not, the trust lends it.

Then the prisoner is free. He leaves town and commences "work" in another city, often returning to Montreal later. For the clever thieves fully appreciate our city.

Should he be again arrested here—but such accidents are unusual— he will be given bail again.

In the negotiations necessary for obtaining the speedy release of prisoners an alderman or other person of influence is induced to take a prominent part. Sometimes, without knowing the actual nature of the case, the alderman or other person is led to play the part of friend and protector of the accused quite unwillingly.

Whenever a gang of international swindlers is brought to court these men of influence are there to help the criminals, not the court.

What of the Wire Tappers.

During the past three months there have been several cases which well demonstrate the workings of the crime trust. In most of them the criminals were arrested by one or more of the really good detectives—men who know the system they have to fight but who go on fighting.

Towards the latter part of July last Detective L. A. Lepage arrested ten men who were charged with conspiracy to defraud by operating a betting room in an apartment house on Dorchester street, west. The apartment contained the usual paraphernalia, including wire tapping apparatus.

Chief of Police Campeau and Chief of Detectives Charpentier said the case was an exceedingly strong one and the men would be prosecuted to the limit of the law.

The men appeared before Judge Leet, who fixed bail at $2,000 each. At this point influence was brought to bear in the case.

The bail was reduced by the Court of King's Bench to $700 for each of the prisoners.

As is usual in such cases the money was quickly deposited, the prisoners were liberated, and eight "jumped" bail and are still free.

But the charge of conspiracy to defraud was withdrawn and the money did not go to the Provincial treasury.

Some of it—but not all— was returned to the ex-prisoners or their representatives.

William Stormont and John Sheehan, two of the gang, appeared to answer to a reduced charge of being inmates of a betting house. They were each found guilty and fined $25 and costs.

Among the other men, those who "jumped" their bail, were E. Johnson and Max Miller.

Max Miller was arrested again, when, on October 8, six alleged pickpockets and swindlers were captured by F. C. Gorman, superintendent of the Canadian Detective Bureau, and Detectives Lepage and Weston, of the city force.

The suspects occupied three apartments, Nos. 38, 44 and 45, in a Guy street apartment house. The rent was $210 monthly.

Their names are: Max Miller, of New York; Lewis Manning alias W. H. Williams, of Albany; John C. Cohen alias Davidson, of New York; S. Lubin alias Lubitz, of New York and Milwaukee; George Fields alias Hoffman, of Chicago, and David Ross alias Walker, of Buffalo.

Lubin had his wife and two children with him and had been living at No. 29 Emery street since June last.

Two citizens charged certain of the men with picking their pockets. They claimed $200 and some cheques had been stolen.

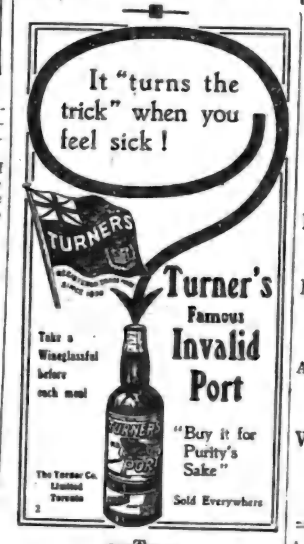
Pieced Scraps Together.

Now Detectives Gorman and Lepage had seen one of the three men tearing up some pieces of paper and throwing the scraps over a fence. These scraps the officers laboriously pieced together. The result answered the description of the stolen cheques.

The men were followed, two, Cohen and Manning, being arrested, while the third was shadowed to the apartment on Guy street and there arrested with three others.

Four citizens came forward with charges of pocket picking against the prisoners. The agents of the trust then appeared and offered to return the stolen money if the charges were not pressed.

The citizens who claimed to have been robbed accepted this arrangement. Two received their money and two were promised theirs but never received it.



The prisoners appeared before Judge St. Cyr. The newspapermen were asked to leave the court room. It was later announced that Ross and Fields, two of the men accused, had pleaded guilty to a charge of having opium in their possession. For this they had been fined $25. The others were liberated.

Why were the citizens who first laid the charges allowed to receive sums of money in the High Constable's office?

Why was the evidence regarding the torn up cheque ignored?

Why were the newspaper men turned out of court?

Why is it that when a citizen goes to some of our police officials to complain against certain depredations, the officials shrug their shoulders and remark that it will do no good to lay a complaint, that the accused will get off anyway?—Beck's Weekly.

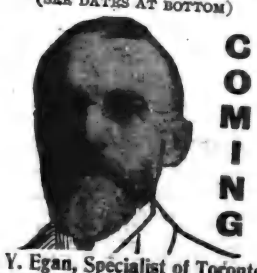
Worse Than War.

Drink is a More Destructive Evil.

To the Editor:—

Listen to these great men. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain said: "No statistics are needed to assure you that temperance reform lies at the bottom of all further political, social and religious progress. If I could destroy to-morrow the desire for strong drink in the people of England, what changes we would see. We would see our taxes reduced by millions sterling. We would see our jails and work-houses empty. We would see more lives saved in twelve months than are consumed in a century of bitter and savage war."

Gladstone said that drink destroyed more lives than war, pestilence and famine combined.



Dr. Sir James Creighton Brown says that the harmful influence of drink is exerted more strongly on fine and sensitive natures. He found graduates of England's proudest universities among the most degraded tramps of Australia and two hundred college graduates in one month in the midnight bread line of the slums of New York. Every one of these was victimized by the false idea that he could take it or leave it alone.

Cromwell said, "This national crime is a thing that God will reckon with and I wish it may not lie on the nation a day longer than you can find a remedy for it."

A LOSS DUE TO CARELESSNESS

In driving through the country in such trying times as those through which we are now passing, one is struck by the carelessness manifested in the large proportion of farm implements and machinery found outdoors exposed to all kinds of weather and consequent loss therefrom. In the West an exceedingly large percentage of farms make no provision for housing implements whatever, and the figures given in that statement should arouse many to action. Even in Ontario, older settled and more advanced, we see on every hand implements and machines left out in all kinds of weather, needing paint and in bad repair.

While, according to our correspondent's statement, almost every man in certain districts in Ontario houses his implements, the fact remains that hundreds of farm machines and implements stand out summer and winter, exposed to all kinds of weather, conducive to rust and decay. Housing has been proven capable of doubling the life of such machines as mowers and binders, and in some cases, binders have been known to last three times as long with proper care as others have done under slipshod methods. The life of the average binder exposed to the weather is said to be about seven years, many, we believe, do not last this length of time, and some less than half as long, while others carefully housed, kept repainted and in good repair, have been known to cut twenty consecutive crops and still be in fairly good running order. Which would you rather have, and which is more profitable for you, a ten year old binder worth fifty per cent. of its original value or a five year old binder good for nothing but scrap iron? A little care and attention is the difference.

Most farms have buildings enough that all the plows, harrows, drills, cultivators, binders, mowers, rakes and other tillage implements and harvesting machines could be kept under cover the greater part of the year, and those with a special implement shed should be found with everything under cover summer and winter, in fact, on some of the best regulated farms implements and machines are brought to the shed after the day's work, and are not left exposed even over night. Millions of dollars are lost annually in Canada through neglect of this branch of farm work. Where is your binder, your mower, your rake, manure spreader, plow, drill, cultivator, and any other necessary and perishable implement and machine?—Farmers Advocate.

A forlorn, hungry-looking tramp called at the kitchen door early on Monday morning and was promptly interviewed by Hi Tinc. To him the tramp related a pitiful tale of woe, ending with a humble petition for something to eat.

"Likee fish?" asked Hi Tinc, in insinuating tones.

"Yes, I like fish," the tramp answered.

"Call Fliday," answered the other, as he closed the door with an imperturbable smile.

When the Liver Gets Torpid

Mrs. C. L. Cook, 248 Tenth street, Brandon, Man., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last four years for liver trouble, and can say that I have had great satisfaction and help from them. I find that I do not need any doctor if I use them when the liver gets torpid, and believe that they are exactly suited for my case. My husband has used them for kidney trouble with good results, and my daughter in Winnipeg has been helped a great deal by the use of these pills. We say we can't keep house without them, and have cheated the doctors here out of a good many visits. I think Dr. Chase's medicines are just the thing, and have recommended them to many people who have used them with good results."

NERVOUS WOMEN

Can Only Find Relief by Toning the Nerves with New Rich Blood.

The woman who "flies to pieces" over the least noise or excitement soon fades and loses her good looks. Dark rings appear under her eyes, the lines about her mouth and forehead deepen and lengthen, the eyes become sunken, the face drawn and the complexion sallow.

The trouble is nervousness and if the strain is not relieved and the nerves properly nourished, nervous collapse and years of sickness may easily follow. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People will save you from this dreadful affliction. These Pills make the new, rich blood that nourishes and tones the nerves and banishes every trace of nervousness. Mrs. Margaret Donley, Amherst, N. S., says: "I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved me from the grave. I was taken down with nervous prostration, and for months was unable to walk. I slowly recovered until I was able to go about, but there the improvement ended. I was getting weaker until I could just get from the bed to a couch. The least noise would set me trembling all over, and often when I went to the table I would leave it hungry and yet unable to eat. Sometimes I was taken with smothering spells and felt as if I was going to die. At other times I would be so nervous that I could not hold anything in my hands. I was doctoring all the time, but without benefit, and finally I made up my mind I would try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They were the first medicine that gave me any relief, and I was soon able to take a short walk. I continued using the Pills, gradually gaining new health and strength, until I finally felt as well as ever I did in my life. At the time Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me I was living in Saskville, and my illness and cure was known to everyone in that place, and my friends, like myself, believe the Pills saved my life."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Fire's Out"

THEN comes the matter of insurance. You get out your policy and note the company in which you are insured. Certain questions should not arise to worry you at such a time.

You should not be worried by the question of whether you are insured in a company that dickers and delays over settlement.

You should not be worried over the question of whether the company can pay the claim.

You should not be worried by the question of whether you have had enough protection to cover your loss.

To be insured in the Hartford Fire Insurance Company eliminates the first two of these worries. By consultation with a "Hartford" agent before taking out your policy, he will tell you the proper proportion of insurance to carry, and that eliminates the third worry.

The evident thing to do before the fire, in order to eliminate worry, is to be insured in the right kind of company.

Must Interest Retailers

The Canadian Manufacturers Association has committed itself to the expenditure of a large sum of money for the purpose of carrying on a campaign to educate the Canadian people to buy and use made-in-Canada goods. The idea is commendable, but the manufacturers have made a serious mistake in ignoring the retail trade of the smaller cities, towns and villages when placing the advertising matter for their campaign. This has been placed entirely with the big city dailies, which naturally do not reach and influence the small retailers and the consumers outside the big centres in the way that the country weeklies do. To successfully promote the sale of any article or line of articles it is absolutely essential to secure the interest and co-operation of the general retail trade. This interest can be best secured by a judicious use of the columns of the weekly newspapers, which reach and influence the consumers who are the customers of the retailers. The retailer will buy Made in Canada goods, not when he sees them advertised in the big dailies, but when he finds that the people who are his customers are asking for them. On this subject the Canadian Grocer makes this timely observation :—

"The theory of the advertising agency is that if an article is strongly advertised the retailer has got to handle it whether he likes it or not, but this has not worked out in practice. The fact is that no article has ever been forced on the retail trade permanently. The average advertising agency is not equipped to deal with the retail trade. They do not understand questions from the retailers' standpoint and advertising agencies that ignore the retail service are not giving intelligent service to their clients. As manufacturers learn more about advertising they realize that the most important factor, an absolutely essential factor, in selling any goods, is the co-operation of the retail trade."

THE TOWN COUNCIL

Coun. Henderson's By-Law to Protect Boulevards Passes Its Various Readings.

Routine business was the order of the day at the regular meeting of the Town Council on Monday night.

Dr. James Henry's account of $35 was turned over to the Finance Committee for report at next meeting.

A communication from Dr. Hastings, Medical Health Officer of Toronto, related the steps that had been taken to stop the sale of light-weight bread in Toronto, and asked if the local authorities had taken any steps to prohibit this practice in Orangeville. The communication was referred to the Chief of Police with instructions to get the information asked for and communicate the same to the Town Clerk, who will then answer Dr. Hastings' enquiry.

Mrs. Booth's application for remission of taxes was referred to the Court of Revision.

A communication from the Canadian Red Cross Society suggesting the calling of a public meeting in Orangeville on Dec. 1st, was placed in the hands of the Industrial Committee.

The Property Committee recommended payment of the Adamson Hardware Co's account of $52.70.

Councillor Henderson's by-law relating to boulevards was given the necessary number of readings and thereby made part of the municipal law of the town. The by-law states that "all such parts of the streets between the curb or edge of roadway and the outer line of the sidewalk, as have been heretofore improved by sodding or may be hereafter so improved either by the Corporation or any owner or occupier of land in front of whose property such improvements may be made, shall hereafter be known as boulevards."

The by-law contains two important prohibitions set forth in the following terms :—

"No person shall wilfully break, injure, dig up or destroy the sod or grass of or in any such boulevards, or the fence, hedge, or railing surrounding the same, or drive any horse, or other animal or wagon or other vehicle on the same."

"No person shall lead, drive, or place any horse, cow or other animal in or upon any such boulevards or permit any horse, cow or other animal owned by him, or being in his possession, or under his control, to go or be therein or thereon."

The penalty for breach of the by-law is a fine of $50 and costs, or twenty days in the common gaol.

The matter of purchasing a new overcoat for Chief Ewing was brought up and then referred to the Property Committee.

The matter of charging half-yearly for lawn services was referred to the Fire & Water Committee for report.

An application for free water and exemption from taxes for the proposed Skating Rink was referred to the Finance Committee for report.

Chief Ewing was instructed to have 50 copies of the by-law relating to boulevards printed and posted in conspicuous places.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL

Votes Conditional Grant of $500 to Regimental Fund of New Dufferin Infantry

Warden Dryden's Address States that Year's Work Has Been Satisfactorily Completed.

The County Council is holding its November meeting in the Court House this week. The members were all present when County Clerk J. C. Reid called the roll at the opening session on Tuesday afternoon. Reeve Fairbairn, of Orangeville, who was elected to succeed Reeve White last July, filed his certificate of election and took his seat as a member of the Council. A motion was subsequently passed making Mr. Fairbairn Chairman of the County Property Committee and appointing him to Mr. White's place on the Standing Committees of which the latter was a member.

A letter from Mr. H. B. Amies called the attention of the Council to the Canadian Patriotic Fund and requested the co-operation of Council in taking care of those dependent on soldiers who have gone to the front from Dufferin.

Mr. H. A. Dorrance, Representative of the Department of Agriculture, submitted a lengthy report outlining the work of the Department during 1914.

A communication and accompanying form from the Education Department set forth the grants to rural schools. The interesting feature of the report was the figures showing the reduction, which the Department found it necessary to make in the grants. The figures by municipalities are :—

	Estimated Grant.	Reduction.	Grant Paid.
Amaranth—	$1410.00	$511.83	$898.17
East Garafraxa—	1001.00	363.36	637.64
East Luther—	1023.00	371.35	651.65
Melanethon—	1740.00	631.62	1108.38
Mono—	1732.00	628.72	1103.28
Mulmur—	1505.00	546.31	958.69

A communication, written at the instance of Wm. and Alex. Rodgers, urged upon the Council the importance of rebuilding the County bridge over the Grand River on the 8th line, West Garafraxa. The bridge is maintained by Dufferin and Wellington counties.

Before the Council adjourned Col. Preston addressed the members on the subject of the authorization of the new Dufferin Infantry Regiment and invited the Council to attend a meeting of the officers and interested citizens in the Library Auditorium at 1.30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon.

Wednesday morning a by-law was passed appointing county auditors, Messrs. W. N. Irwin, Orangeville, and Wm. Gallaugher, Mulmur, were given the appointments.

H. A. Dorrance, district representative of the Department of Agriculture, and Mr. Geo. Clayton, of East Luther, addressed the council, advocating a grant to the Guelph Winter Fair for the purpose of providing special prizes for Dufferin County exhibitors. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee for report.

Prior to the noon adjournment John Best, M.P., who happened to be in the court room, was invited to address the council. Mr. Best, who spoke briefly, described the County Council as a most important legislative body, because it came directly in contact with the people and legislated for its own particular constituency. Legislation, he said, was usually influenced by public opinion, but there were cases where legislation preceded and moulded public opinion. Touching on military matters the member for Dufferin County urged the County Council to help along the organization of the new Dufferin County infantry regiment.

The early part of yesterday afternoon was spent attending a public meeting held in the Library auditorium to discuss matters connected with the organization of the infantry regiment which is being raised in Dufferin.

Wednesday afternoon the Council placed itself on record as strongly favoring the organization of the proposed Dufferin Light Infantry by pledging itself to vote $500 toward the regimental fund provided the Dominion Government agrees to authorize the formation of the Regiment.

Besides making this liberal grant, the Council agreed by unanimous vote to the following resolution, introduced by Messrs. Fairbairn and Hilborn :

"That this County Council of the County of Dufferin, in regular meeting assembled, desires respectfully to call the attention of the Honorable, the Minister of Militia and Defence, to the urgent need of a militia organization of some kind in this part of Ontario, which will organize and train the young men for the defence of Canada and the Empire and which will bring home to the people their duty to the Militia and the country and enlist for overseas service such recruits as may be willing to go.

"To that end we would respectfully urge that the application already made for the authorization of a Regiment of Infantry in the County of Dufferin and adjacent territory be granted and that this be done at the earliest possible moment so that officers and non-commissioned officers may be trained during the coming winter and other necessary steps taken to enable this community to do its duty in the present crisis."

Warden Dryden delivered the following address :—

November 17, 1914.

Gentlemen of the County Council,

It is with the greatest pleasure I welcome you one and all to this closing session of the present year being the 102nd session of the Council of the County of Dufferin.

I am pleased to be able to say that we have the year's work well finished up and all the affairs of the County in best of shape.

A number of new bridges have been built during the year which are first class, permanent structures of steel and concrete and are good value for the money expended.

Bridge No. 13, known as the Kelsey Bridge, has been completed in every way and is a fine steel superstructure with concrete abutments and floor.

Bridge No. 24 between Amaranth and Mono has been completed.

Bridge No. 27 between Melanethon and Mulmur is also completed accepting the approaches which we expect will be finished before the end of the year.

Bridge No. 19 between Mono and Mulmur has not been completed according to plans and specifications and your Committee, with the County Engineer, have refused to pass it.

The County Bridges between Wellington and Dufferin and Peel and Dufferin have all been completed with the exception of Park's Bridge on the Boundary Line between East and West Garafraxa. These bridges with the one exception are all excellent structures. The Park Bridge was not completed satisfactorily and there is yet some work to be done on it. When this work is completed to the satisfaction of the Engineer your Committee has offered to accept the bridge less $10.00 deduction for rough work.

In respect to Bridge No. 12, known as the Burnside Bridge, your Committee, after carefully considering the conditions, decided not to use the old timbers of the Kelsey Bridge to renew it, but to leave the bridge over until next year when a new bridge will be required to be built.

It is our earnest hope that the world's great conflict across the seas will soon be brought to a close and that the great British Empire will soon again be enjoying the peace and prosperity she so richly deserves. I have to congratulate you on the generous response to the call for aid which has been made by several municipalities in the County and for the sympathy so freely shown for the poor sufferers who have been driven from home and country.

In conclusion I must thank you as well as the ratepayers of Melanethon for the honors you have conferred upon me in electing me to the honorable position of Warden of the County of Dufferin and Reeve of the Township of Melanethon. I have tried in my humble way to fill these high offices to the best of my ability and I thank you all for the valuable assistance you have so kindly extended to me during the year, adding in no small degree to the success of the work and the pleasure it has given me to occupy the Chair.

THOMAS C. DRYDEN,
Warden.

The deliverance was referred to a Special Committee composed of Messrs. Kidd, West, Falconer and Parks for consideration and report.

An application from the Children's Aid Society for assistance was referred to the Finance Committee for report. The request was backed up by a deputation, Judge Fisher, Rev. G. W. Tebbs and Messrs. Dalton and Strothers being the spokesmen.

Bull Moose in Africa

In a recent issue the Toronto World states that "Arthur Huston & Co. have a splendid top liner at Shea's Hippodrome this week. Mr. Huston is a comedy juggler of considerable skill and in his latest skit he is intended to represent ex-President Roosevelt in the South African jungle. He has a good supply of wild animals, both real and otherwise, and throughout the act there is plenty of fun."

The Auburn (N.Y.) Advertiser-Journal says that "'Roosevelt in Africa' presented by Arthur Huston and a company of five people is one of the best opening acts ever seen in Auburn. The forest scene with all kinds of trick props and wild animals was very good."

A fowl supper under the auspices of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. John Buchanan. Jupiter Pluvius was in his summer trock, and folk from all parts of the realm began assembling in the spacious abode shortly after the last rays of the golden sun had faded gently away on the western horizon and continued till the splendor of the twilight passed silently into the night and the moon's silvery beams were cast over the joyful home.

The members and their friends, (something less than seven hundred), happily scattered throughout the building were summoned and led by the Honorary President, wended their way through the magnificent corridors to the dining room, where a sumptuous repast awaited them. The floor-covered tables, sunset-flushed with yellow and pink flowers, were made gorgeous amid the rich light of red candles, glowing in supreme beauty, upon the walls decorated with maple leaves entwined in pretty pink snap-dragons, with a back ground of Union Jacks. Justice done in this sphere they were entertained by amusements progressing in various parts of the stately mansion. One silver tongued spell binder after a lengthy and elaborate oration delivered himself of the shop-worn phrase that the present war was a fight "against brutal and reckless militarism." Another, that the existing Armageddon was a "struggle to place upon an unassailable foundation the right of smaller nations." Many phrases from the different orators might be quoted to show that they believed and thus agreed that Great Britain entered this terrible conflict not for any benefit to herself, more than others, but for the maintenance of "Liberty and Freedom the world over." The small hours of the morning had crept in amidst this fervor of patriotism, and the jovial throng, after singing the National Anthem, dispersed.

ON SALISBURY PLAINS

In Camp with the First Canadian Contingent.

Herbert Meek, a Former Alton Boy, Narrates First Experiences and Impressions.

The appended letter is from Mr. Herbert Meek, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Meek, of Toronto, and formerly of Alton. The writer, who is a member of the 48th Highlanders, enlisted for foreign service and went to England with the first contingent. Private Meek, who is only 17 years of age, is one of the youngest members of the contingent and his comrades have christened him "Babe." He was formerly in the service of the Imperial Bank. His letter, which is written from Bustard Camp, reads as follows:—

Salisbury Plains,
Oct. 19th, 1914.

Dear Mother,—

"I have received no mail since Sept. 26th, and that was from Agnes Meek. I hope you got the card I sent you before going on board the Megantic.

We left Valcartier on Sept. 26th, and arrived in England on Oct. 12th. We had a splendid trip. Saw a few whales and porpoises. I wasn't seasick at all, but I got a little sick from the vaccination.

There was lots of excitement when we left Canada, though it was kept quiet. There were 26 ocean liners, 4 cruisers and 2 dreadnoughts in sight all the way over. We had some fun on the way over. Ocean liners mistook us for a German fleet and would make tracks. Then the cruisers would chase them to find out their business.

We arrived at Plymouth Harbor—such a pretty harbor too. You could see lovely stone barracks. The town is full of Regulars and Jack Tars. They could not do enough for us.

We are now encamped on Salisbury Plains. Yesterday was Sunday and some of us stole out on an auto to Salisbury City, twenty miles away. Here the girls and citizens treated us like kings. The girls are not hard to get acquainted with. I am writing to six different ones now.

The country is very picturesque. No fences. All lovely hedges and old-fashioned houses with thatched roofs. There are lots of villages about in every direction.

We are having a fairly good time but are drilled hard. There were three aeroplanes sailing about today watching for German aeroplanes. The war seems to be going satisfactorily for us. We do not expect to see Germany before March. We were reviewed by Lord Roberts, General Alderson and Col. Sam. Hughes today.

To-morrow Meredith, Scotty Johnson and I are going to town for the day. When I get my pass I am going to London, Glasgow, Gloucester and Paisley with Scotty. The latter place is his home town. We get off for a week.

It has been raining incessantly since we arrived. They blame it on the heavy artillery fire at the targets. I am just getting used to the English way, such as money, habits and way of speaking. Moore is getting along fine. The mail the boys are getting now is dated Sept. 25th.

How is everybody getting along? Tell them all to write. Hope you are feeling the very best. I am waiting for a letter.

Yours with lots of love,
HERB.

EVEN IN RUSSIA

Sale of Vodka, the National Drink, Is Prohibited.

To the Editor:—

Russia has prohibited the sale of Vodka, their national drink, this to continue even after the war and visitors say that there is such a change that the country is hardly recognizable. Peasants, who before the war had fallen into hopeless indolence and depravity, have already become self-respecting citizens. The effect on character is already visible in neatly brushed clothes instead of the former ragged and slovenly attire. Huts which were dilapidated are now repaired and improved.

Society has become more orderly and the peasants indulge in wholesome amusements. They now save 55 per cent. of their wages which was formerly spent for drink and their earning power has been increased through sobriety. This extra money is now spent for necessities and comforts. This startling regeneration of the peasantry is, in the opinion of the Russian authorities, likely to have an important effect on the social and economic conditions of all Russia.

Why cannot we have a similar blessing? Are we not badly in need of it?

RUSSELL CHAMPIONED.

A Brampton Disciple Asks Space for a Word of Appreciation.

Dear Editor:

Learning that you are printing in your paper articles by Rev. Dr. Ross against Pastor Russell, I take this opportunity to ask for a little space for a reply and my personal testimony.

As for my part I can truthfully say that I for one am very thankful to Pastor Russell and his books for what they have done for me in helping me to the light of present truth on the Bible and I think that all those who read his books and compare them with the Bible without prejudice in their minds, will receive a blessing. He will see the true character of God and His Son as never before. He will have a better appreciation of the Bible and will begin to love God and His Word more and more, and not only that but he will begin to think more of his fellowmen, and want to pass the cup of refreshment to some one else.

I am sure that is no other purpose that inspires Pastor Russell to be so busy in dispensing the truth at the present time, and I think if Rev. Mr. Ross was just as zealous in the good work of sending forth the message of Good Tidings to all people he would not have time to find fault with Pastor Russell's domestic affairs.

The mission of every ambassador of Christ's is to preach the Good Tidings, or Gospel, not to try and take a brother's good name. Shakespeare said "He who steals my purse steals trash, but he who takes my good name taketh that which enricheth him not and maketh me poor indeed." As for Pastor Russell not having a knowledge of the dead languages and of Greek and Hebrew, he has enough to serve his purpose in rightly divining the Word of Truth. We all can get enough for that purpose by purchasing either Young's or Strong's Bible Encyclopedia or other references, which are good to aid in Bible study. It is not necessary for any one to serve 6 or 7 years in a Theological Seminary to learn Greek or Hebrew in order to understand the Bible. In fact so much learning and letters to one's name would have a tendency to make us proud and not the humble teachable attitude which we must have to receive a knowledge of God's Plan. From this we learn that when Jesus was choosing his apostles, many of them were unlearned men, some poor fishermen. God's Word tells us not many wise, learned, rich or great will inherit the Kingdom; just those who are willing to accept it on God's terms. As the Apostle says, "Present your bodies a living sacrifice wholy acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service."

I remain, sincerely yours,
S. A. STUMP.

RUSSELL CONTROVERSY

Brief and Suggestive Communication from a Mono Centre Subscriber.

The Banner has received the following brief and pointed contribution to the Russell controversy:—

Mono Centre, Nov. 14, 1914.

Editor of The Banner,

Dear Sir,—

Would you be so kind as to insert the following and oblige:—

If the Rev. J. J. Ross and his colleagues were trying to advise the people in general to refrain from curtailing their families it would be far better than to be checking Pastor Russell for illegally trying to multiply and replenish the earth.

Yours most respectfully,
R. McCUTCHEON.

JOHN HACKETT DEAD

Hockley Loses One of Its Oldest Citizens.

Hockley village lost one of its oldest residents on Friday last in the person of Mr. John Hackett, who ran a general store in the village for 35 years. Deceased was 78 years of age and had been in failing health for four or five years. The late Mr. Hackett was a native of Tyrone, Ireland, and came to Canada when about 16 years of age. He first embarked in business as a general merchant in Campbell's Cross, in Peel county, moving from that place to Hockley over 35 years ago. He continued in business in Hockley until five years ago, when poor health compelled him to relinquish the cares and responsibilities of mercantile life. Exactly 52 years prior to the day of his death he was married to Miss Eliza Anderson, a daughter of the late Joseph Anderson, of Six Mile Cross, Tyrone County. He is survived by his widow and a family of six sons and daughters. These are Mrs. G. D. Buchanan, of Primrose; Mrs. J. G. Walker and Miss Ella Hackett, of Winnipeg; Dr. Jos. Hackett, of Hartney, Man.; Dr. J. T. Hackett, of Weston, Ont., and Miss Maggie Hackett at home. The late Mr. Hackett was an active, energetic man, sound in his judgment and successful in business. He was public spirited and took an active interest in municipal and general politics. He was a staunch Conservative of the John A. Macdonald school. Religiously he was connected with the Methodist Church and was a member of the Orange and Chosen Friends Societies. Thos. Hackett, Hockley, and William Hackett, Petrolea, are the surviving brothers. In spite of the cold, stormy day there was a large attendance at the funeral, which was held to Wesley Church Cemetery on the Mono Adjala townline on Tuesday afternoon. The remains were interred with full Orange honors and there was an imposing turnout of the members of the Order. Rev. J. W. Dudgeon, of Rosemont, and Rev. C. A. Belfry, of Tottenham, conducted the services. The pallbearers were Messrs. Wm. Laverty, R. J. Moffatt, John B. Lindsay, Wm. McFarlane, Geo. Mills and Wm. Fleming.

John Miles' Death.

John Miles passed away on Friday at the home of his nephew, Mr. Wm. Prior, West Broadway, at the age of 73 years. Deceased, who was unmarried, had made his home with Mr. Prior since Thanksgiving. Up to that time he had lived with Mr. and Mrs. John Prior, of Jessopville. He was a brother of Mrs. Prior. The funeral was held to Greenwood Cemetery on Sunday afternoon. Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas conducting services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. Geo. and T. Hepton, James Hayes, M. Varcoe, Jas. Creary and J. A. Bruce.

Miss Galbraith's Death.

Miss Lizzannie Galbraith, a daughter of the late Robert Galbraith, of Ellesmere, Ont., died at her home at Nanton, Alta., on Sunday, Nov. 8th, from heart collapse following an illness from fever. Her brother, Mr. A. C. Galbraith, and a sister accompanied the remains east, the funeral taking place from her mother's home at Ellesmere on Saturday. Miss Galbraith was a sister of Mr. R. J. Galbraith, of Mono, and a niece of Mr. John Harshaw, of the American hotel.

Mrs. Donald M. Robertson.

Mrs. Donald M. Robertson, who was one of the earliest residents of the Humber district, died at her residence "Chateau Grange" John St., Toronto, on Sunday, in her 80th year. Deceased lady was born in 1835 at Lambton Mills, then owned by her father, the late Wm. Fallis, who, in the rebellion of 1837, captained the company of militia that guarded the Bank of Toronto. For many years the late Mrs. Robertson was a resident of Grey county, her parents having moved to Meaford district with their family in 1848. During this period of her life she shared in most of the trials and hardships incident to pioneer life in rural Ontario. She is survived by two sisters and a family of four sons and three daughters. The sons and daughters are:—James S., Orangeville; William N., Toronto; Hector, Chicago; Lou D., Detroit; Mrs. T. L. Lowry, Mrs. Alex. Anderson and Mrs. W. Bennett, of Toronto. The funeral was held to Humberside Cemetery on Tuesday forenoon.

Mrs. Joseph Davis

The death of Mrs. Mary Ann Davis, widow of the late Joseph Davis, took place at the home of her son, Mr. Joseph Davis, lot 24, con. 5, west, Caledon, on Saturday. Deceased lady had reached the ripe age of 82 years, 58 of which were spent on the farm where she died. Born in Tyrone County, Ireland, in 1832, the late Mrs. Davis came to Canada with her parents in 1845. The family settled in Erin Township, where she resided until her removal to Caledon with her husband in 1856. Mr. Davis died 22 years ago. Deceased was a woman of many excellent parts and her death will be keenly regretted by many old friends and the people of the neighborhood amongst whom she was held in high esteem. She is survived by a family of two sons and four daughters. The former are Mr. Chas. Davis, V.S., of Hillsburg, and Mr. Joseph Davis on the homestead. The daughters are, Mrs. Alex. Smith, of Berlin, Miss Sophia Davis at home, Mrs. A. G. Patterson, of Alton, and Mrs. John Brooks, of Erin. The late John Davis, O.L.S., who died about seven years ago from the effects of an accident, was the oldest member of the family. Mrs. Chas. Moll and Mrs. Jas. Cunningham, of Galt, are the surviving sisters. There was a large attendance of relatives and neighbors at the funeral, which was held to Alton cemetery at 2.30 o'clock on Monday afternoon. The pallbearers were Messrs. William Moore, of Brampton, William and John Cunningham, of Galt, Richard Medley, of Erin, J. W. Smith, of Berlin, and James Hilliard, of Alton.

FIVE TERRIBLE DAYS.

A member of the Ambulance Corps serving with the French army near Verdun writes:

"I have gone through five terrible days, and I do not know how it is that I am still alive. There are things in our corps that baffle description.

"Waiting all day long in more or less sheltered positions is already sad enough; with the noise of rifle fire and the roaring of the guns we cannot but constantly think of the poor fellows who are being hit.

"The din of the battle grows less, the night draws on, the moment has now come for us to do our task. With acetylene lamps to light us, we cross the battlefield in all directions, and pick up the wounded. As to the dead, alas! how numerous they are! We find them petrified in their last attitude in their last elan. And the crying and moaning of the wounded scattered in the cornfields, and among the damp meadows! I know of nothing more poignant than that. The bullets nearly always go right through. Wounds in the chest or in the abdomen are almost certainly mortal. Fortunately, such wounds are comparatively few in number."

A DREAM AND A LETTER.

Maybe Merely a Coincidence, Maybe a Spirit Message.

The following story of a dream was told to a correspondent by an acquaintance who is about as stolid and unimaginative a man as one could meet:

He had a friend of whom he had lost sight of for some time. This friend committed suicide and one night, soon after he had done so, the unimaginative man dreamed that he was walking along a street after dusk when the bust of the dead man appeared to him and requested him to follow it. He did so, and it led him to a house, the door of which was open, and then up some stairs to a room where there was a table on which lay a number of books, all of which were lying open.

The dead man had been a great reader and therefore there was nothing unusual in the spectacle of a great many books in his room. The bust turned to the unimaginative man and begged him to turn over a page of each book so that it might continue to read. He did so, and he remembers that the bust became petulant when he turned over two pages in mistake. When all the pages were turned the bust appeared to be happy.

The dreamer awoke and told his wife about it. When he went down to breakfast he found a letter lying on the table bearing the postmark of a town of which he had no knowledge other than its name. He had never been there, nor, so far as he was aware, had the dead man, nor had he any friends or relatives in the town. The only relative of the dead man of whom he had any knowledge lived in another city.

When he opened the envelope he found inside it a small photograph of the dead man, showing his bust only. There was not any letter inclosed with it, nor anything to denote by whom it had been sent, and to this day he does not know from whom he received it.—Manchester Guardian.

HOMES OF THE NAVAJOS.

Stuffy Winter Hogans and Light and Airy Summer "Cottages."

The Navajos are the least gregarious of native American tribes, never congregating in towns and villages and never forming permanent communities. Their homes, called hogans, are mere hovels, built of stones or the trunks and limbs of trees, with rounded roofs thickly covered with earth. A smoke vent in the roof and a doorway in the side are the only means of ventilation. In cold weather these cavelike structures are kept tightly closed, so that no one but an Indian could live in them at all.

But when springtime comes the Navajo squaw constructs a summer cottage, sometimes consisting of no more than a windbreak of sagebrush around a circular clear space. Sometimes the summer hogan is a shady bower under a desert cedar tree, with leafy branches piled around as a measure of protection against winds and sandstorms. Sometimes it is a shelter formed by the utilization of old pieces of canvas, sheet iron and other cast away material picked up around the refuse dumps of the railroad towns. In any event, the dwellers in the summer hogans are practically in the open all the time. Fresh air is never for a moment excluded.—Christian Herald.

NAILS IN STONE WALLS.

Easy Method of Placing Them So They Will Remain Firm.

Few women know how to drive a nail into a brick wall, and yet it is what they often need to do for themselves if there is no man about.

The following method is easy and has been found entirely satisfactory: Having decided upon the exact spot into which the nail is desired to be driven, which must be in the plaster between the bricks, provide yourself with a hammer and screwdriver. With these tools commence working out the hard plaster by tapping the handle of the screwdriver. As the plaster turns to dust it must be blown or dusted out so that the size of the hole may be seen.

When a space about one inch long and nearly one inch deep has been worked out get a small piece of wood about the same size and with the hammer wedge it tightly into the space. When it seems firm take the nail and drive it into the wood. It will go in nicely, without bending, and remain firm an indefinite length of time. This same method was used at one time when it was decided to hang a hammock between the fence and the wall, with the exception that the hole was dug out a little longer and deeper than for an ordinary nail.—Minneapolis Journal.

Homemade Barometer.

Those who love experimentation may try the following method of making a cheap barometer practiced in France: Take eight grams of pulverized camphor, four grams of pulverized nitrate of potassium, two grams of pulverized nitrate of ammonia add dissolve in sixty grams of alcohol. Put the whole in a long, slender bottle closed at the top with a piece of bladder containing a pinhole to admit the air. When rain is coming the solid particles will tend gradually to mount, little star crystals forming in the liquid, which otherwise remains clear. If high winds are approaching the liquid will become thick, as if fermenting, while a film of solid particles forms on the surface. During fair weather the liquid will remain clear and the solid particles will rest at the bottom.

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUE. Feb. 3rd. 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2½ years, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take "Fruit-a-tives" for they are the medicine that cures".

MAGLOIRE PAQUIN

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

EUGENIA FALLS.

Description of Immense Development Work Now in Progress.

It is difficult to convey to any one who has not seen it, even a slight idea of the immense development work which is at present in full blast at Eugenia, that of developing the power on the Beaver River, which will generate, within a few months' time, 4,000 horse-power, and will furnish light and power to Owen Sound and many of the smaller towns and villages of Grey, as well as to hundreds of farms in the county. An army of five hundred men is working night and day on the "job," as the men term it, every man in his appointed place and doing his part towards the completion of the vast undertaking. As soon as one gang stops work at six o'clock in the evening, a fresh gang goes on, and thus the work progresses continually day and night. From the power plant of the Georgian Bay Power Co. just above Eugenia Falls and also from a small dynamo which has been temporarily installed near the work on the main dam, the whole scene of operations is illuminated as soon as darkness falls, and the scene night and day is one of bustle and activity.

The Sun had an opportunity of visiting the spot where Owen Sound's future light and power will be generated. The first things noticed on reaching Eugenia are the tents and bunk houses where the men live, which are scattered here and there along the bank of the river east of the village. Then a little further up is the main dam which runs north and south across the river valley for over a quarter of a mile, or to be exact 2,000 feet, until it strikes high level on either side. The work on this dam is being pushed rapidly ahead, and it is the aim of the contractors to complete the concrete work before the frost becomes too severe. About a month and a half, The Sun was informed, will see the completion of this great concrete dam. At the highest point, it will be about fifty feet, with a concrete foundation set about fifteen feet below the rock level in solid rock. The engineers are taking no chances on leakage and have laid the foundation of the dam firm and sure. The dam is reinforced with heavy steel bars imbedded in the concrete and will be strengthened by tons of stones which are being piled against it on the lower side.

The gravel that is being used is being taken from the river bank just above the dam and the process from the time it is dug out by a steam shovel until it goes into the wall, is interesting to watch. The gravel is first lifted and is swung on a crane into a washing machine where all the clay is thoroughly washed out. It is then dumped into small handcars where it is dumped into a mixer. Here it is thoroughly mixed with cement and the wet concrete is then run into large buckets which are picked up by means of cables operated by another engine at the south end, and carried to any spot where the concrete is desired and emptied there. The cable wires extend the entire length of the wall, and by telegraphic communication, the operator on the left signals to the operator of the cables. Every man is busy, each at his particular job, while here and there the engineers in charge of the work, all young men, hustle to and fro directing the operations. Every detail of the work runs along smoothly and without a hitch. Every man knows what he is supposed to do and he does it. The engineer in charge of the work is Mr. Watts, who is a busy man.

When the water is backed up, which will be some time this fall, the lake thus formed will cover an area of 1,700 acres. The Hydro-Electric Commission have purchased all the land, which will be flooded by backing up the water. The barns, houses and fences must be moved out of the area to be flooded. Along the banks of the river, which will be flooded, the timber is being cut, and if the weather keeps dry and fine, the brush will be burned before the land is flooded. Otherwise it will have to be hauled away.

From the northeast end of the large reservoir, which will be formed when the water is backed up by the main dam, a canal is being cut to carry the water to number two dam, where it will enter the pipes that will carry it to the power house in the valley below the falls. This work is being pushed ahead rapidly and a gang of men are busily engaged on the erection of the power house. This will be a two-storey brick building with concrete foundation. Two turbines will be installed and the water will have a drop of about 550 feet through a 52 inch steel pipe. From here the power transmission lines will start which will carry the energy generated to Owen Sound. The Sun was informed that it was the intention to have the roof on the building before the snow falls.

One of the engineers on the work said they hoped to turn the "juice" into Owen Sound next spring, or early in the summer, but there is a great deal to be done yet, and no one can say definitely when the power will reach here. The men in charge are making every day count now, though, and the fine weather of the last few weeks has been very favorable for the operations at Eugenia. While, as was said before, there is still a great amount of work to be done, the construction work already completed has reached a stage where it is possible to form some idea of the immensity of the project.—Owen Sound Sun.

Wm. Johnston, a highly respected resident of St. Vincent township, passed away a few days ago aged 77 years.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUM COLDS

The fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm while the next is wet and cold, and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friends in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent cold or if cold does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly cure it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Reading Music.

The literary man, writes a correspondent, may very well, when he is lying on his back, console himself with literature. But what is the scientific man, with no particular interest in literature, to do? A certain professor of my acquaintance once got through a month of painful convalescence by the aid of another kind of reading. He read through the scores of his favorite composers. He had no ear for the rhythms of literature, but a fine ear for the rhythms of music, and he assured me that he heard the music as he read the scores. He said that during that month he really came to understand Beethoven and that no performance of his work ever satisfied him afterward.—London Spectator.

A Bit of Blarney.

An Irishman who was begging in the street was asked by a lady how it was that such a fine, strong man as he should be asking for alms. With native blarney he replied:

"Lady, begging is the only profession I know in which a gentleman can address a beautiful woman without having an introduction."

The remark was quite profitable.—London Answers.

Moss Bread.

Along the shores of the Columbia river a kind of bread is made by the Indians from a moss that grows on the spruce fir tree. This moss is prepared by placing it in heaps, sprinkling it with water and permitting it to ferment. Then it is rolled into balls as big as a man's head, and these are baked in pits.

British Army War Song Of Troops in France.

(Published by request.)

"It's a long way to Tipperary" has become the marching song of the British Army. Everywhere on the march it is whistled or sung.

Up to mighty London came an Irishman one day,
As the streets are paved with gold, sure every one was gay;
Singing songs of Piccadilly, Strand and Leicester Square,
Till Paddy got excited, then he shouted to them there:

CHORUS.

It's a long way to Tipperary,
It's a long way to go;
It's a long way to Tipperary,
To the sweetest girl I know.
Good-bye Piccadilly, farewell Leicester Square;
It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
But my heart's right there.

Paddy wrote a letter to his Irish Molly O'
Saying: "Should you not receive it, write and let me know;
If I make mistakes in spelling, Molly dear," said he,
"Remember, it's the pen that's bad, don't lay the blame on me."

CHORUS.

Molly wrote a neat reply to Irish Paddy O'
Saying: "Mike Maloney wants to marry me and so
Leave the Strand and Piccadilly or you'll be to blame
For love has fairly drove me silly, hoping you're the same."

CHORUS.

The following sequel to the popular song, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," appeared in the Civilian, a publication of the Dominion Civil Service:

Back to Tipperary started Paddy on the run,
But when half way he heard them say: "The fighting has begun.
He wrote to Molly, saying "Although I love you so,
My country's callin', darlin'; as I'm Irish I must go."

CHORUS.

Now Paddy's in the trenches, fightin' like a lion bold,
And Irish Molly's waitin', wid a heart as true as gold,
But when the Kaiser's down and out and Belgium's free again,
He'll start for Tipperary's town a singin' this refrain:

CHORUS.

Found a Friend in Dr. Chase

Mrs. Chas. Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes:—"I feel it my duty to tell you what a great friend Dr. Chase's medicines have been to myself and family. I cannot praise his medicines too highly, and Dr. Chase's name is a household word in our home. Well, quite a number of years ago I sent to you for a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment for protruding piles, and, having used the sample and found relief, I sent to a neighboring town for four boxes, and I am completely cured.

"I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for constipation, and, after using them, I am completely cured of this dreadful disease. I am the mother of ten children, of whom nine are living, and when seven of my children were all very bad with whooping cough, caught in the middle of a severe winter, I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and they were all cured before the winter was over, and now we are never without Dr. Chase's medicines in our home, and I recommend them to all."

THE GUNNER AND THE BABY.

When a Russian artilleryman, wounded in the Lomberg battle, was brought to the hospital at Kieff, he carried, to the astonishment of the nurses, a baby girl of eighteen months. It was then that they learned of one of the most heroic acts in the annals of war. The man's battery had been all but pulverized by the enemy, and at last had been ordered to retire. As the soldiers sullenly retreated the artilleryman saw a baby girl creeping from the doorway of one of the houses of the village into the path of the battery. Amid a rain of shell and shrapnel the brave fellow went to the baby's rescue, whilst his comrades gave him up as lost. As he reached the child a shrapnel shell burst overhead, and, throwing himself down, the man shielded the child's body with his own. One bullet passed through his back, injuring him so badly that he could not regain his feet. Two of his comrades immediately went to his assistance, and carried him, with his little protege, to the battery, whence they were removed to the hospital. All three men have received the cross of St. George for their bravery.

TRAPPING THE SPIES.

There is a humorous element in the story of how a couple of German spies were trapped at Soissons. It is a favorite trick of the Germans to dress up as women and, speaking French, get into the British lines. Two of these, who had been overheard asking some of our soldiers in English what they got to eat, aroused the suspicions of a sergeant. "I nipped across quick to say something to one of our officers," he says. "He heard, came across behind the two peasant women, got one neck in each hand and just whacked their heads together before they knew it. He pretty well stunned them, and then we had 'em into brigade headquarters. They turned out to be two German men, and I think it was a bullet for each soon afterwards."

PULLING TOGETHER.

The New Spirit in Farming That Is Taking the Irk Out of Work.

By Frank G. Moorhead in The Country Gentleman.

Because a fretting baby, tossing fitfully on a bed of pain at a time when Kansas was scourged with grasshoppers, heat and drought as never before, wailed incessantly and would not be comforted in the stifling heat of the farm home, the idea was born of neighborhood ice clubs that would supply a common need with little individual effort.

Had you visited either Cherokee or Labette County, Kansas, the latter part of that summer you would have encountered, as you drove out of town, a farm wagon toiling laboriously under the tropical sun, dripping moisture at every creak and bump, loaded to the guards with cakes of ice carefully covered with a heavy tarpaulin.

No common iceman drove the wagon, but a prosperous farmer, giving one day out of every fortnight to the neighborhood with a long-withheld necessity. It did not matter whether he owned only an eighty or a whole section, whether he drove to town on ordinary occasions behind slow-going horses or spun swiftly in a six-cylinder motor car, one and all joined in the campaign to bring a city comfort into a stricken country.

The farmers needed ice—needed it, because of the long-protracted drought, as never before. Farm ice houses were few and far between. In the near-by town the supply was plentiful. But the fifty or hundred pound chunk that might easily be brought home on the weekly town trip would not last more than a day or two at best; daily trips were out of the question.

So neighborhood clubs were formed, usually consisting of twelve or fifteen families, the members taking turns driving into town, securing a wagonload of ice, and delivering it, day after day, to all the fellow members. With a dozen families this meant only one trip to town in two weeks for each member; it meant, moreover, a fresh supply of life-comforting and often life-sustaining ice every day, at the reasonable price of ten cents a hundred pounds. By the time the summer had come to a close, after its long and wearying siege of heat, the ice clubs were established for every other summer to come.

Robbing the Farm of Isolation.

It was not only ice, however, that these Kansas farmers were hauling. They were hauling a gospel of communistic get-together cheer that is bound to go far toward revolutionizing farming within the next few years. Already the new spirit is manifest in various ways, on every hand robbing farm life of its loneliness and isolation, taking the irk out of farm work. If the neighborhood ice clubs of Kansas were all, encouragement would still be there. But they are simply the first chapter in a story the finis of which has not yet been written.

Take the case for instance—and it's pretty typical too—of half a dozen neighborhood farmers in Valley County, Nebraska. They own a dozen or more silos, eight of them with an estimated capacity of from one hundred and thirty-five to two hundred tons each, four of them with a total capacity of one hundred and seventy-five tons. In the yesterday of farming each man would have hauled his fodder to the cutter, run it through, blown it into the silo, watered it and sealed up the silo all by himself; and he would have learned by bitter experience whether or not he was doing everything right. Consider the differences between such procedure and that of the half dozen Nebraska farmers.

A week or so before the proper cutting season the half dozen men get together. They own a cutter, with thirty feet blower and distributing pipe, in common. This is stored from one season to another in charge of one of the number, and he is paid twenty-five cents an hour for whatever time he spends repairing the mechanism, together with any expense incurred for oils and blacksmithing.

At the preliminary conference of these farmers one of the number is deputized to secure a thresher, with his engine, to run the cutter; others are selected for various posts in the work—feeding the cutter, tramping in the silo, hauling from the field, and so on. The entire outfit moves from one farm to another until the entire silage supply for the half dozen has been cut, stored and sealed; whereupon the expense is divided, according to the amount of the work, and the machinery is stored away for another year. Net result: Economy in expense, efficiency in service, companionship in hard work.

There's a good deal of a knack in cutting at just the psychological moment—when the kernels are glazed and the lower leaves are browning—in wetting down with just the right amount of water, correctly distributed, and in a hundred and one things that go to make silage either a success or a failure. When one man has handled one end of the work for half a dozen years he becomes proficient at his specialty and better results are secured than by having one man attempt it all alone—to say nothing of the Tom Sawyer pleasure of watching the other fellows do the work you might otherwise be doing all by yourself.

A far more spectacular instance of the new get-together spirit is found in good-roads "bees." When the governor of Missouri issued his call for the first state-wide road bee he probably had in mind the actual, tangible value of the work to be done. It was this phase of the subject upon which the various overseers congratulated themselves in their district and county reports: Two hundred miles of new road built in one day; several hundred miles of old road repaired; three hundred volunteers at work in Jackson County alone.

But the chief value of the road bee lay not so much in the number of rocks disturbed from their long resting places, the number of thank-you-ma'ams removed, not the number of culvertt repaired. It lay in the getting together of a quarter of a million Missourians, mainly farmers, on a state-wide holiday-picnic, when the women folks came out to the roadway carrying baskets piled high with fried chicken and doughnuts, while out from the wagon boxes were hauled cider jugs, the contents of which washed down the drumsticks and white meat until a quarter of a million Missourians were ready to resume pick and shovel and proceed with the work of having a good time while they performed a hard and much-needed task.

Perhaps the example was first set—who can say with exactitude?— by the Iowa farmers who, a few years ago, rallied to the rescue of the good name of the state and marched out, at daybreak of a bright summer day, to drag a roadway clear across the state, 350 miles, in order that the Glidden automobile tourists might not remember Iowa as the state of bad roads.

The publicity given that state highway built by farmers alone in a single day may have inspired the Missourians to show the rest of the world. Whatever the inspiration, they quit their fields and farms by the thousand and swarmed the public road for two whole days. Men who would turn up their noses at a farm machine upon which farm machine machine upon which they cannot sit at ease while operating it, wielded pick and ax under the burning August sun and worked far harder than any two-dollar-a-day section hand—all because of the inspiration of fellowship, the shoulder rubbing of congenial spirits, the enthusiasm of novelty.

A Pest Poisoning Party.

The campaign thus inaugurated by Missouri farmers spread to nearby and even to far-distant states and it was not long before Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas, and Kentucky had similar road-building bees, the farmers making holiday out of the time they spent together improving the highways to town and near-by farms. In Arkansas fully 75,000 men turned out—twenty women, headed by a noble "mother in Israel" seventy years old, enlisted among the volunteers of Little Rock—and built 300 miles of road before the shades of night took them, reluctant, from their self-imposed task.

It was the same spirit of fellowship that prompted the governor of Kansas to set apart a certain week when all farmers should get together on a pond building bee; that prompted the governors of Iowa and Minnesota to order seed-corn celebrations, setting apart special weeks when all farmers should go out into their fields to select the best ears of seed corn, to exchange notes over the division fences or roads and, by impressing upon all the idea that thousands upon thousands were engaged in a like work at the same time, to remove much of the monotony and isolation of individual effort.

Perhaps no example of this new spirit in farming bears closer relation to a military manoeuvre or was productive of greater financial results than the campaign that thousands of Kansas farmers carried on against the destructive grasshopper. Armed with from fifty to one hundred pounds of poisoned bran to the man, thousands of farmers in the Sunflower State set out at daybreak in the most systematic campaign ever waged against the pest that had ravished orchards and cornfields and stripped every growing thing bare. Before night fell more than 170 tons of poisoned bran had been spread over the fields of one county alone, while carloads of the mixture had disappeared as though by magic, seized avidly by the farmers driven well-nigh to distraction by the most serious invasion of grasshoppers since 1874.

Individually the task was herculean, was impossible; jointly it was not only possible but pleasant. Bright and early on the appointed day thousands of farmers started through their fields, building barricades of poisoned bran or scattering it broadcast. There were hoppers to the right of them, hoppers to the left of them, hoppers all round them. But they advanced steadily, with grim determination in their hearts and poisoned bran in their hands.

By the end of the second day not only had the greater part of th pests been exterminated, but the situation had been cleared through the destruction of millions of females just at the breeding season. So successfully had the hoppers succumbed to the poison — sometimes immediately; more often, however, in twenty-four to forty-eight hours—that one farmer, living near Burdett, gathered up 119 bushels of dead hoppers, the greater part of which he dried, sacked and stored away for chicken feed for winter use.

Twenty-five farmers driving to town on road drags, to be rewarded for their trip and trouble with presents of merchandise from practically all the stores in town, started a movement in Stuart, Iowa, that bids fair to go a long way toward solving the road problem that was so vexatious in the old days, and furnishes still another striking example of the new agricultural spirit.

As soon as each dragger arrived he was escorted to the Commercial Club, given a hearty welcome, a market basket and a bunch of certificates exchangeable for various articles of merchandise at the various stores, to a total value of four or five dollars.

Stuart was a good village of 2000 population before Road Drag Day; it is a far better town now, for there is a friendly, get-together spirit prevailing between merchants and farmers that was never known before, and men are driving into Stuart now when they formerly went to Audubon, Guthrie Centre and even Atlantic—thirty miles distant. For every dollar Stuart invested it bids fair to reap ten in return. Yet, looked at disinterestedly, it is only an ordinary country town, doing something for itself and its farmer patrons that any other town can do if it has a mind to.

Thus the instances of the get-together spirit multiply and spread over widely separated geozraphical sections. It is not that there is new work to be done. Road building and dragging, ice hauling, seed-corn picking, pond digging were all known and practiced years and years ago. The point is this:

They were practiced individually, in isolation, without any of the spirit of fun and of play that keeps Jack from becoming a dull boy and Jack's father from becoming a work-stupid man.

Tom Sawyer did not invent fence whitewashing, but the story of how he robbed fence whitewashing of its hard aspects and made it take on all the festive joys of a three ring circus by getting his playmates to do it together, in a spirit of rivalry and fraternity, is a classic that must have been read in the boyhood of the men who are instilling identically the same spirit into the gentle art of wrestling a living, to say nothing of a tidy bank balance, from the soil.

GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT"

IRELAND AND GERMANY

Seditious Placards at Edenderk.

On Thursday morning the Nationalist districts of Edenderk and Old Engine, near Dungannon, were found to be extensively placarded with a printed pamphlet couched in the following terms:

"Ireland has no quarrel with any Continental Power. She is not at war with Germany. England is, and Mr. Redmond has offered England the services of the National Volunteers 'to defend Ireland.' What has Ireland to defend, and whom has she to defend it against? Has she a native Constitution or a National Government to defend? She has not. Both were wrested from her by England. There is no European Power waging war against the people of Ireland. There are two European Powers at war with the people who dominate Ireland from Dublin Castle. The call to the Volunteers 'to defend Ireland' is a call to them to defend the beaurocracy entrenched in that edifice.

"The spectacle of the National Volunteers with the English officers at their head and the Union Jack floating proudly above them 'defending' Ireland for the British Government may appeal to the gushing eyes of West Britonism, but its eyes are not likely to be blessed with the sight of that apotheosis of slavery. If England wins this war she will be more powerful than she has been at any time since 1864, and she will treat the Ireland which kissed the hand that smote her as such an Ireland ought to be treated. If she loses the war and Ireland is foolish enough to identify herself with her, Ireland will deservedly share in her punishment.

"If the Irish Volunteers are to defend Ireland they must defend it for Ireland under Ireland's flag and under Irish officers. Otherwise they will only help to perpetuate the enslavement of their country. In this hour the counsels of cowardice and stupidity are being proffered as the currency of patriotism, and a base attempt is made by our slavish Press to evoke in Ireland not a pro-Irish but an anti-German sentiment. Germany is nothing to us in herself, but she is not our enemy. Our blood and our miseries are not upon her head. But who can forbear admiration at the spectacle of the Germanic people whom England has ringed round with enemies standing alone, undaunted, and defiant against a world in arms? If they fall they will fall as nobly as ever a people fell, and we, the Celts, may not forbear to honor a race that knew how to live and how to die as men. We, too, in Ireland were once men. Let us be men again and agree to defend our country for ourselves. Let us be slaves and offer to defend it for foreigners, and he will mock God who hereafter prays to Him to save Ireland."

The police have been informed of the matter and are making investigation.

Germany would not hesitate to pay a high price for a writer to promulgate sentiments such as the above. It was reported that she offered the chauffeur of King Albert of Belgium $250,000 to treacherously drive the royal car to the German lines so that the King might be captured. (The King ordered his chauffeur to stop and as he did not obey, the driver was shot.) No doubt Germany paid a good sum to the "guide" who led the Belgian troops and British marines into Holland a few weeks ago, and to the spy who delivered Antwerp to them. Bret Harte used to write, "For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain the heathen Chinee is peculiar." But the heathen Chinee is not comparable to the German spy.—Orange Sentinel.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

Report of Annual Meeting on Friday Last

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society of Dufferin County was held in the Public Library Auditorium at 2 o'clock last Friday afternoon. In the absence of the President, Rev. W. M. Morris occupied the chair. The principal business was receiving the Report of the Society's Agent, Mr. C. W. Norton, of Brampton, and the election of officers for the ensuing year. The Agent's report read as follows :—

To the Board of Management of Dufferin County Children's Aid Society.

Ladies and Gentlemen :

Much useful work for children was undertaken during the few months I have had the honor of acting as your Inspector. The Society has much to be thankful for. Under its fostering care and restraining influence many a boy and girl have been given a better and brighter outlook on life's journey, and an excellent foundation laid for future usefulness and good citizenship.

The great event of the year was the amalgamation of the three Societies, Peel, Halton and Dufferin, and the decision of the Executive Committee to have a combined Shelter in Brampton.

Owing to the lack of accommodation many children have not been removed from evil surroundings, but it is expected shortly that all will be accommodated and a large number of boys and girls will have reason to feel thankful for the work of the Children's Aid Society in Dufferin.

In order to be brief I have condensed my report, which is as follows :—Placed in foster homes, 2 ; Left with parents on probation, 2 ; Personal interviews, 45 ; Complaints received, 18 ; Attendance at Court, 4 ; Application for children, 7 ; Warnings given, 15.

The work of this Society has been carried out with energy and faithfulness on the part of the officers. We should be greatly thankful to our worthy Secretary, Rev. G. W. Tebbs, who has worked energetically, inspiring all to do their utmost in the work in which his wife and himself have had so many years experience. We have also a true and faithful worker in Mr. L. C. A. Strother, who has given so generously to this Society of time and money.

In reading the magazines one sometimes gets the impression that all the social problems of the day are confined in the large cities. That, in fact, is the idea that people in many of the smaller places have. They sympathize warmly with the children of the slums. They hear of the Children's Aid Society's movement in Brampton, Halton, and Orangeville, but the often fail to realize that they have the same conditions and need the same remedies at home.

There is no religious agency or enterprise greater in results or nobler in aim that the Children's Aid Society—a charity that strikes at the cause of a great deal of social evil, great and small. If we do not aim at and succeed in preventing the apprenticeship to vice and immorality involved in the neglect of, and cruelty to children, we shall be contributing to the demoralization of society, and the deterioration of our citizenship. Prevention is always better and easier than cure. If, by rescuing from vice or cruel environment in ill-kept homes or at the hands of cruel parents or guardians, we can save them from lives of vice and shame, we shall be doing much more than we can do in futile attempts to combat the consequences of the manifestations of vice or immorality.

There are in this very county, known to many, instances where children have been rescued from homes of vice and squalor have become useful and virtuous members of society, who but for the intervention of the Children's Aid Society would have inevitably become vicious or immoral and utterly reprobate ; for, trained in an atmosphere of vice and loose morals, they could not have resisted the influences of example and environment.

It is not only the moral saving of children that is to be taken into account. Saving children from actual cruelty, starvation and ill clothing is something that should touch the hearts of all who have children of their own. Who can better appreciate the conditions, if, in a wild stretch of imagination, they could fancy their own in a similar condition ?

On broader, if not higher grounds, the Children's Aid Society in its influence upon the preservation of the standard of our social and civic life, appeals to our sympathy and assistance. There is need for organization, for vigilance, for intelligent service on the part of all our citizenship. Beginning with the neglected child is beginning at the right place. The Children's Aid Society depends for children are as wax in our hands, and that we must bend their wills to ours whilst they are still babies in arms. If we don't sow the good seed early, we shall reap the whirlwind. Let us awake to a sense of the great duty God Almighty has placed in our hands. Our country looks to us for the future men and women of Canada, and we must face the fact courageously, and realize that we shall alone be to blame for much of the vice and misery. Let us be strict and just, as well as kind, and a day will come when they will rise up and bless us.

its support on the generosity of the people. Therefore, the duty of the public towards it is emphasized.

In closing, on behalf of the Society, I wish to thank the press for its kindness and courtesy, also His Honour, Judge Fisher, Crown Attorney J. L. Island, Magistrates J. Pattullo, Geo. Rutherford, together with many others, who contributed to the success of the year's work.

WOMEN CONTROL

Regina's Municipal Market and Regulate Its Operation

Regina, Nov. 14, 1914—It is not usually expected for women to display their ability in the management of civic affairs, but at Regina the municipal market is now controlled entirely by a women's organization. The Local Council of Women, as they are known, have been endeavoring to reduce the cost of market garden produce and meats, by inducing the farmers to sell their produce direct through the market to the consumer instead of through the medium of merchants. This proved so successful that the Regina city council decided to hand over complete control of the market building to this ladies' organization. Now they have the regulating of the fees, the collecting of the same, and everything in the way of regulating the operation of the market. The farmers are assured that if they ship their garden produce to the Local Council of Women it will be sold under the direction of their organization. It is not even necessary for the farmers to come to the market to sell their own produce. The ladies have experienced no difficulty in securing plenty of volunteers to assist with the work at the market building.

A progressive euchre party will be given in the new club rooms of the Ogoigo Club during the last week of November to aid in the buying of linen for the Hospital. Any donation of linen will be most gratefully received.

Glassford-Wilson

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wilson, Sand Hill, was the scene of a very pleasant event, on Wednesday afternoon, November 11th, when their second youngest daughter, Matilda, was united in marriage to Mr. William E. Glassford, of Caledon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Geo. H. Purchase, pastor of the bride, under an arch of evergreens with white bell. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very charming in a gown of deep ivory satin with pale cream silk shadow lace with pearl trimmings and tulle veil crowned with orange blossoms. She carried a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses and lily of the valley. The wedding march was played by Miss Winnie Vogan, of Caledon. Miss May Glassford, the groom's cousin, sang beautifully a very appropriate solo while the register was being signed. After the ceremony was over, a magnificent repast was served in the dining room where the tables were decorated with pink and white. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome set of mink furs, to the pianiste a gold bracelet and to the soloist a gold brooch. The bride was the recipient of many useful and costly gifts, among which was a cheque for $500 from her father and mother. The bride and groom left on their honeymoon trip in an auto, carrying with them the good wishes of their friends. The bride wore a travelling suit of brown corduroy velvet, trimmed with shot silk and a brown beaver hat with cream plume to match. The happy couple will reside in Caledon. The guests numbered about 100, including friends from Toronto, Dundalk and Orangeville, and were received at the door by Mrs. Hugh Potter, of Caledon, sister of the bride.

RUSSELL'S DOMESTIC LIFE.

Circumstances Which Led His Wife to Sue for Divorce.

Suspicious Transfer of Property to Escape Payment of Alimony to Woman Whom He had Vowed to Love and Cherish.

The story of "Pastor" Russell's domestic life, his experience in the Courts when his wife sued him for alimony and his transfer of property worth $40,000 for the paltry sum of $50 makes suggestive and illuminative reading. Rev. J. J. Ross tells the story as follows :—

We now come to Russell's domestic life. It was such as to make life intolerable to his wife, and to justify her in leaving him and afterwards suing for a limited divorce, which one court granted and a higher one, on appeal, confirmed, and at the same time most severely censuring "Pastor" Russell for his conduct, which the court described as "insulting," "domineering" and "overbearing" to a degree which made life intolerable to a sensitive Christian woman. But Russell swore here that his wife had not divorced him, and that the court had not granted alimony from him. Under fire by Mr. Staunton, he was compelled to confess that the court did divorce him from his wife though not "absolutely" and that the court did grant his wife alimony. Had Mrs. Russell sued for absolute divorce she could not have obtained alimony, which she needed. In the divorce that was granted, neither party have the privilege of re-marrying. A limited divorce which is a divorce from bed and board is just as bad as the absolute divorce, which is a breaking of the marriage tie. In order that my reader may understand this I quote from the charge to the jury by Judge Collier who was on the Bench at that time. He said to the jury : "In this state, one of the causes for divorce is the offering of such indignities to the person of the wife or husband as to render his or her condition intolerable and life burdensome and thereby forcing him or her to withdraw from the society of the wife or husband. That is this case, and it is totally immaterial whether it is a divorce from bed and board or a divorce from the bonds of matrimony, because in both cases the family relation is dissolved and every one is harmed if the law is not complied with. I mention these things because it is my solemn duty to do so, so that you will understand it, and I have no doubt you do."

"With that in view, examine the evidence. This lady must satisfy you, gentlemen, under the libel she has filed, clearly by the strength of the evidence that such personal indignities were put upon her from time to time, not occasionally, but continuously for some period of time, so as to render her condition intolerable and life burdensome and force her to remove from her husband's house.

"You all know, your common sense teaches you that, without a judge telling you—that every little spat between a husband and wife, after living fourteen years together, is not a cause for divorce. Every little disagreement, not spea king sometimes, or being rough, are not causes for divorce, because the marriage relation covers all that. The vows they take, as you know, cover all that. It must be something more than that, it must be such indignities to her person as to cause her to leave her husband because of the indignities cast upon her making her life burdensome and her condition intolerable."

"Now with that definition apply the evidence. Another rule of law is that it must not be partly her fault, it must be all the fault of her husband. You are to pass upon these facts, and you are to judge of the circumstances of these people, their intelligence, their manner of living, their pursuits and everything of that kind. You will judge and say whether these indignities, if they were committed, caused her to feel that her condition was intolerable and her life burdensome and she would have to go away."

"If they did—and I have only mentioned some of them, then she would be entitled to a divorce from bed and board and be entitled to a divorce absolutely if that is true. There is no difference between a divorce from bed and board, and divorce absolutely ; don't get mixed about that. One is just as bad as the other ; it takes the same amount of cause in the one case as in the other."

The divorce was given, and the alimony granted Mrs. Russell. Russell had a considerable property in his own name. He tried to practise fraud upon his wife by transferring his property to corporations and societies over which he himself had absolute and complete control. Referring to this fact, the court said, "The purpose of this whole transaction was to deprive his wife of her dower interest and was a fraud upon her." Mrs. Russell was compelled to petition the court to compel her husband to pay alimony, and an attachment was ordered. Judge J. R. McFarlane who was on the Bench at the time, and had heard the petition expressed the opinion of the court in the following words : "The answer of respondent to the rule for attachment is in large part a reiteration of the defence, set up to the application to fix alimony. So far as he is concerned, it has been adjudicated against him that his property was disposed of by him in fraud of his wife's rights, and his iteration and reiteration of denial of this charge is, at the least, in bad taste, especially in view of the circumstances surrounding the sale by the Sheriff of the Arch Street property upon a trifling judgment against him. (This was the Bible House, worth $40,000 conveyed by Sheriff's deed to the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society for $50 on a judgment of less than $200. Transfers were all made to this Society which he controls absolutely.)

"The transfers were made, so far as the respondent is concerned, without the right to do so against his wife."

"To refuse an attachment would allow any respondent to put his property into the hands of a friend who is amenable to his will, and then defy the power of the court."

When Russell saw that he had failed in this, he attempted another course of fraud. He sought to evade payment fixed by the court by fleeing from one state to another, making it necessary for his wife to get an extradition order, which she did, and which led to the condemnation of the cunning "Pastor" by a third court, and the increase of the alimony. Commenting on Russell's defense and conduct on this occasion, Judge Delady said : "There is not one syllable in the testimony to justify his repeated aspersions on her character and her mental condition, nor does he intimate in any way that there was any difference between them other than that she did not agree with him in his views of life and methods of conducting their business. He says himself she is a woman of high intellectual qualities and perfect moral character. While he denied in a general way that he attempted to belittle his wife as she claimed, the general effect of his own testimony is a strong confirmation of her allegations."

The Anniversary Services held in the Baptist Church last Sunday were well attended, considering the weather, especially in the evening. The Rev. Prof. Gilmour, D.D., of McMaster University, preached two able and helpful sermons, and a number of his old friends were very pleased to see and hear him again. Dr. Gilmour is a teacher of the Word, an effective speaker, and a convincing preacher, and will always receive a hearty welcome in Orangeville. The choir rendered special music and the solo by Mr. Percival Harding was much appreciated by the congregation.

Harold Jarvis Concert.

The concert given in the Opera House on Wednesday evening of last week under the auspices of the Young Ladies White Shield Class of the Methodist Church attracted a large and appreciative audience. A splendid programme was furnished by Harold Jarvis, the celebrated tenor, and Miss Mary Lyon, a clever reciter and impersonator. Mr. Jarvis was roundly applauded after each appearance. Some of his best numbers were "For King and Country," "A Lesson for Every Day," "Let Us Have Peace," "The Death of Nelson," and "It's a long way to Tipperary." On the invitation of Mr. Jarvis the audience joined in the chorus of the popular soldiers' marching song. Miss Lyon showed more than ordinary versatility, being equally facile in pathos, humorous sketches and French Canadian patois, such as is found in Drummond's "The Bells of St. Michel." The charming young elocutionist played her own accompaniments and also acted as accompanist for Mr. Jarvis. The concert realized about $145.

Orangeville's Literary School

The Harriston Review perpetrates the following without even a blush:—

Orangeville may claim to be the Boston of Canada. All that is required is to cultivate an appetite for baked beans. Literature and art flourish, and novelists, composers, poets and such like abound. "Billy Buttermilk" was, we believe, the founder of the Orangeville literary school. They employ peots to dig their waterworks trenches. One of these mad larks sings in the 'Tiser thusly, "Orangeville" being the inspiring theme:—

"Though rolling stones deface thy braes
Thy peasant sons shall soon them raise."

This is scarcely complimentary to Orangeville as a town, but poets must not be taken literally, and perhaps it looks like that from the waterworks excavations. The poet is a true child of nature and says:

"Behold yon groves in varied hue,
With petals clothed in morning dew."

The "wit" of the engineers who located the place is evident to the most superficial observer, and the poet happily remarks:

"Thy engineers show wit and skill
In choosing the site of Orangeville."

In the concluding stanza, the gallant bard mounts to the realms of prophecy and soars above the majestic brow of Purple Hill, peering into the beyond:

"Thy lovely maidens, fresh and fair,
With rosy cheeks and flowing hair;
Their modest mien, attire complete
With agile step skip o'er the street.
These daughters sure will mothers be
Of men renowned by land and sea,
In history's page will brightly shine,
Statesmen, mechanics, and divine."

Orangeville might spare one poet—this one perhaps—to write campaign war songs for the Liberals. His gift of prophecy would be especially valuable.

ALLIES WILL WIN

Is Prediction Made by Alberta's Premier at Canadian Club Dinner.

The New York Tribune gives an interesting account of a recent Canadian Club dinner at which Premier Sifton, of Alberta, was the chief speaker. Our readers will be interested in learning that the President of the Club, Mr. J. Emery McLean, is a former Orangeville boy. The Tribune's account of the dinner and Premier Sifton's speech follows:—

Arthur L. Sifton, Premier of Alberta, Canada, speaking at the Canadian Club dinner at the Hotel Martinique last night, predicted "beyond doubt" that the Allies would be the victors in the European war. He said, however, that it might mean a long struggle, with great sacrifices on the part of Canada and the rest of the British Empire.

"This is a serious time," he said. "The effects of the war are not yet understood by any of us. No nation can now engage in war without seriously affecting industry in every civilized country. In some ways it will be an advantage. Those who raise wheat in Canada and the United States will temporarily profit.

"Canada, like all progressive countries, is a borrowing country, and now, despite its need of immigration and capital, it will have to live for some time upon its own resources. But we shall live on and prosper.

"There is no doubt in our minds as to the result of the war. Every citizen of Canada, as well as of the whole British Empire, knows that he will be dead before defeat comes. That is the feeling throughout dominion and empire.

"It may be months or years, and great sacrifices will have to be made in life and industry by Canada and Great Britain, but these times will roll by and Canada will live to prosper more than ever before. There will be a great influx of immigration into Canada as the result of the war. It will place her among the foremost countries of the world, and she will be able to give assistance to the British Empire, which she has not been able to give before."

J. Emery McLean, president of the club, as toastmaster, announced that the annual international dinner of the club had been given up because its members felt they could not preserve strict neutrality on such an occasion. The club will hold informal monthly dinners instead through the winter.

The other speakers were Ernest Thompson Seton, Will Carmen Roberts, William M. Dignam and T. Kennard Thomson. The Rev. Ure Mitchell described a trip from New York to Quebec, with stereopticon views.

The hundred members and guests present joined heartily in the song, "It's a long, long way to Tipperary."

LITTLE TO FEAR.

U. S. Germans Not Likely to Make Raid on Canada.

The danger of raids into Canadian territory by German sympathizers in the United States is one of the contingencies of the present war which the Canadian Militia Department guarded against on the first news of hostilities in Europe. Sections of regiments are now on guard at practically all points where vandalism could cause serious damage. Canal gates, bridges, docks; elevators, etc., are under the rifles of Canadian militiamen.

No one pretends that the menace from the other side of the international boundary has, as yet, taken alarming form. Many of the stories of attempted destruction resolved into hallucinations, but there remained sumcient evidence to prepare the Militia Department for future trouble. The present circumstances are but slightly different from the days of the Fenian Raid when Irish-Americans tried to "capture" Canada by force of arms. There is, however, the interesting distinction that Irish-Americans to-day are lined up behind the British Government, the present peril having its source in American citizens of German birth and sympathies.

From two points recently rumors have come regarding conspiracies to wreak vengeance on Canadian property and at both points, Buffalo and Ogdensburg, assurances have been received from the local police authorities that their vigilance may be relied upon to abort the plans of any marauding expeditions. Following is a letter received from Michael Regan, superintendent of police at Buffalo:

"In reference to the possibility of 'German-Americans' raiding Canada now that England and Germany are in a state of war, I see nothing in conditions here that would warrant such action. The great majority of German-Americans are among the best of our law-abiding citizens, and while they are dearly attached to the 'Fatherland,' have too much sense to attempt the capture of Canada. This Government would soon quash such a movement if attempted. Of course, there are cranks in all communities and as individuals they may be tempted to go over and commit some rash act, but as for a general raid, nothing to it."

A Neighbor Told Him To Take Gin Pills

FOR THE KIDNEYS

If you want to know what Gin Pills will do for you, just drop a line to Mr. D. A. Yorke, at Bellrock, Ont. He will tell you what Gin Pills did for him, after he had suffered with Kidney trouble for 15 years. Here is his letter:

"I suffered for about 15 years with my Kidneys. I could get nothing to help me. The pain went all through my back and shoulders and down the calves of my legs. When I would sit down for a while, I could not straighten up again until I would walk a rod or more, the pain was so great. A neighbor advised me to take GIN PILLS. I did so and six boxes cured me. It is about two and a half years since I quit taking them. My back is all right; no pains and no more backache. I thank GIN PILLS for it all—they are worth their weight in gold". D. A. YORKE.

MRS. WM. McPHERSON.

In the death of Mrs. William McPherson, of East Garafraxa, another link of pioneer days with the present is severed. Eliza Thompson was born in county Tyrone, Ireland, 73 years ago, and when 4 years of age came to Canada with her parents, settling at Rockwood, where they lived for eight years, and then to the 11th line, East Garafraxa. In October 1868 she was married to William McPherson, settling on the farm on which she died, and where she experienced all the vicissitudes of pioneer life. Mr. McPherson died two years ago. Mrs. McPherson was a woman of kindly sympathies, pure and noble instincts and leaves with the family and acquaintances the memory of a life well spent. A family of ten survive: Mrs. William Owens, of Puyulleys, Wash.; Mrs. John Stevenson, Blackfolds, Alta.; Mrs. Wm. Graydon, of Toronto; Charles, of Toronto; Mrs. Platt, of Marsville; William H., of Amaranth; Albert, Bertha and Elsie at home.—Star & Vidette.

MRS. R. T. FORGRAVE.

The death of Mrs. R. T. Forgrave about midnight on Saturday, while not unexpected, gave great sorrow to the community. Her illness was so brief and so hopeless from the beginning that the sad end intensifies the poignancy of sorrow. She had not been in the best of health for some time, but her condition gave no concern until about the middle of September, when the lungs suddenly became affected. A stay at Muskoka sanitarium did not promise beneficial results, and she came home about three weeks ago. Mrs. Forgrave was a woman of many lovable qualities and noble impulses and possessed a pleasing personality enhanced by many acquired graces. Wonderfully energetic and ambitious, she ever had her home and family the centre of her concern. 13 years the day before her death she was married to Mr. Forgrave, to whom and the two little girls a wide measure of genuine sympathy is extended. The funeral took place on Tuesday to St. Alban's cemetery, the ceremony being conducted by Rev. G. McQuillin; rector, assisted by Rev. (Dr.) Smith, a former pastor and warm personal friend.—Star & Vidette.

JOHN SANDERSON'S DEATH

John Sanderson died at his home in Toronto on Friday evening last after an illness of about a month, six days of which only confined him to his bed. He suffered from hardening of the arteries, and though of some long duration his final illness was mercifully short. Mr. Sanderson was a native of Ontario, and forty years ago came to Amaranth, settling on the farm now occupied by W. H. McPherson. There was a little clearing on it, but with the energy and optimism of youth and the pioneer, he resolutely persevered until he transformed the bush lot to one of the nicest properties in the locality. A year or so after coming to Amaranth he married Emma Luxton, who with two sons, William, of Galt, and Arthur, of Toronto; and two daughters, Mrs. Stinson and Mrs. F. A. Macdonald, also of Toronto, survive. Mr. Sanderson actively identified himself with the Methodist church and was energetic in all its interests and work. He was one of the early members of the Oddfellows, who took charge of the funeral arrangements here on Monday. Mr. Sanderson removed to Toronto last spring, after spending a few years retired in Grand Valley, but he never enjoyed that contentment and ease that he appreciated here. The number of old friends who gathered at the station and followed the remains to the Union cemetery bespoke the respect he maintained.—Star & Vidette.

THE HORRORS OF WAR

The present dreadful war is bringing out many pathetic and terrible tales of the killing of non-combatants among whom are a number of innocent children. The following passage taken from the "Dop Doctor" by Richard Dehan, will give the reader food for thought, and will bring home to us, who are far away from the war's devastation, a little insight of its bloody terrors. The scene of the story is Gueldersdorp, a town on the borders of the Transvaal, which was held by the British and besieged by overwhelming numbers of Boers, during the last Boer War. A Boer woman, a refugee inside the British lines, has her only child killed by a piece of shrapnel, fired by her own countrymen. The child was playing innocently when sent to his death. Following the account of the death of the boy is a dissertation on "War." :—

"She was a bulky Dutch vrouw with a dishevelled head of coarse black hair, and a dirty cotton gown, and dirty bare feet in bulgy shoes that were trodden down at the heel. But with her livid, purple face and protruding, bloodshot eyeballs uplifted to the drifting cloud of greenish lyddite vapour that thinned away overhead, she was great and terrible, and the very incarnation of Maternity Bereft.

"One huge arm gripped the little body to her broad, panting bosom. She had called him, and he had not answered; she had sought and found him, just as he had slidden off the box-seat, where he had been playing driver of the ox-span, lying curled upon the dashboard, the little whip of stick and string he had been at pains to make only yesterday fallen from the lax, childish hand. The fair hair on the left temple was dabbled in blood, that trickled from the tiny three-cornered bluish hole. His eyes were open, as if in wonder at the sudden darkness that had fallen at bright midday; the smile had frozen on the parted, innocent lips. . . . .

"Oh, look at this, Premier and President! Look at this, my Lords and Commons and militant Burghers of Republican States! Grave Ministers who decide in Cabinet Councils that the prestige of the Government is at stake, and that the bedraggled honour of the Country can only be washed clean in one red river, flowing from the veins of Humanity, look, look here! You who lust for Sovereignty, biding rapacious Ambitions and base lust for gold behind the splendid ermined folds of the Imperial purple. You who resented Suzerainty, coverting to keep in your hands riches that you could not use, resources that your ignorance could not develop, greedy to have and hold what you wrested from the Sons of Ham, lest white men should snatch it back from you again; and prating of Liberty and Freedom while the necks of three races of men were bending over the yoke of an oligarchy more imperious, more pitiless, more covetous, besotted, brutal, and ignorant than any other that the spotted records of History can show—look here, look here!

"Nations that rush to dreadful War, loosing the direful threefold plague of Iron, Fire, and Disease to scourge and brand and desolate the once smiling face of your Mother Earth, pause as you roll onwards in desolating cataclysms of armed and desperate men, and forgetting the blood-stained she-devil you misname Glory, look here, in the Name of One who loved and suffered little children rating their innocent bodies and spotless souls at such high value that Little Dierch and his countless brother-and-sister-babes that have perished of Iron, Fire, and Disease, as of Terror and Famine, Death's twin henchmen, shall weigh in the balance against Crowned Heads and Lords and Commons and Presidents and Representatives and Deputies, until they kick the beam!

"Should there be War? Of course there should be War! you say.

"Have you seen War? Perhaps, even as I have. And, having seen it, dare you justify the shedding, by men who hold the Christian Faith, of these spilled-out oceans of Christian blood?

"That question will be settled when the Trumpet of the Great Angel sounds, and the Sea and the Earth shall give up their dead, and everyone shall answer for his deeds before the Throne of God. And until then, look to it that if you war in any cause, the cause be a just one."

"NO SUCH THING AS FEAR."

Trooper W. R. Long, of the 2nd Dragoon Guards, writing from hospital to his father, says:

"I am up and walking (slowly), and I think that in the course of another week I shall be on my way back to the regiment. The old Boys have not done so badly, especially at the place where Lieutenant C. N. Champion De Crespigny was killed. We were surprised at daybreak. The Germans had their guns and maxims on us, with a fine range, too, but they cannot time their shells, so they merely make a bit of a row, and it takes more than a noise to frighten us boys. When we had pulled ourselves together and got a bit of a firing line stretched out and one maxim on the go we settled down to what we thought was going to be a twenty-round go. We fought them in the good old style for half an hour, and at the end of that time we had to our credit twelve guns, four maxims, and about fifty men. Two of my dear old pals went under. One big sausage manufacturer that we captured stood about 6 feet 2 inches, and he let go and take his hat off, and never said a word. There is no such a thing as fear out here in the British army, but there is no chance of getting a really good scrap. If we get close they put their hands up, and our officers won't let us go in and use the butts of our rifles or even our fists."

RIGHT AND WRONG.

Information on Methods of Marketing Eggs.

An extremely interesting and attractive feature of the Demonstration Car, containing the Egg and Wool Exhibits of the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, which was on exhibition at Orangeville on Tuesday of last week, was the educational display illustrating the Right and Wrong methods of marketing eggs.

This display formed the larger part of the Egg Exhibit and was an object lesson that will not soon be forgotten by those who visited the car. It was arranged in two large, electrically lighted show cases. Each case contained a series of models together with appropriate back grounds and descriptions illustrating in the one instance the careless methods too frequently followed in the handling of eggs on many Canadian farms, and in the other the results that may be obtained through the adoption of improved methods on the farm, in the Country Store, and in fact by all those engaged in the Egg Trade.

In each instance the course followed by the egg from the time it was laid until it reached the consumer, was mapped out. The cause of the many bad and stale eggs was evident when one noted the unsatisfactory conditions that prevailed on many farms, and in many Country Stores. It was pointed out that even the mongrel, nondescript poultry found on many farms, refused to use for the greater part of the year, the dirty, undesirable poultry houses provided for them. The eggs were gathered infrequently and from questionable places. They were held until it was convenient to carry them to market, and were usually traded on a flat-rate basis, for merchandise, at the Country Store, where little or no attention was paid to quality. Here they were frequently held indefinitely, in anticipation of a rising market and often were shipped in damp and musty cases to the Wholesale Dealer, who candled and graded them. The result of the candling was indicated and it was evident that but a relatively small proportion of the eggs graded "select." The manner in which the retail grocer permitted eggs to deteriorate was also pointed out, and if by chance, a portion of the uncandled eggs went direct to the consumer the result was very evident.

The second series showed a flock of pure bred poultry kept in a clean, well ventilated poultry house, provided with clean, dry nests from which the eggs were gathered frequently and regularly. The eggs were kept covered in a clean utensil in the coolest, driest place in the farm house and marketed at least once, better twice a week. In the Country Store they were bought on the basis of quality and packed in clean, dry cases and forwarded with the minimum of delay. The result of this careful management was apparent in the Candling Room of the Wholesale Warehouse where a decidedly large proportion of the eggs graded "select" and if by chance a portion of these eggs went direct to the consumer, the result was in marked contrast to that apparent in the previous instance.

The plans for this display were prepared by officers of the Poultry Division of the Live Stock Branch and the Exhibit was in charge of Mr. W. A. Brown, Chief of the Division, Mr. W. H. Ault and Mr. J. R. Fee.

Another important feature of the Exhibit was the Candling Demonstration given in a large booth erected in the end of the car. This phase of work was of particular interest to consumers, for the reason that but few persons appreciate the fact that the quality of an egg can be accurately determined without breaking the shell.

The candling of eggs is not a difficult process and the small amount of labor entailed in candling presents no valid reason why the consuming public should not candle their own eggs more frequently than they do, and thus safeguard themselves from many unpleasant occurrences at the breakfast table.

A deputation from Essex County waited on the Ontario Government last week and asked for aid to build a concrete road from Walkerville to Oldcastle.

J. M. Kilbourn, of Owen Sound, has donated $100 a month to the Canadian Patriotic Fund so long as the war lasts. The only stipulation he makes is that $500 is to be used in placing Belgian children in Canadian homes.

Baby Eczema Becomes Chronic

Causing Great Suffering and Anxiety —Prompt Relief and Cure by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad, and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now, and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Here is another letter, which tells of the cure of a five-weeks-old baby: Mrs. Wallace Mingon, River John Road, Colchester County, N.S., writes: "My little girl took eczema when she was five weeks old. Though we doctored her until she was nearly a year old, she got no better. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this treatment completely cured her."

REASONS FOR SECRECY.

The Censor Is an Important Part of the Fighting Machine.

Perhaps one of the most striking things about the war so far has been the veil of secrecy thrown over the operations of the campaign, thanks to official censorship and the co-operation of the press. In no country has the silence been more significant or more useful than in Great Britain.

The supreme usefulness of this national silence was so apparent in connection with the despatch of the Expeditionary Force to France that the recent efforts in some quarters to secure a relaxation of the regulations respecting the publication of war news would cause surprise and even irritation were all the circumstances of the case not taken into consideration.

The British public is more than most communities in the world, jealous of the least infringement upon the liberties of the press and has grown up to rely absolutely upon the press for its daily news. At such a time of stress and excitement as that now existing this reliance and the hunger for news is intensified many fold. The fact must be borne in mind that the British Empire has not been engaged in a great European war for such a great number of years that the public is unaccustomed to restrictions on the news supplied to it by the press. And the public has been accustomed to have its news hot after the event, the wonderful progress in means of communication, railways, telegraphs, telephones and wireless, having enabled newspapers to serve their public with such promptitude as would never have been dreamt of a century ago.

It has to be remembered that this facilities in the way of communication which under normal conditions serve the press so well, are open to the spies of the enemy when they wish to communicate with their superiors, and consequently the precautions to be taken to prevent news of advantage to the enemy reaching him will have to be much greater and more careful and more rapid in their effects.

Newspapers are among the sources of information most carefully watched by the military intelligence authorities, the German cavalry, for instance being specially instructed that spies, patrols and outposts are to keep their eyes open for copies or fragments of an enemy's newspapers found anywhere and forward them at once to the nearest intelligence officer.

There are many instances of news which had been published in newspapers having led to disaster in the field.

In a volume published not long ago entitled "The Bernstorff Papers," dealing among other things with the career of the Count Bernstorff, who was Prussian Minister in London in 1870, the son relates that the whole staff of the Embassy, during the earlier course of the French campaign, were almost exclusively engaged in collecting and appraising news from the seat of war and despatching it to Berlin, in order that it might be retransmitted to headquarters at the front.

The needs of a nation, particularly in war time, must override the needs of any parts of it; and necessary interference with the everyday occupation of any portion of the inhabitants of a country is justified by the fact that that country is at war—that for its own safety it has had to have recourse to brute force. In fact a state of war means the abrogation of all the ordinary amenities of life provided that abrogation is found necessary in the national interest.

Fought In Bare Feet.

Le Matin of Paris relates that on the arrival of a train bringing wounded Senegalese riflemen nearly all were found smoking furiously from long porcelain pipes taken from the enemy and indifferent to their wounds.

Though their arms and bodies are hacked by sabers, the Senegalese complain of nothing but the obligation to fight with shoes on. Before going into battle at Charleroi they slyly rid themselves of these impediments and came back shod in German footwear to avoid punishment for losing equipment.

A colonial trooper among the wounded brought to Paris from the front declared that he felt nothing when his arm was shot off by a shell until he saw it lying on the ground. Not being able to bear the thought of leaving it, as he expressed it, as "meat for the Prussian dogs," he picked it up and ran several yards with it before he was overcome.

CUNNINGTON—NIXON.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nixon, Spruce Glen Farm, Grahamesville, Ont., was the scene of a very pleasant event, on Tuesday, October 27th, when their daughter, Gladys Eleanor, was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph Cunnington, Mayfield. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, under an arch of evergreens, tinted with autumn leaves. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very charming in a gown of deep ivory satin, with pale cream silk shadow lace, with pearl trimmings, and tulle veil crowned with orange blossoms, and carried a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses and lily of the valley. Miss Vera Pearson, Toronto, who attended the bride, wore a becoming gown of pink satin and cream silk lace, in basque effect and carried a bouquet of pink rose buds. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Geo. W. Cunnington, of Toronto. The wedding march was played by the bride's cousin, Miss Myrtle Nixon, Inglewood. Miss Sadie Reid, Toronto, rendered the solo, "When We're Together," while the register was being signed. After the ceremony was over, a magnificent repast was served in the dining room, where the tables were decorated with pink and white 'mums. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold bracelet set with pearls; to the bridesmaid, a sterling silver manicure set; to the groomsman a cameo tie pin; to the pianiste, a crescent and to the soloist, a cameo ring. The bride was the recipient of many useful and costly gifts, among which was a cheque for $1000 from her father and mother. The bride and groom left on their honeymoon for Berlin and other parts, carrying with them the good wishes of their friends; the bride wearing a becoming gown of black satin, trimmed with Roman stripe, and a black velvet hat and blue coat. On their return the happy couple will reside at Mayfield.—Bolton Enterprise.

SPIES, TRAITORS AND HATERS.

The feeling that men cannot be trusted or relied upon is one of the most vexatious things that human beings have to encounter. The action of Germany in repudiating the treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium; the intrigues, past and present, to stir up strife in British colonies and protectorates, the false statements made by officials and non officials of the German Government in order to destroy confidence in Great Britain's honor, the treacherous methods resorted to to compass the downfall of Britain—all these are irritating and annoying to lovers of British fair play. Whatever detractors may say of Albion, she has always fought in the open; and wherever the Union Jack has been planted the conditions of the common people have improved. Liberty has been assured, and faith in one another among the people promoted; education has been spread and conditions made more comfortable, socially and commercially and in every other way.

Germany endeavored to sow seditious poison in South Africa from 1881 to 1900, and is trying to do the same thing now. She has done her best to stir up strife in India and to promote anti-British feeling in the United States. She has used her mine laying vessels under the flags of neutral nations, and menaced the commerce of all countries, contrary to international law, or the laws of honorable warfare. Her spy system has made us all suspicious.

Thus it is that one suspects the German hand in the agitation among a section of the Irish element in the United States, and among the extremists of the Irish Nationalists, who are denouncing Mr. Redmond for his loyal attitude towards the Empire in the present war. The following, copied from the Tyrone County News (Ireland), of Sept. 17, 1914, shows the feeling of a small section, who express the same hatred of England which exists in Germany:

PATTERSON HOUSE RAIDED.

As a result of a visit of Inspector Matthew Beckett to the Patterson House on Saturday, there will be another "whiskey" case on in the Police Court one of these days. The Inspector, in company with Deputy Chief Thompson and Constables Carson and McCaffrey raided the premises on Saturday afternoon, the Deputy Chief and P. C. McCaffrey investigating one part of the house, while the Inspector and P. C. Carson took a look around the other half. The first spoils of the raid were located by the Inspector in a match-vending machine, which contained four bottles partly filled with whiskey of different kinds, while a carefully concealed cupboard in the cellar on the north side of the building accommodated thirty-three bottles more of assorted whiskey. The booze was transferred to Matthew's private cell, where it will remain until the case is disposed of to the satisfaction of the court.—Owen Sound Sun.

MRS. WILLIAM McKINLEY.

In the early hours of Saturday morning Mrs. Wm. McKinley passed to rest after one week's acute illness following a stroke of paralysis, though for ten years she has been in illhealth.

Mrs. McKinley had lived almost her entire life in this locality having come with her parents Mr. and Mrs. James Rutherford to the township of Albion when about two years of age. She was born on August 14, 1852, and educated in the neighboring schools. With an earnest ambition to teach she applied herself with characteristic enthusiasm to her studies and was just qualified to undertake this work when her mother's place in the home was made vacant by death. There were four children younger in the home and to these she became as a mother and to all the large family she was homemaker.

At about this period of her life she became a Christian and all her brightness, vivacity, social graces, and mental powers were from this time used for the benefit of her immediate family and her circle of friends. Because of her ambitions, thwarted though they seemed to have been, others were stimulated to greater culture.

Thirty-three years ago she was married to Mr. William McKinley, and, as in girlhood, her mature life was spent in seeking to do well.

She was an active member of the Methodist church and to the last was interested in every detail of church work. She was a charter member of the Women's Missionary Society of Bolton, and a life member of the Society, and was present at the October meeting of the Auxiliary.

Throughout the years of her invalidism and enforced retirement from the activities of life Mrs. McKinley was most patient and bore up under her affliction with remarkable cheerfulness. She was highly esteemed by her large circle of friends. A memorial service was conducted in the Methodist church on Sunday evening, November 8, by the pastor, and the funeral on Monday was attended only by the immediate relatives of the deceased.

She is survived by her husband, three sons, Dr. W. E., of Toronto, Dr. Fuller, of the Chinese Methodist Mission, Mr. Lewis, of Bolton, and one daughter, Miss Annie, also at home. To all the many friends extend sympathy.—Bolton Enterprise.

Mrs. Ida Marron, of Owen Sound, was fined $200 and costs for keeping liquor for sale.

HER SECRET.

We occasionally meet a woman whose age is as beautiful as the bloom of youth. We wonder how it has come about—what her secret is.

Here are a few of the reasons:

She knew how to forget disagreeable things.

She kept her nerves well in hand and inflicted them on no one.

She mastered the art of saying pleasant things.

She made whatever work came to her congenial.

She retained her illusions and did not believe all the world wicked and unkind.

She relieved the miserable and sympathized with the sorrowful.

She never forgot that kind words and a smile cost nothing, but are priceless treasures to the discovered.

She did unto others as she would be done by.

She never missed an opportunity to tell her friends and neighbors to subscribe for this paper and impress them that the local news department alone is worth many times the subscription price.

Jno. McCaig, of Erin, has had three of the foxes which he captured last spring. They had grown fine and were splendid animals. Some how they got through the wire netting and skipped out. He has one left yet.

NO AUTHORIZATION

Cabinet Declines to Fit Out New Dufferin County Regiment

A meeting of the members of the County Council, the officers of the Regiment and interested citizens was held in the Carnegie Library on Wednesday afternoon of last week to discuss the obstacles that had developed to prevent the early authorization of the new Dufferin County infantry regiment. The members of the County Council attended in a body and Warden Dryden took the chair. Lieut.-Col. Preston, who has been actively engaged in promoting the new regiment, told of the work already accomplished. Eight companies, he said, had been provisionally organized at Orangeville, Shelburne, Grand Valley, Honeywood, Dundalk and Alliston. These were composed largely of young men, who were for the most part good marksmen and desirable soldiers. There were twenty-three provisional officers, several of whom already held commissions. Col. Preston read correspondence between the Department and himself relative to the authorization of the regiment. John Best, M.P., and Major Gabriel and Lieut. Harrison, of the Shelburne Company, also spoke briefly. Mr. Best, while pointing out the special difficulties that existed at the present time, expressed the opinion that General Hughes would authorize the regiment and promised to use whatever influence he could exert toward that end.

Later in the week the member for Dufferin and Col. Preston went to Ottawa to ask the Militia Department to officially recognize the Dufferin regiment. We are sorry to have to add that they were unsuccessful in their mission. General Hughes, we understand, was willing, but the proposal met with the strong opposition of other members of the Cabinet. The opinion that prevailed was that there were enough militia regiments at present and that the Government should bend its energies to the task of securing men who would volunteer for overseas service. At any rate, the new Regiment will not be authorized just at present.

It is uncertain just what effect the decision of the Department will have upon the fortunes of the proposed Regiment. Without authorization there will be no public funds available for its equipment and maintenance. The old companies in Orangeville, Shelburne, Grand Valley and Alliston retain their status as militia companies, and it has been suggested that the new units might be converted into Rifle Associations, which would give them a defined status. Col. Preston has written the officers suggesting this course and it is probable that the suggestion will be followed. This would have the advantage of keeping the regiment together and under training until conditions are more favorable for obtaining the authorization of the Department. We understand that arrangements are being made for provisional schools of instruction at Orangeville and Shelburne for the purpose of enabling the officers to fit themselves to pass their qualifying examinations.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND

Western Farmers Will Contribute Crop off One Acre of Land

Regina, Nov. 21st 1914 — The Grain Growers of Saskatchewan have adopted a novel scheme to support the patriotic movement. The central organization has recommended that the various units discuss the question of whether or not each member should give the crop off one acre of land each year to the patriotic fund, and without exception, as far as can be learned, the ideas of the central organization are being followed out. In addition to the "patriotic acre" scheme the farmers are being requested to make cash donations, and are responding readily.

Orangeville Patriotic League

The ladies of the Patriotic League wish to thank all those who helped to make their day of keeping store at W. E. Rogers' establishment on November 18th such a success. The Tea Room, for which Miss Reid so generously lent her Millinery Department, was an attraction and well patronized. With the proceeds they are able to get to work again as the $50 given by the Council to the work has already been spent on the garments made and sent away. A meeting will be held on Friday evening in the Auditorium of the Library to further discuss the work. Every woman's help is much needed at this time. The list of garments made and sent up to this date is as follows:—27 pairs of socks, 50 pairs of wristlets, 6 Balaclava caps, 4 sleeping caps, 3 mufflers, 16 night shirts, 16 suits of pyjamas, 10 towels, 27 pillow pads, and 100 handkerchiefs.

In connection with this work, the Canadian Red Cross Society will hold a public meeting in the Opera House on Tuesday next at eight o'clock. DEATH OF DR. FRANK

Orangeville Loses Another of Its Oldest Citizens

Orangeville has lost another of its oldest citizens in the person of Dr. Frederick Frank, whose death took place at his home on Third Ave. about noon on Tuesday. While he had been in failing health for the last year, Dr. Frank was always well enough to go about and was usually at his office during business hours. Sunday night about 11 o'clock while he was in his bedroom preparing to retire for the night he had a paralytic seizure and remained in an unconscious condition until the end came. Deceased, who was 73 years and 11 months of age, was born at The Grange in the southwest of Caledon township, his parents being among the first settlers in that locality. After completing his public school education he studied dentistry and, coming to Orangeville about 1860, commenced the practice of his profession here. He built up a large practice and was active in the public life of the town. He was one of the promoters of the Forest Lawn Cemetery Co. and acted in the capacity of secretary-treasurer for a great many years. He was formerly identified with the Oddfellows and Workmen Societies. Although a strong Liberal in politics Dr. Frank was far from being a mere party man. He was the possessor of decided convictions and showed considerable independence in thought and action. He was an active temperance man and took a great deal of interest in moral and social questions. He held the position that instruction in morals should be made part of the Public School curriculum. Dr. Frank married Miss Wheelock, a daughter of the late C. J. Wheelock and a sister of County Treasurer C. R. Wheelock. Mrs. Frank survives as well as one son, Dr. F. Frank, of Shelburne, and a daughter, Miss Winkona Frank, who holds a position on the staff of Saskatchewan University. The funeral has been deferred until Friday afternoon to give Miss Frank time to reach home. The remains will be interred in the Forest Lawn Cemetery, the funeral taking place at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Harry Clark

Her many friends in Orangeville and neighborhood will learn with unfeigned sorrow of the death of Mrs. Harry Clark, a former Orangeville girl. The sad event occurred at her home at Delisle, Sask., on Monday, after a short but severe illness. Deceased, whose maiden name was Lucy May Rowan, was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Rowan, York St. She was married to Mr. Clark about four years ago and moved to the West shortly afterwards. She was in her 32nd year and is survived by her husband, a boy three years old and a three week's babe. Besides her parents, she leaves a brother, Wilmer, and four sisters, Mrs. Will Clark, of Delisle, and Misses Laura, Margaret and Bernice at home. Upon receipt of the news of his daughter's serious illness, Mr. Rowan started for the West, leaving here on Friday evening. The Banner understands that he did not reach Delisle until a few hours after Mrs. Clark's death. The remains will be brought to her former home here for interment. The sympathy of the community goes out to the young husband, the parents and family in their great grief.

Mrs. Alexander Murray

Mrs. Alexander Murray, a respected resident of Mono Mills for many years, died on Thursday, Nov. 12th, after less than a week's illness from pneumonia. Deceased, whose maiden name was Mary Hannah Parker, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Parker, old residents of Sheldon. She was born in Acton and married to Mr. Murray at Sheldon, where she resided for a number of years prior to their removal to Mono Mills about 17 years ago. Mrs. Murray was a woman, who possessed excellent qualities of head and heart and enjoyed the good will and esteem of the people of her neighborhood. She was a devoted wife and a tender loving mother. She is survived by her husband and the following family:—Mrs. Wesley Conder, of Bannamthorpe, Joseph, of Guelph, Mrs. Robert Ritchie and George and Melville Murray, of Toronto. George and William Parker, of Alliston, James, Charles and John Parker, of Sheldon, Mrs. Wm. Firth, Sheldon, Mrs. Sarah Webster, Sheldon, Mrs. Thos. Gallagher, Everett, and Mrs. John Penelton, of Craik City, Va., are the surviving brothers and sisters. The late Mrs. Murray was a member of Mono Mills Methodist Church and a regular church attendant up to the time of her illness. There was a large attendance at the funeral which was held to Wesley Church Cemetery on Sunday, November 15th. Rev. C. H. Quaife, pastor of the Mono Mills Church, and Rev. J. W. Dudgeon, of Rosemont, conducted the services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were the three sons, Joseph, George and Melville and three nephews, George Parker, Earl Wilson and Chas. Firth.

Practical Christianity

Rev. Dr. Shearer, who has charge of the Social Service Department of the work of the Presbyterian Church, addressed a large audience in the school room of St. Andrew's Church on Monday night. The address was on Practical Christianity and related chiefly to the methods which the church has adopted to cope with the downtown problem in the large cities and to the work among the Ruthenians and other foreigners in Western Canada. The address was splendidly illustrated, the views shown being very instructive. The Sunday School orchestra provided music.

Adjala's Special Audit

The special auditor who was engaged to go over the books of the township of Adjala has completed his work and made his report to the Council. The report was presented to the council at its last meeting in the form of a voluminous document covering some thirty or forty typewritten pages. Nothing flagrantly criminal was disclosed. It seems quite conclusive, the Boston World states in discussing the report, that no attempt has ever been made by anyone to in any way swindle the township out of a dollar as has been alleged for some time. But many acts of carelessness were brought to light and are noted in the report. The financial statements for some years were thoroughly dissected and the verification for every payment made sought in the minutes. There have been many expenditures for which no warrant was issued in Council, but the disbursements were legitimate enough in themselves. One of the amusing features of the report is the fact that it named A. W. Burke, who has been an incessant kicker over township affairs, as one of the parties who received a reduction in assessment without the sanction of the Council.

McMaster University Band

McMaster University Evangelistic Band held a series of well-attended services in the Baptist Church on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday. The edifice was crowded at the Sunday services, particularly in the afternoon and at night. The Band consists of earnest, devoted young men, who are in this manner consecrating their energies and talents to the service of the Master. The singing by the Male Quartette and Mr. Milton Tyndall, tenor soloist, was inspiring and added much to the power of the services. The short addresses given by members of the Band at each of the services were masterly and made a profound impression on all who heard them. During their brief stay in town the young men visited a number of homes where there was sickness or infirmity and sang to those who would otherwise not have had any opportunity to hear them. Their services were given free of charge. It is to be hoped that they will be able to favor Orangeville with another visit in the near future.

Jew Peddler Robbed

Max Wolfe, a Jew pedlar, who does quite a trade in the north of the county, was unexpectedly relieved of nearly his entire stock-in-trade on Thursday night of last week. Wolfe has a stable in Shelburne, in which he keeps his horse, wagon and goods when he is in off the road. Last week he went to Toronto for a few days, leaving his wagon loaded with goods under lock and key. Thursday night someone pried off the lock, entered the stable and decamped with nearly everything that was in the wagon. The booty included 19 overcoats, 7 watches, some plated silverware and other articles, valued altogether at upwards of $400. High Constable Marshall is working on the job, but has not been successful in recovering any of the stolen goods. A couple of Jew pedlars who were in Shelburne on Thursday are suspected of having a hand in the affair. They were seen passing through Orangeville on Friday and are believed to have been heading for the city.

Mission Band Concert

The concert given in the Sunday School Room of St. Andrew's Church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 18th, under the auspices of the Mission Band, was a well attended affair and financially was quite a success, some $50 or more being realized. The excellent programme provided was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience. The first part of the evening was given over to songs and drills by the younger members and some really good numbers were presented. A Candle Scene by three little girls and a duet by the brothers McMillan were very good indeed. The number "Drifting" was cleverly rendered by five girls and a Flower Drill was also very good. Two choruses and a doll song were also given by the Mission Band and Misses Verna Kearns and B. Banks took part in a tableau "Rock of Ages," the words being sung by Miss Banks. The hit of the evening was undoubtedly "Tipperary," in which Clayton Connell, Gordon Smith and Edwin Jessop took part, Clayton singing the solo part. All three boys sang and acted with the utmost sangfroid and displayed considerable natural ability. "Uncle Jack," or "Testing Hearts," a three scene playlet was given by Misses McGuire, Patterson, Banks and McGillivray and Messrs. Lawson, McPherson and Hunter. The scene opened at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Montgomrie and changed from there to a room in a tenement occupied by Martha Blake, finishing at the Montgomeries' and following the fortunes of Jack Denton on his return from the West. Special mention should be made of the skilful acting of those who took part, particularly of Miss Hazel Banks and Mr. Ewart McPherson. The former gave a humorous and well acted portrayal of the Irish servant, Molly Mahoney, and the latter did some very realistic work in the role of the rough westerner. The last number was a tableau, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," by Misses Patterson, Banks and McGuire, and Messrs. McPherson, White, Kellie, McGillivray, McMillan, Lawson, W. H. Hunter and A. M. Irwin. The stage setting was very realistic with camp, camp fire, sentry on guard, tent and doctor, patients, nurses and one dead man. Further realism was added by two soldiers in the tent enjoying a hasty snack. The singing by Mrs. Robertson, Misses Harshaw and Watson and Messrs. Jessop and Connop was very fine. The electrical effects were kindly loaned by The Adamson Hardware Co. The concert was brought to a fitting close at a late hour by the hearty singing of the National Anthem by all present. Great praise is due the ladies in charge of the Mission Band, for the success of the entertainment and particularly to Mrs. Banks, who was in a large measure responsible for the training of the children and young people who furnished the programme.

The appeal issued some time ago in this village on behalf of the Red Cross fund turned out eminently satisfactory. Over one hundred dollars was taken in on the night of the patriotic concert. Another hundred has been received by the collectors. There are several amounts promised still to come in, and it those who have promised will kindly hand in what their names call for the committee will be in a position to close up the fund. The collectors of the village wish to state how pleased they are with the willing and hearty response they met with from the people. It is cheering to know that in this time of national crisis Caledon East was not lacking either in its manifestation of patriotism or assistance of a financial character. Anyone with knitting on hand for the Red Cross Society is requested to leave the same at the home of Miss E. Shore, when it will be forwarded to headquarters.—Enterprise.

CAMILLA.

In looking over the items written by our would be correspondent in last week's Banner, we notice an account of our Women's Institute social evening. In all justice to our hostess and the members of the Institute we will give a fair report of our social evening. The members of the Institute and their families held this social evening at the home of Mrs. John Buchanan. Mrs. Buchanan proved a most affable hostess and made her guests feel right at home. A good fowl supper was provided, after which a short programme was furnished, which included a concise address by Rev. Mr. Fowlie, whose remarks were much appreciated by all present. Music by Miss Gladys White and Miss Brener and recitations by the children were also greatly enjoyed by all. Every person reports an exceedingly pleasant social evening with the exception of our correspondent. Now we have every reason to believe that the correspondent was invited to attend the supper and was treated in a most hospitable manner by the hostess. We ask this person in all seriousness, "Were not your remarks most impolite and uncultured."

MELANCTHON.

After the hard freeze-up last week our inhabitants welcome the mild weather of this week. Some of our weather prophets predict a mild winter.

The farmers are now preparing to cut and draw their winter's wood, and it is well for those that have timber to cut when we consider the lot of those living in a large town like Orangeville, where they have to go down into their pockets periodically and "cough up" for coal. Verily the farmer enjoys the simple comforts of living in rural plenty.

It is expected that several new aspirants will enter the field for municipal honors at the approaching township election. Some would like to see ex-Reeve Thos. Oldfield in the Reeve's chair once more. It is also in order for Councillor Halbert to seek promotion to the position of deputy-reeve.

Mr. James Sawden, who was indisposed, is better again.

Rumor says another real estate deal of considerable import is in progress in our midst.

Our Chief of Police says that when the war is over he can "cuff the Kaiser." Melancthon has nothing to be ashamed of, however, for we contributed our share for the relief of the suffering Belgians.

RUSSELLISM CRITICIZED

Russell's Qualifications for Ministry Called Into Question

Mono, Nov. 24th, 1914.

The Editor of The Banner,

Dear Sir,—

Please give me space in your valuable paper to make a short reply to Pastor Russell's champion in last week's Banner.

In the first place I would like to know whence comes the Pastor's title. In our Church a person is always ordained by those in office higher than himself. He must also have qualifications which are to be found in Titus, Chap. 1: 1-9. The possession of these qualifications would give him more peace in his domestic affairs. One of Pastor Russell's statements that the millenium was to be here in October of this year has already proved him a false prophet. God's Word tells us we are not to know the day or the hour when the end cometh. Your correspondent says that he received great light after reading Russell's books and then reading the Bible. So says the Mormon and the Mohammedan after reading the book of Mormon and the Koran. I can do better by going to the Inspired Word first and there finding the Way of Salvation much plainer than in the books of this strange doctrine. Pastor Russell has a very comfortable way of settling things for the future by telling us there is no future punishment, thereby setting aside an important part of God's Word, Matt. 25: 31-46. He also uses the word "torture" where the Word of God has "torment," a very different thing. Your correspondent of last week says men do not need a good education now as Christ chose poor and uneducated men for the Ministry in his time. Where does he find that? Was not three years with Christ a good training? As for poor men. St. John had a house of his own and so had St. Peter. Could unlearned men write the Gospels and Epistles of the New Testament? See 2 Peter 3: 16. Why do you not come out in the open with your literature, so that we can see who you are; not go behind people's backs and put your pamphlets in their rigs when you get the in town. Stand by your old church that stood by you in the past and never mind these sideshows.

The hall was prettily decorated with flags and bunting, red, white and blue being the prevailing colors. A dainty lunch was served by the committee in charge of the affair.

THE DURATION OF THE WAR.

There is anxious enquiry as to the duration of the war, as to which speculation is confined to the endurance of the combatants. The economists are of opinion that starvation will not be a determining factor for a long time. The French economist, Beaulieu, thinks that so long as the German people are persuaded that the war is just and holy Germany will not be reduced by starvation, and there is no economic or physical impossibility in a prolonged war.

In resources of men the advantage seems to be with the Allies, who may draw upon a population of 321 millions and including the colonies of France and Britain 738 millions, while Germany and Austro-Hungary may draw on a population of only 116 millions. It is claimed that in France and Germany where conscription is in force it is possible, notwithstanding economics and the demands of industry, to engage the whole male population of military age. That was done by the Boers and recently by the Balkan States. If it came to that France would, it is said, put 3,900,000 men in the field against Germany's 5,200,000.

While the combatants avow the purpose of mutual conquest and destruction the war will go on. But in the closet and by the fireside, the suffering peoples must be forming judgments of the monstrous folly of the conflict, which will presently be heard.—The Weekly Sun.

John W. Noble, B.S.A., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Noble, of Masonville, who has been assistant representative of the Department of Agriculture for Middlesex county, has been appointed Representative of the Department for Essex county, with headquarters in the town of Essex.

James Johnson, of Lucknow, was probably fatally burned and his wife and baby are in a serious condition as a result of a blaze which started when Johnson tried to make the kitchen fire burn better by pouring kerosene into it. The can slipped and four gallons exploded. Mrs. Johnson was terribly burned by rushing through the flames to get the baby.

QUESTION OF WORK AND "MADE-IN-CANADA"

Economic Situation of Grave Concern to Canadians—Co-operation From all Sides to Give Work

The war has had a sudden and pronounced effect on the "Made-in-Canada" movement which has been carried on in Canada during the past few years. Hitherto the educational campaign, to promote the sale of "Made-in-Canada" goods, has been viewed pretty much as the concern of Canadian manufacturers, and has, for this reason, been denied the sympathy and support of a section of the people. The war has changed all this, and to-day the "Made-in-Canada" policy is no longer looked upon as a matter of sentiment and patriotism, but is regarded as an economic necessity. The manufacturers and other large employers of labor are being appealed to by press, pulpit and public men generally to provide the maximum of employment with a view to relieving the distress caused by the closing of many factories as a result of the war. Obviously Canadian factories cannot be operated unless there is a demand for their products. Hence the appeal on every hand to Canadians to patronize the goods made by their fellow-citizens in Canadian factories. It is admitted on all sides that there will be considerable unemployment, and consequent suffering during the next few months in Canada, but if every Canadian would, as far as possible, patronize home industries, orders would come in to many Canadian factories that have hitherto been placed abroad, and instead of a slackening in factory activity the wheels of industry might be operated with accelerated speed during this period of trial.

Manufacturers and other large employers of labor have agreed among themselves to maintain their working staffs as fully as possible even if they operate at cost or in some cases below cost. In so doing they are not actuated by any desire for profits, welcome as these would be, but solely with a view of relieving the distress which unemployment always brings. They feel that it is far better to furnish a livelihood for Canadians through honest work and honest wages than to dole out a pittance through charitable institutions. "Made-in-Canada" is, therefore, more than ever a practical business policy today. Every Canadian housewife, in fact every purchaser of goods in Canada should practice it and encourage others to do likewise. About fifty cents of every dollar spent on the product of a factory goes to the workingman. All interests are, therefore, combining in Canada during the next few months to increase employment by distributing as much as possible in the form of wages to the Canadian workmen in the Canadian factory. The campaign of the Canadian Press Association in this direction is most commendable, and will do much to restore confidence in the business and industrial community.

THE OUTLOOK IN CANADA

Handicap For Some Industries—Increased Activity For Others

Truly, it is an ill-wind that blows nobody good. One Continent's "down" is another Continent's "up." The industries of Europe are, generally speaking, at a standstill, and matters will be worse before they can be better.

The whole world is looking to the North American Continent—to Canada and the United States—for much of its provisions, machinery, textiles, boots and shoes, beverages, vehicles, cement, brick, earthenware, fancy goods, furs, glass, garments, paper, soap, tobacco, wood products, and much else. Canada must get ready to meet the demand made upon her. We have continued prosperity ahead of us if our manufacturers and merchants rise quickly to take advantage of their opportunity.

Encouraging Manufacturers

Last week was "Made in Winnipeg" week in the Manitoba capital, and manufacturers, retailers and citizens generally co-operated to bring the products of local industries before the public and to urge Winnipeg people to help build up a bigger and better city, by using goods made in local factories. The object is a most worthy and commendable one, and the response which has been made by the citizens shows that western cities, as well as the older cities of the East, are developing a civic pride and a local patriotism that will be for the good of the community."—From "Grain Growers' Guide," May 27, 1914.

WHITE AS A GHOST

Pale and sallow cheeks, with blanched lips and gums, and dark circles under the eyes, are the first signs that anaemia has begun its deadly progress. This first warning is followed by great weariness and breathlessness after any exertion. You grow melancholy, have frequent headaches, awake in the morning feeling tired. You become morbid and nervous, starting at the slightest noise, and your heart palpitates violently even on going upstairs. Most girls from fourteen to twenty suffer from anaemia. Neglect to supply new blood to the languishing, bloodless body, means a life of misery—indeed it is an open invitation to that most hopeless of all diseases, consumption.

The new, rich blood that cures anaemia and gives new health and strength is readily created by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. That is why these pills have cured more cases of bloodlessness and blood disorders than any other medicine. They have made thousands of girls and women strong, well and rosy, with bright eyes and new energy, just because they nourish the body with the new, rich, red blood of health. Here is a typical instance. Miss Laura Dempsey, Auburn, N.Y., says: "For several months I was in a very bad state of health, with many of the symptoms that accompany anaemia. I was pale and bloodless, had terrible headaches, would be breathless at the least exertion. Having tried a number of medicines without relief I naturally became discouraged and began to fear that I was doomed to continued illness. At this stage a friend who had herself been benefitted by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills urged me to try them. I did so and thanks to the pills I am now enjoying the best of health, and feel that I cannot recommend this splendid medicine too highly."

Other weak and ailing girls can also obtain new health and strength through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or they will be sent by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MAKING SUCCESS SAFE.

Success is a perilous thing. The danger is that, when we have succeeded, we shall begin to think that we ourselves were the real reason for the success. Yet there never would be such a thing as success anywhere except for God's permitting or ordering. And peculiarly is it true that whatever righteous success comes in the life of a Christian is the direct result of God's grace. Instantly and constantly we should remember that, and praise Him for having accomplished the result. An earnest Christian business man, commenting on the peril of the effect of large financial enterprises upon personal character, writes to a friend: "Oh, how few of us can be trusted with big financial enterprises. I have discovered that I am never so much a failure as when I am a success in any direction." We fail miserably indeed when we take to ourselves that which belongs to God. One of the first essentials in letting God make us constantly successful is to live in constant remembrance of the complete failure of ourself. When our worthless self recognizes its worthlessness, then He who always succeeds has a chance to work even through our worthless self.

THE GERMAN CASE.

If all that Germany contends in justification of this war were undisputed, the judgment of the civilized world would still be against her. Suppose that she were hampered by her rivals in the markets of the world, that she had not had her share in the division of Africa and Asia, that her expansion in Eastern Europe had been blocked by Russia, that her population had reached the limit of expansion of German territory, that in the picturesque figure of speech, which her advocates have invented, an iron ring were about her breast, the world would still be unmoved. On these grounds war cannot be justified. Germany must accept the rivalry of other nations and its consequences. She is not more distressed than Britain or France whose populations have reached the limit of expansion. There is ample room in the world for German colonies and in the habitable parts of the world. If there were not and emigrating Germans were obliged to seek a home under a foreign flag, the sentiment against that could not prevail against the right of weak nations to preserve their nationality and of the great nations to live in peace.—The Weekly Sun.

Frank Merkley, of Horning's Mills, met with a bad accident a wee ago Friday. He was working in a gravel pit on the townline when the top of the pit caved in, burying him up to the shoulders. It took about one hour to release him. He was bruised and his legs were hurt very badly.

SCOTCH WIT.

The following occurred in an hotel in the north of Scotland. One evening a young Scotch traveller, entering the commercial room, where several gentlemen were writing, sat down beside an old stager of the crusty port wine type. The young man looked new to the road, and not having opened conversation, the old toper thought him a likely subject for a butt. "Well," said he, "what sort of a house may you travel for? Some small affair, I suppose, for which you will turn over about as much as would pay my washerwoman's bill?" This exceedingly impertinent remark naturally excited the attention of several of the writers, who looked up, waiting for his reply. "Man," said the supposed greenhorn, "you maun be an awful dirty beggar!"

"ITCHING FOR A SCRAP."

Here is a cheery letter from a midshipman in one of the British battleships that are waiting for the German fleet to come out of hiding; it appeared in the London Morning Post:—"A rumor got about that we had been sunk, some wooden gear that we had thrown overboard being found. We have not been sunk yet, nor, I am sorry to say, have we sunk any Germans. By the time this appears, however, I hope we shall have met them, captured most of them, and sunk the rest. We are all itching for a scrap, and this routine is getting rather monotonous. We go to night defence-stations for three and a half hours every night, and sleep in our clothes during our watch off and after daylight. We go into harbor to coal every four or five days. In the daytime at sea we have nothing to do except rig night defence gear (searchlights are stowed below at daylight), do physical drill, run round the ship, etc., etc., to keep ourselves fit, and occasionally going to action stations. Of course there have been various alarms, when we have had to rush to our stations. But they are generally caused by some horse marine firing a gun by mistake, or by some swivel-eyed lookout seeing one of our own ships and thinking it the enemy, or mistaking a treacle-can for the periscope of a submarine. Anyhow, none of them have come to anything; but they tend to relieve monotony, although at the expense of sleep, which is a rare luxury, especially at night. We have to sleep in the signal house so as to be near the searchlights, and are waked up every two or three minutes by signalmen coming in and falling over our feet (I can imagine you saying it serves me right for having such big ones). It is the only place where they can switch on the light to read the signals, but in spite of these little inconveniences, I dare say we come off better than you. I am very sorry for everybody left at home; the war must affect them much more than it does us. I expect Hal is taking the war very seriously and thinks it 'balmy' that he can't go to the front or come to sea? I am not allowed to tell you anything, and so will write no more nonsense."

FOUGHT BY INSTINCT.

"On August 21 we were given orders to prepare for fighting, and the next day, about noon, the enemy attacked Mons. We were told that the Turcos were going to support us on the right and the Belgians on the left. Whether another body of Germans was holding them or not I don't know, but we didn't see anything of them for the next four days. I don't remember much about what happened. After the first hand-to-hand fight none of us were in our right senses. We fought by instinct, and never took the time to think what we were doing.

"All day long we fought, and at night we dug trenches. At first the officers directed us, but pretty soon it was every man for himself. We eight hundred odd were facing the attack of the entire 15th German army corps, made up of almost 100,000 men. We lost two-thirds of our regiment, and all but two of our officers, but we gave them all they were looking for.

CANADA'S DUTY.

National Ideals at Stake in Great European Struggle—How Canada Can Best Fulfil Her Obligation to the Motherland.

The Banner need make no explanation for reproducing the following article from the pen of Rev. Charles W. Gordon, of Winnipeg, better known perhaps by his pen name of "Ralph Connor." The deliverance is timely and shows clearly Canada's vital interest in the favorable issue of the present War.

I desire to express to my people of the Overseas Dominions with what appreciation and pride I have received the messages from their respective governments. . . . I shall be strengthened in the discharge of the great responsibility which rests upon me by the confident belief that in this time of trial the Empire will stand united, calm, resolute, trusting in God.—King George's Message to Canada.

The Motherland is confronting a necessity of national existence. We come to her aid in determination to ensure the safety of this Empire and defend our flag, our honor and our heritage.—Sir Robert L. Borden, Premier Dominion of Canada.

I have often declared that if the Mother Country were ever in danger, or if danger even threatened, Canada would render assistance to the full extent of her power.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Leader of the Opposition.

There is no place for pessimism on the part of any Britisher in this war. The outcome is assured—we shall win, and win completely. The gage of the German Kaiser and of his Prussian Junkertum, hurled in the teeth of Christian civilization, has been taken up, and the fight will go on until Democracy, Liberty and Law among the nations will triumph. But those cheery optimists who foresee a speedy end to this strife, and who picture a joyous jaunt through Unter den Linden for the Allies, can hardly be regarded as harmless lunatics, for harmless they are not. The sooner Canada realizes that this war is a stern business and that it will grow in desperation as the long weary months drag their terrible length through winter and perhaps through summer and through winter again the better it will be.

Let us make no mistake. No sudden rage, no fluke of diplomacy, not Austria's greedy ambition leaping at the chance of war afforded by the wicked act of a mad Servian student —not these things nor things like these have caused Germany to plunge into this war. Never did a nation more deliberately take a purposed and long planned step. For forty years Germany has cherished ambitions has fed upon philosophies, has extended her commerce, has built up her fortresses, has perfected her siege guns, has built her navy, has constructed her aerial fleet, has hoarded her gold has drilled her eight million soldiers, has fired her people with lust for the Satanic glory of war with one purpose, and one purpose only—that she might win in a supreme effort after world power, incidental to which is the crushing of France to the position of Portugal among the European nations, the absorption of small countries like Belgium, Holland and Denmark, and the extermination of hated Britain.

Upon this issue Germany stakes her existence, that Europe may be Germanized and a World Empire established greater than the world has ever seen, with colonies on every sea, built upon highly scienced brute force that knows no law but that of might and derides the Christian virtues as contemptible and utterly unworthy of the superman.

For this enterprise the Kaiser believes himself God annointed and God appointed. With him to-day stand the haughty aristocracy of Prussia and all the war caste of Germany, and behind them, united in a mad and deluded enthusiasm, stand as yet the German people to a man.

Victory for the Allies, therefore, means the dethronement of the Kaiser and his militaristic brood, the annihilation of the war caste and the smashing of the war machine. Nothing short of this will be accepted as victory by any of the allied nations. Nothing less than this would be worth fighting for.

But what does this mean? It means that the Kaiser will hurl into the last deadly battle every German soldier, every German ship and gun and every German dollar; for, while it is true that Germany will survive this war, it is true also that the Kaiser and his caste of war worshippers will not. They will be wiped out of existence, and they know it. Hence the desperate character of this conflict. There is no truce, not even a No peace is possible. Two sets of principles are locked in death grips—Force as an empire builder against the Will of a free people, Justice as an international arbiter as against the Sword of the mighty, international Honor as an eternal obligation rather than as a mere temporary convenience. These things make peace impossible, and these things make the war worth while.

What, then, is Canada's immediate duty? It stands clear as the morning sun above the prairie rim. The Empire stands to-day for Liberty, Justice, Honor among nations as among men; and Canada stands with the Empire for these. It is no longer a question of a colony giving support to the motherland. We have gone far past that. It is a question of whether Canada shall stand with the free nations who believe in government by free choice, justice among nations, honor as an eternal obligation, and with her last man and her last dollar fight for these things that determine a nation's character and its place in history. I repeat that it is no longer a question of aiding the motherland in a fight for national or Empire existence. Canada is herself a nation with a proud sense of nationhood. Canada's future is involved in this conflict, and with every instinct of her national soul and with every throb of her national life she hates and opposes the spirit, the ideals, the methods for which the German Kaiser with his Prussian Junkertum is now so desperately contending.

And how is Canada to fulfil her obligation as a nation in this world crisis? Our Government has done well, has given a splendid exhibition of efficient despatch in mobilizing, equipping and transporting to England's shores between 30,000 and 40,000 men in the short space of two months. But it is not, I repeat, a matter of contingents, one, two, or three. Rather must Canada, with calm, deliberate, clear-eyed purpose, make resolve that she is committed to this conflict to her last man and her last dollar, not for the Empire's sake alone, but for her own sake and the sake of her national ideals. And when once Canada has clearly conceived it as her obligation to throw her entire national life and resources into this conflict, the problem then becomes a very simple one, namely, one of administration.

If it is clearly understood that every fit Canadian man is pledged to this war, then first let the Government take immediate steps for the enrolment, not of 20,000, but of 100,000 or 200,000 Canadians available for active service. Then from these enrolled men let contingents be selected for immediate training and sent on to the front as soon as they can be equipped and fitted and as they may be needed.

I am no pessimist, but I confess that that long, swaying line of men, locked in deadly embrace on the French frontier, is ominous of possible disaster; these daring raids of German submarines are suggestive of dangers in a direction where we thought we were invincible. So far the war has gone well, but after all what signifies the loss of a few hundred thousand men to Germany out of her eight million soldiers, not to speak of the uncalled multitudes available out of her sixty-five millions of people? And we have yet to hear from Turkey—The possibilities of Islam as an anti-British force are faint it is true, but they are as yet unexplored. Then there is Italy. A sudden great disaster on the line of battle, which is by no means outside the fortune of war, a chance and fatal raid upon our fleet, an unforeseen combination of crushing calamities, all of which lie within the possibilities in war, might change in one week the hue of our horizon. What then? It is the commonplace of war that battles are lost before they are fought. Let Canada wake before it is too late. Regrets are cheap and, however bitter, are unavailing. Let Canada prepare eagerly, swiftly, surely prepare to-day, that in the last deadly crisis of the desperate fight she may be able to throw the weight of her young might upon the wavering line of battle and help to hurl the enemy backward in defeat. The final touch may be Canada's. There is no place for hysteria, but there is place for haste. Not a contingent but the whole nation will fulfil Canada's obligation; and not when the cry comes for help but now should the preparation be made.

With a clear conscience and a steadfast heart we can invoke the God, not of battles, but the God of Righteousness and Truth to our aid, but only after we have made our full preparation; and if by God's good hand our men should not be needed the loss is small, but if the day should come when there was desperate need for our men and we were found unready, not even God could help us then. The which may God forbid.

SPRING PIGS

Good Litters Depend Upon Feed and Breeding Stock

By H. T. Morgan in the Country Gentleman..

Probably not more than fifty per cent of the sows in the northern half of the United States raise two litters of pigs a year. In warmer sections nearly all swine raisers aim to have their sows produce a litter every six months. With such widely different conditions no fixed breeding rules will apply to all sections, but no matter what the part of the country every man wants each of his sows to produce a litter each spring. The breeder of pure-bred hogs wishes his litter to come early in March; the commercial hog raiser generally prefers to have the little fellows come a month later because of better weather conditions in April.

For early March litters breeding must begin about November twelfth. If the sow has reared a fall litter it is best to leave the pigs with her until about November tenth. A sow that has suckled a litter is pretty sure to be rather thin at this time, and she should be fed a good strong grain ration. It has been proved that a sow that is bred when moderately thin but gaining in flesh will have a stronger and more numerous litter than one that is in weakened condition or in high flesh.

It is unwise to depend entirely upon the boar less than one year old, as a boar does not reach full maturity until he is two or more years old; every breeder of experience knows that aged boars almost invariably produce better pigs. A commercial hog raiser in Missouri, who breeds and feeds thousands of hogs each year, uses about 200 boars, all of which must be between two and six years old. His experience has led him to discard any boar less than two years old.

A Kansas breeder, with a herd of twenty-five pure-bred Poland-China sows wrote that for ten years he had been changing boars each year and had always purchased from the best breeders. He said that the average weight of his hogs at eight months gradually diminished from 240 pounds to about 175 pounds, and that his brood sows, selected from the best litters of his own breeding, were "bred so fine that they would scarcely raise twins."

OLD SOWS ARE PROFITABLE.

Upon investigation I learned that he had been using boars from eight to ten months old. His practice was to purchase a good boar pig from a prominent breeder in June or July of each year. By November this animal would weigh 250 pounds. He would be used on the entire herd for spring litters, then would be shut up in a pen and held until May or June and used for fall litters. Then he would be fattened and sold. Result: For ten years this man had been using immature boars and the vitality and size of his market stock had been reduced fully forty per cent. Had this practice been carried on for another ten years I believe the herd would have been wiped out. I sold him a big, vigorous three year old boar, of a "bacon" breed, to which the twenty-five sows were bred. The litters came large and strong, and at eight months of age 198 pigs from these sows were put on the market weighing an average of 245 pounds. As a rule I do not advocate cross breeding, but here was a case in which the results were remarkable.

Second only to the folly of using immature boars is that of depending upon immature sows. Any sow that has proved her ability to produce good litters should be retained in the herd so long as her usefulness continues. Not long ago I consigned to public sale a six-year-old daughter of a famous Berkshire boar. She was sound and vigorous and bred to a good boar. I prevailed upon a young man to buy this old sow. Recently when I visited his farm he showed me the old sow nursing nine three-weeks-old pigs which I believe are the best I ever saw in one litter. A few years ago I saw on the farm of N. H. Gentry, in Missouri, a sow eleven years old that had always been a regular producer of large litters.

Exercise is too often overlooked or wholly neglected, especially among breeders of pure-bred hogs. Breeders of commercial hogs usually permit the boars to run with the herds, and though this practice is not to be commended in all cases it surely is preferable to close confinement. One man, who keeps 1500 brood sows and each year feeds for market 20,000 or more hogs, uses one vigorous boar to each pen of fifteen sows. The result is that he has market hogs weighing one pound for each day old.

Care and attention should not be relaxed after the sows have been bred and safely in farrow. It is essential that the sows have a well-balanced ration with rather a high percentage of protein. For dry-lot feeding there is no high-protein feed to equal tankage. Sows seem to do peculiarly well on this feed, and it should be supplied them in a slop, of which tankage composes about 8 per cent. of the total grain. When oil meal or middlings are fed the tankage content may be materially reduced. Sows that are in high flesh when bred should receive a less concentrated feed than the thinner sows, and for this reason it is frequently advisable to separate them into two or more lots, grading them on the basis of physical condition.

GREEN STUFF IN WINTER.

The hog likes variety in his feed, and this is a point that is too frequently overlooked. It is not difficult to vary the feeds occasionally and still maintain the balance. Mangels, sugar beets, cabbage, or an occasional feed of silage will be greatly relished by the hogs. Such a good investment. At one of the big garbage-feeding plants, where 5000 hogs are on feed all the time, the sole feed of the hogs on Sunday, when no garbage is collected, is corn silage, and the hogs consume it with relish.

A ration of corn alone is not good for brood sows; it is better to sell part of the corn and buy a little tankage and middlings to mix with the corn meal. This will make an acceptable and economical ration, both for the brood sow and for the breeding boar. Corn may be fed economically to brood sows up to about seventy-five per cent. of the ration. If alfalfa or bright clover hay is available the sows will consume a considerable amount of it to advantage, and it will reduce the amount of tankage required. It is especially desirable when the sows are in high flesh and it is desired to feed a bulky and satisfying ration without a large portion of fat-producing elements. Oats are excellent for brood sows, but usually the price makes them too expensive for hogs. Barley is one of the best feeds for hogs and in many parts of the country this grain may be fed economically; it should be ground.

Brood sows should be supplied with mineral nutrients. Ground limestone, ground phosphate rock, wood ashes, salt and charcoal should always be available. If sows are supplied with these elements there will be no complaint of their "breaking down" after farrowing. Do not feed sulphate of iron—copperas—to brood sows, but give this mineral to other hogs as a worm corrective.

Some weeks before farrowing the sows should be separated into lots of three or four to avoid danger of injury. Provision should be made so that each animal will have to exercise, either voluntarily or otherwise.

Brood sows must have a dry place in which to sleep. Dampness and cold will almost surely produce rheumatism, and a rheumatic sow has but small chance of rearing a litter.

The one thing in which I believe nearly every owner of hogs is grossly negligent is watering them in winter. The stomach of the hog is relatively smaller than that of other domestic animals. For that reason the hog requires a smaller bulk of food and water, but he requires it oftener. It is unnatural for a hog to drink large quantities of water, but he will drink with much relish a reasonable quantity once or twice a day in the coldest weather if it is offered to him clean and at a moderate temperature—not warm. If he does not drink it is probably because the water is impure or too cold.

MIRACULOUS CURE OF ASTHMA

Suffered Terribly for 15 Years Until He Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

"Having been a great sufferer from Asthma for a period of fifteen years (sometimes having to sit up at night for weeks at a time) I began the use of "Fruit-a-tives". These wonderful tablets relieved me of Indigestion, and through the continued use of same, I am no longer distressed with that terrible disease, Asthma, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives" which are worth their weight in gold to anyone suffering as I did. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers from Asthma, which I believe is caused or aggravated by Indigestion". D. A. WHITE

Had No Power Over the Limbs

Locomotor Ataxia, Heart Trouble and Nervous Spells Yielded to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It would be easy to tell you how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures locomotor ataxia and derangements of heart and nerves, but it may be more satisfactory to you to read this letter.

Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D. 3, Sombra, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and frequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had dizzy spells, had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbors of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

GETTING SERIOUS.

On a wounded soldier in East Prussia has been found a letter from the German Emperor to his "dear, faithful soldiers" which, after telling how badly Germany has been treated by the Allies, says:

"If Germany is dear to you, if your families are dear to you, if your culture, your faith, your nation, your Emperor are dear to you, you will offer the enemy worthy resistence.

"Not one step backward into our country; remember, behind us destruction is threatening, and it is only before us that our happiness lies.

"For your country, for glory, forward, my dear, my faithful friends."

Just think of that from a man who is responsible for all this awful slaughter and savagery! He does not think of what cruelties have been perpetrated upon Belgium and France by his soldiers, but is ready to howl before his country has been hurt. We have heard of the outrages of his troops on Belgian women and the cutting of the hands of children and hesitated to believe such things could be possible; yet Mr. D. Mayall, a resident of Toronto, who has just returned from the seat of war, recounted atrocities of the most hideous kind perpetrated upon a Belgian young woman, and went on to tell the Globe the following:

"Subsequently I saw hundreds of refugees from Ostend arriving in England, and as the vessels conveying these sorrow-stricken people touched the shore, I helped to lift dead children from the boats. I saw two children—boys of eleven and twelve, respectively—whose both hands had been cut off at the wrists by German soldiers, who has caught them playing by the roadside. These two children, before I left England, were lodged in the hospital at Dartford, Kent. Their name is Bruckwilder.

"At Fulwood, Preston, there is a little girl of nine years of age, who has been adopted by a lady there. This little one has lost all the fingers of both hands. At the time of my leaving, however, she had recovered sufficiently to be taken out of doors, but such is the horror of uniforms in the little one's mind that she screams with fright when she sees a policeman."

Germany has been sending her best men to be slaughtered, and people all over the world will feel sorrow for German mothers who are mourning and the families who are desolate, but there can only be contempt for the monsters who are beginning to whine already because they see what is coming to them. 'Germany must learn how it feels to have her country devastated by hostile armies. She will never experience the awful cruelties inflicted upon unfortunate Belgians, for no soldiers of civilization, outside of "cultured" Germany, would be guilty of such atrocities; but German cities should be made to pay war taxes; she ought to see her factories wrecked and the produce of her fields made to sustain invading armies.—Orange Sentinel.

THE SITUATION IN CANADA

In spite of its position as a member of the British Empire, Canada is an essential part of the American political sphere, and its relations to the old world cannot be without special interest to all inhabitants of the Western Hemisphere. If, as we believe, the future is to bring a federation of American powers, perhaps sooner and in a more intimate connection that the old world can for a long time attain, the troubles of Canada must always be of special interest to us as its nearest neighbor. The recent discussions by German representatives of the attitude which Germany might take under certain conditions toward Canada are therefore of more than academic interest to the United States. The occupation of Canada by Germany has been expressly disclaimed by the German representatives. The punishment of Canada by invasion and the bombardment or temporary occupation of its seaports is unlikely, but could hardly be a matter of indifference to our people. The position of the great Dominion from this point of view is no doubt equivocal; but we think that its people are quite justified in relying upon public opinion in America as a defence additional to the British powers of resistance and its own military possibilities.

In this connection we must congratulate ourselves upon the continuing cordiality of our relations with our neighbors to the north. The committee in charge of celebrating the hundred years of peace has wisely determined that these celebrations shall go on as originally planned, thus giving the world a striking object lesson of the blessings to be found in a neighborhood of unarmed goodwill in the very midst of a devastating war forced upon Europe by the uncertainties of an exaggerated militarism. We hope our readers will find material for their Thanksgiving thoughts in the kindliness of relations between our own and the Canadian peoples. We hope they will enter with enthusiasm into the proposed celebrations, and that these may tend toward a deepening and broadening of the mutual confidence and good understanding between the Dominion and our own people.

A curious and suggestive proof of the confidence we have in Canada is found in the statement by public officials across the border that already some 200,000 men from the States have volunteered for the army which Canada is preparing in defence of the British Empire. We are quite sure from the wide study of the American mind that there is absolutely no ill-will, on the part of any considerable minority even, of Americans toward the German people. We are equally sure that the evident sympathy of a large majority for the cause of the Allies is not founded on any thoughtless or indiscriminate admiration for Great Britain. But the mere fact that this large body of men has volunteered to cross the border to enlist for British aid shows with what deep-seated interest Americans would regard a serious threat against Canadian peace and prosperity.—Boston Congregationalist and Christian World.

TRUTH THAT HURTS.

Truth that is unpleasant is none the less true. A minister was speaking to parents on their responsibility for the salvation of their children. He spoke with the unsparing frankness of the gospel itself as he unhesitatingly declared to his parent listeners that unless the child—after coming to the age of responsibility—believes on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour, that child will not be with the parents before the Father in heaven. He went on to say that this is truth that a great many people do not like to hear. He even added that those whom he was addressing did not like to hear it. "But," said he, "I'd rather stand here and tell you something that you don't like to hear, than stand up there and face the charge that I did not tell you all that I should have told you." Truth that hurts may be truth that saves.

ROYAL YEAST
MAKES PERFECT BREAD

"NO SHOOTING—USE BAYONET"

From the Battle Front, via Paris, Oct. 20.—The German invaders in their effort to shorten their lines and rest their right wing further south-westward upon the English Channel are meeting with a vigorous offensive by the Allies. French marines yesterday put forth a fine effort against the Germans. The troops of Emperor William had tried a surprise attack on the marines Sunday, but they had held the field works against superior numbers. The fight lasted all day, and then the Germans contented themselves with cannonading the position of the marines.

A thick fog covered the entire region Monday and the marines, accustomed to such weather conditions, crept toward the German trenches. "No shooting," was the order; "use the bayonet!"

The marines got within thirty feet of the trenches before they were seen. It was too late for the defenders, who were bayoneted in the trenches and beyond the trenches as they ran. Four hundred German prisoners were taken.

One of the places where the French had been most harrassed is near the elbow of the western line. The important position there had been taken and retaken frequently during the last three weeks. Every time the Germans had been obliged to abandon the position they returned in greater force and pushed back the French by weight of numbers.

The French took the position for the twelfth time and held it for ten hours. Then came a shock of the human battering ram and the French gradually gave way. The Germans began fortifying the place, but while they were engaging in this task the earth heaved, and a deafening explosion occurred. The ten hours the French had held the point had been sufficient to mine every rod of the ground.

It is estimated that three German battalions were annihilated.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL

Work of November Meeting Concluded on Friday Afternoon

ommittee Appointed to Control Fund or $1,000 Creat- for War Relief Purposes

The County Council concluded the work of its November meeting on Friday afternoon, adjourning in time to allow the members from the north and west to have tea and leave for home on the evening trains. Last week's Banner gave a report of the proceedings up to the time of the adjournment on Wednesday afternoon.

Thursday morning's session was brief, the Council adjourning at an early hour to allow the Committees to get to work. The only items of business recorded were the presentation and adoption of the special committee's report on the Warden's address and the passing of a motion instructing the Clerk to have 300 copies of the minutes of the meeting printed and distributed as soon as possible. The Committee joined the Warden in expressing the hope that the present war might be brought to a speedy and successful issue and added its conviction that the people of Dufferin will always be willing to bear their share of the burden of sending men to the front or relieving the sufferings of the destitute. The report concluded with an appreciative reference to the Warden and his work, couched in the following terms. "We assure you that we appreciate the kindness you have shown us in all your deliberations during the year now drawing to a close and hope that you may be long spared to serve the County in your sphere of usefulness."

Thursday afternoon a motion was passed voting High Constable Marshall the usual grant of $50. The County Property and Education Committees submitted and secured the adoption of their reports. The former committee recommended the acceptance of tenders for gaol and poor house supplies as follows: —

Jno. Curry—milk, 7c. per qt.

Jno. McKim—meat, 12½c. per lb. for flank cuts; 6c. per lb. for shanks.

J. Kearns & Son—Black pepper, 25c. per lb.; Japan tea, 32c. per lb.; Redpath's granulated sugar, 7c. per butter, 23c. per lb.; white beans, 5c. lb.; rolled oats, $3.50 per 90 lb. sack; per lb.; pot barley, 4c. per lb.; Sunlight soap, 4½c. per bar; N.P. soap, 13c. per bar; Amber tobacco, 65c per lb.; Empire tobacco, 45c. per lb.; turnips, 10c per bush.; potatoes, 40c per bush carrots, 15c. per bush.; Canadian coal oil, 15c. per gal.; American coal oil, 17c. per gal.; eggs, 24c. per doz.; molasses, 40c. per gal.; broom corn, 35c. each; brooms, 4 cord, [illegible] each.

The Committee asked for and was given authority to have certain necessary repairs made to the Crown Attorney's office and vault. Chairman Fairbairn and Governor Bowles were authorized to purchase any needed clothing for the inmates of the gaol. The Committee recommended that the Council pass a by-law fixing the salary of Mr. Leeson, caretaker of the Registry Office, at $70 a year.

The Education Committee passed accounts amounting to $39.70 for services of the members of the Advisory Committee on Agriculture and in the next paragraph of its report recommended that the Council dispense with the services of this Committee.

The Finance Committee submitted its report on Friday morning. The Committee recommended that Council take no action with regard to Joseph Doust's bill for $87.14 for supplies ordered by J. M. Bennett, Clerk of the Orangeville Division Court. The reasons given were: "First, there is nothing before your Committee to show that the receipts of the office do not exceed $500 per annum, in which case the county is not liable, and, secondly, the amount of the bill is in our opinion far in excess of the requirements of the office for many years to come."

The Committee declined to make a grant to the Children's Aid Society, but suggested that the County grant the following special prizes to exhibitors from Dufferin at the Guelph Fat Stock Show:—Best Canadian bred Clydesdale mare any age, 1, $15; 2, $5; heavy draft gelding, 1, $10, 2, $5.00; best beef animal, 1, $10.00, 2, $5.00; best bushel white oats, any variety, 1, $5.00, 2, $3.00.

A by-law was put through defining the duties of the Caretaker of the Registry Office and fixing his salary in accordance with the recommendation of the County Property Committee.

The Committee on Roads and Bridges reported the construction of a number first-class steel and concrete bridges during the year. The bridges are all designed to carry a load of 15 tons and were described in the report as "extra heavy, well-built structures." The report furnished Council with a detailed description of each of the structures and a statement of its cost. The total cost in each case was as follows:—

Bridge on Mono and Amaranth townline—reinforced concrete throughout with slab floor supported by concrete beams; has concrete guard railing—$872.50.

The Kelsey bridge, East Luther and Melancthon townline, 53 foot steel truss with a reinforced concrete floor and abutments—$2116.93.

Small reinforced skew bridge on the Melancthon and Mulmur townline. Has flat top slab floor and concrete guard railing. Approaches not yet completed—$398.48.

Orton bridge, East Garafraxa and Erin townline—reinforced concrete with concrete beams and railing—$303.77.

Small reinforced concrete bridge with concrete slab floor and railing, at 15th line corner, Erin and East Garafraxa townline—$157.07.

Half the cost of these two bridges is payable by Wellington County.

Bridge on townline between East Garafraxa and Caledon, opposite con. A.—reinforced concrete abutments and slab floor, floor beams and guard railing of steel—$426.25.

Bridge similar to the one last mentioned on the East Garafraxa and Caledon townline opposite con. B.,—$126.38.

Park's bridge on the East and West Garafraxa townline—a small reinforced concrete bridge with slab floor and concrete guard railing, has not been passed by the Engineer as it is not constructed according to plans. If the contractor will do certain work, the bridge will be accepted and paid for less a deduction of $10 for rough work. Dufferin's share of the expenditure to date is $90.12.

Another small reinforced concrete bridge on the Mono and Mulmur townline has not been taken off the hands of the contractor, because it was not built in accordance with the specifications. The amount expended is $46.92. Repairs costing $52.55 were made to a bridge on the Mono-Caledon townline near Mono Mills. Half of this will be borne by Peel County.

The Committee recommended that no action be taken regarding the building of a bridge on the Dufferin-Wellington boundary line, opposite lot 12, con. 8, East Garafraxa.

Friday afternoon the Council spent considerable time in Committee of the Whole discussing the matter of making a grant to the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

After the Committee rose, Mr. Menary moved, seconded by Mr. Fairbairn,

"That this Council grant the Canadian Patriotic Fund the sum of $1000 to be in charge of a Committee appointed by this Council and that the Council place an insurance of $1000 per man on each member, whose name can be ascettained who goes to the front from the County of Dufferin."

In amendment Mr. Falconer moved, seconded by Mr. Raeburn,

"That this Comcil form a branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and credit this Fund with $1000, this amount to be paid out at the discretion of a Committee to be appointed by this Council."

The amendment was declared carried.

Warden Dryden, County Clerk Reid and Messrs. Fairbairn, Falconer and Menary were subsequently appointed a Committee to administer the Fund.

Shortly before the Council concluded the Warden was asked to vacate the chair and Mr. Reburn was appointed Chairman pro tem. It was then moved by Mr. Fairbairn, seconded by Mr. Menary,

"That this Council desires to thank the Warden, Mr. Thos. C. Dryden, and to convey to him the hearty approval and appreciation of its members for the very able, impartial and courteous manner in which he has presided over its deliberations during the present year."

After all the members had spoken to the resolution it was carried amid hearty applause. The Warden made a feeling and appreciative reply.

On motion Council adjourned sine die, the members uniting in singing the National Anthem before dispersing.

FLEMISH GIANT RABBITS

Are Said to Be the Largest Rabbits in Existence

Meat Claimed to Be as Good as Belgian Hare

The Flemish Giant is said to be the largest rabbit that lives. They have been known to weigh as much as 18 pounds, but I think the average weight is about 12 pounds when not fattened for killing. They are extremely hardy and very prolific. The writer has two does at the present, one raising eight and the other nine. One good doe with proper care will raise fifty young in one year, and be in good condition at the end of that time. They come in two colors—blacks and dark greys.

Their meat is said to be equally as good as the Belgian hare, which is said to be far superior to any other meats. The following, copied from a Belgian Hare Guide, may give the reader some idea of the value of rabbit meat.

Dr. A. S. Heath, of New York City, writes to the California Cultivator as follows: "There should be hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of rabbit meat shipped to our hospitals and sanitariums. For digestibility and nutritive value there is no meat comparable with that of the rabbit. Beef gives 55 per cent. of net nutriment, mutton 65, pork 75, chicken 50, while rabbit meat yields 83 per cent. of digestible nutriment far superior to any other meats. If obtainable, rabbit meat should be prescribed for fever patients, aged and feeble persons, consumptives and anaemic patients by physicians."

I believe what the doctor says to be true, for to my mind, when properly cooked, there is no nicer meat. The Belgian hare, or Rufus Red Belgian, as they are now called, is supposed to have originated in Belgium about the beginning of the 18th century. They were first introduced into England about 1850, where they were bred up after the style and color of the English wild hare. I was born and raised in Devonshire, England, where I have shot and captured many fine specimens of the wild hare, and about the only difference noticeable from that of the Rufus Red Belgian is in the ears, the wild hare having black tips extending about half an inch down on the outside of the ear, while the Belgian has just the black rim close to the tip of the ear. However, it is admitted by all fanciers that the Rufus Red Belgian hare is the most beautiful of all the rabbit family. They were introduced into the United States about 1888 or 1890, where they became very popular with the American fancier. Their meat is tender, rich and juicy and of a fine gamey flavor. Any person, whether in town or country, can make money by raising a few hares. They can easily be kept on what generally goes to waste about a house, such as apple parings, turnip, carrot or potato skins, bread crusts etc., with the addition of a little hay and grain. In the summer time they thrive well on weeds such as burdock leaves, wild mustard, dandelions, grass, clover, pea pods, cabbage and lettuce leaves and almost anything that grows, but it is best to always feed a little hay and grain as it keeps them in good condition.

Now, Mr. Editor, fearing I may be taking up too much space in your valuable paper, I will ring off.

Death of Miss Annie E. Moore

Regarding the death of Miss Annie Moore, the following is the account as it was given in the papers of Prince Rupert:—

"Miss Annie E. Moore, nurse at the General Public Hospital, in Prince Rupert, B.C., passed away very unexpectedly about midnight, October 30th.

Miss Moore went to bed on Friday evening at her usual hour and was in the best of health apparently. She gave no evidence of feeling other than well. One of the other members of the staff spent a half-hour with her in her room before she retired, leaving her about 10.30.

The following morning when Miss Moore did not appear at her usual hour, 6.30, another of the staff knocked at her door to arouse her. On receiving no response, the nurse entered the room. Miss Moore appeared to be peacefully sleeping. But life was extinct. She had, according to Dr. Wall, who examined the body, been dead for about six hours. A book that she had been reading lay beside her, and she had evidently passed away about midnight without any warning. The cause of death was heart failure.

Miss Moore was a valued member of the nursing staff, having been a member of it for about three years and a half. She had served in the hospitals at Lethbridge and Revelstoke in this province, and before coming here was matron of the hospital at Minnedosa, Manitoba. She was a very competent nurse and gave valuable services to the local institution.

The funeral services of the late Miss Moore were largely attended. The services were in charge of Rev. R. H. Grant of the Presbyterian Church, while Rev. Canon Rix, of the Anglican Church, who was a personal friend of the deceased, also took part in the ceremonies. The directors of the hospital were all present, together with the matron, Miss McTavish, the managing secretary, Mr. Wright, and all the nursing staff, who could possibly get away. In addition to these a large number of residents attended and the chapel was filled.

Rev. Mr. Grant spoke in the highest terms of the work of Miss Moore. Skilled in her profession, and with a most kindly personality, deceased made many friends who will deeply lament her unlooked for death.

In the evening the body was removed to the Government Dock, and placed on board the steamer Venture, by which it was carried to Vancouver—to be sent from there east."

The remains of Miss Moore arrived at Camilla, her old home, Tuesday evening. The casket was laden with beautiful flowers, bearing mute testimony to the high esteem in which the deceased was held. The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Wednesday afternoon, from the home of Mr. A. Mann, Camilla, to the family plot at Mono Centre. She is survived by six sisters, Mrs. A. Vanwyck, Villa Lea, Saskatchewan, Mrs. Duncan MacLean, Erin, Mrs. A. Mann Mrs. Joseph White and Misses Janet and Margaret, Camilla. The sorrowing sisters have the deepest sympathy of their wide circle of friends in their trying bereavement.

"She has but passed
Beyond the mists that blind us here,
Into the newer and larger life,
Of that serener sphere.
And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear, immortal spirits tread,
For all the boundless universe
Is life! There are no dead!"

Robert Bertram, Bert Wetheral and Dr. Mallory were the Toronto members of the party, which made its headquarters at Collins Inlet on the North Shore. The hunting was excellent and the hunters experienced little difficulty in securing their full quota of deer. The trophies of the chase included two fine moose, one of which was shot by Mr. Large. One of the exciting experiences of the outing was a two mile canoe trip with this moose. After getting the moose to the water's edge he was placed on some boards supported on two canoes placed side by side. The five hunters, two guides, dogs and guns completed the load, which was heavy enough to bring the frail craft dangerously near the water line.

Church Friends of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Varcoe Testify to Their Esteem

In the departure of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Varcoe to Toronto, says the Star & Vidette, Grand Valley loses a most estimable family and the Methodist church loyal supporters and faithful workers. Their friends in the church gave them a little surprise after prayer meeting on Thursday evening when Mr. E. H. Lindsey read an address appreciative of the interest taken and work done in the church, and for their loyal support during the last eighteen years. Accompanying the address was an engraved gold headed cane for Mr. Varcoe, an engraved gold headed umbrella for Mrs. Varcoe and a remembrance for Miss Marjorie and Master Britton. Mr. Varcoe replied in suitable terms and after others had expressed a few words of regret at loeing the family, refreshments were served. While Mr. and Mrs. Varcoe will be missed in the work of the church, they will also be missed equally by the young people of the village, who always found a hearty welcome at the home. Mr. Varcoe and Miss Gladys went to Toronto Friday morning, Mrs. Varcoe, Miss Marjorie and Master Britton remaining over.

During the last few days Mrs. Varcoe received further tributes of appreciation for her endeavors in various lines. The Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, presented her with a certificate of life membership that had been secured some time before. Mrs. Varcoe was treasurer of the local organization for twelve years. Then as an active member of the Women's Institute, she received from it a member's pin, there being a large attendance at the meeting on Tuesday.

WE sold more overcoats than we ever anticipated---and this despite the fact that some people think business is 'off.'

WE showed young men that this was a young men's store. We showed middle-aged men and older men that we specialized in overcoats for them. We showed tall men, short men, stout men, rich men and poor men that we had them in mind when we assembled our stocks.

WE'RE showing a stock of overcoats that is worth seeing whether you want a coat or not---it will give you an insight into the big, broad way we do things. Remember every style, every size, any price, every good fabric, and specially fine values at

Can your parents read and sew as well as they used to, or does reading and sewing fatigue them?

A pair of Glasses properly fitted would be a constant pleasure and comfort to them. The value of a gift lies in its value to the recipient, and if they see you have given the matter a little thought and asked yourself what is best adapted to their requirements it will be appreciated vastly "more" than the money value

HEROIC BELGIUM.

(The "Outlook," New York.)

And now Antwerp has fallen again, after a heroic fight against overwhelming odds. Its beauty, like that of Louvain, Malines, and other historic towns stored with the treasures of mediaeval architecture and art, has been blurred; but it has added a glorious chapter to history. Belgium is a little country but a great nation. It stood in the path of an almost invincible military power; its fields have been ravaged; some of its cities have been almost completely blotted out; its soldiers have been killed by the tens of thousands; it is said that three millions of its people are in exile. But, blurred and all but crushed, it has stood as a heroic protagonist of the principle of nationality—a principle not identified either with extent of territory or magnitude of population. It has illustrated again the indomitable spirit of humanity; unafraid in the presence of almost certain disaster, undismayed at the approach of almost certain death. Wars are made by the size of armies and the number of battles; but wars are made by the human qualities they display. Belgium has struck the highest note that has been heard above the din of these awful conflicts. She had nothing to gain; she had everything to cost; she obeyed that instinctive lose. She did not stop to count the sense of honor which is an absolute standard and imposes an absolute duty. She has not stopped to reason why.

She has been the victim of one of the greatest crimes against any nation in the history of the world. What her immediate fate may be no man can foresee. Those who believe in a divine justice in the world will not hesitate to affirm that such a spirit as hers cannot be buried in the ruins of cities nor crushed by the iron hand of war.

Mrs. Silas Anderson and her little son, of Crossland, suffered a severe accident recently. The former was descending from her bedroom, slipped and lost control of the lamp which she carried. It fell and there followed an explosion which caused serious injury to her, while her little son was fatally injured and died a few days afterwards. Mrs. Anderson is in a precarious condition. Mrs. Anderson was formerly Miss Patterson, of Thornton.

BEEKEEPERS' CONVENTI'N

Apiarists Are Optimistic in Spite of the War Times

The sessions of the recent Annual Convention of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association were held in the York County Council Chambers, Adelaide Street, E., Toronto. President, J. L. Byer, Markham, occupied the chair at all of the sessions except Wednesday afternoon when the Association was honored by having the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Mr. W. B. Roadhouse, in the chair. Mr. Roadhouse expressed his pleasure at meeting with the beekeepers to learn of their aims and ambitions.

All the sessions were well attended. In fact, the beekeepers in spite of war times and the failure of the 1914 honey crop are optimistic and have adopted the now almost universal slogan "Business as usual."

The report on apiary inspection given by the Provincial Apiarist shows that while European Foul Brood is rapidly spreading over the eastern part of the Province and the zealous co-operation of bee-keepers themselves is necessary to keep it in check, progress is being made in stamping out the American Foul Brood which has been so persistent in some of the southwestern counties.

Mr. Sibbald, of Toronto, in an address on "Putting Up a Honey Exhibit," showed the advantage from an advertising standpoint of displaying honey not only at the Canadian National Exhibition, but at all of the fall fairs. He urged every beekeeper to take an interest in local displays of this nature.

"Sweet Clover, Its Culture and Uses," was discussed by Wm. Linton, of Aurora. Mr. Linton told how he had made $2000 in one season by selling the seed from a thirteen acre field of this plant. Farmers in his community are using it to restore fertility to the back fields which usually do not get their share of barnyard manure. Mr. Linton stated that he had as good results from ploughing under a green crop of sweet clover as from putting on a coating of manure. He also mentioned results which had been obtained by the Chemical Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, which go to show that for storing nitrogen in the soil sweet clover is of far greater value than any other clover grown.

THE TUG PEDWELL NEARLY LOST

Big Seas Swamped Fires of Owen Sound Boat

On Sunday afternoon the tug Henry Pedwell, Captain Charles Pedwell, in charge, came within an ace of finding a resting place beneath the waters of Georgean Bay off Cape Croker in the midst of a gale of wind and heavy running seas. As it was she was rescued with some difficulty by the tug Geo. H. Jones and convoyed into the safety of North Bay near Cape Croker. The Pedwell was coming on Sunday morning with a load of three thousand bushels of peas from Lion's Head to Wiarton. The seas were running high and looked dangerous but the captain decided to make the attempt to round the cape and continue on his way to Wiarton. Coming into the teeth of the wind and taking the full force of sea and gale the staunch tug shipped a sea and had hardly righted when another monstrous roller swept over her and the water poured in hundreds of gallons down all the openings and into the engine and boiler room. In a few minutes another huge roller and another swept over the tug and she went down perceptibly in the water. But this would not have mattered if the water had not flowed into the engine room and to the fires and come up around the base of the boiler. This left the craft without head and at the mercy of the waves, wallowing like a dead thing and making heavier weather of it all the time. The captain took in the situation coolly and ordered his men to cast off the yawl and prepare to abandon the boat and make for the shore which showed up steep and forbidding at the distance of about a mile. The clothes of the crew were hurriedly tossed into the yawl and they prepared to cast it off because the tug was down by the deck and every wave which crashed along was filling her a little more. It was at this juncture that the tug Geo. H. Jones, of Owen Sound, Captain Rumley in charge, came along. The crew of the Jones came in sight of the Pedwell and were passing to windward when they noticed something peculiar in the manner in which the Pedwell was acting. The wind was blowing a gale and the waves were bounding like mad. A ribbon of steam could be seen coming from the siren of the Pedwell and shortly after one of the crew of the latter boat could be seen wildly waving his coat from the deckhouse and making frantic signals which were interpreted to mean that help was wanted. The Jones came around and when they were near the Pedwell they could see what the trouble was at once. The yawl from the rescuing tug was launched and a line was passed to the Pedwell and the Jones took the water-logged craft in tow for the shore, finally making North Bay. Once in the shelter of the harbor the crews of both tugs set about getting the water out of the Pedwell. This was accomplished in about three hours with a steam pump and a siphon. It was found that a considerable portion of the cargo of three thousand bushels of peas was spoiled by the wet. The peas would be worth about four thousand dollars. In the afternoon the Jones pulled out for Owen Sound, light, with a scow in tow. The Pedwell, pumped out and with steam up again, also set out and accompanied the Jones for the greater part of the way to Wiarton. The escape of the tug and crew was narrow enough, for though they might have been able to make the shore in the yawl there was always the possibility that it would be smashed in the launching and then the crew would have been almost certainly lost. The tug could not have lived more than half an hour longer, probably not that with the kind of sea that was running. As an instance of the force of the gale that was blowing, the Jones had her engines taking every ounce of steam they could and did not make more than a mile or a mile and a half an hour during the day.—Owen Sound Times.

COMRADESHIP IN THE FIELD.

English newspapers which have been received contain a pleasant anecdote of the fighting at Mons. It comes from the French paper, the Liberte, and concerns a Scottish regiment which is not named. This regiment was occupying a trench, swept by violent rifle fire and artillery fire, when two privates noticed that a Frenchman attached to the battalion as interpreter occupied the most exposed spot in the trench. One private said: "The Frenchman is badly placed; let's widen his trench," and during a minute, paying no attention to the hail of bullets and shrapnel, the privates deepened the trench, and with the same calm, resumed their places.

A young man named Joseph Bailey, employed with a Chinguacousy farmer named Graham Crawford, disappeared while Mr. Crawford was away from home. It was found that a silver watch, a gold chain, a locket and cham, a pair of boots and a pair of gloves had also disappeared. Bailey was arrested in Georgetown and taken to Brampton to stand his trial.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich. — "I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.

In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

CARNEGIE'S MOTHER.

Andrew Carnegie, talking to a group of girl employees in a newspaper office, told them how much he owed to his mother:

"I shall never forget how proud I was when I got my first wages of $1.25 a week, and how I felt when I was raised to $1.50 as a telegraph operator. To take home that sum to my good mother gave me such a feeling of manly independence. I owe a great deal to my mother. She was a seamstress, cook, washlady, and never until late in life had a servant in the house. And yet she was a cultivated woman. When I was a little tot she used to read good books to me."—Ex.

GLORIOUS HAIR

Girls and women of all ages want to be beautiful and attractive, but unsightly, thin and lifeless hair destroys half the beauty of a pretty face.

If your hair is losing its natural color, is falling out, dull, streaky, full of dandruff, too dry, or if the scalp itches and burns do not be alarmed, use Parisian Sage. Rub it well into the scalp. It will go right to the hair roots, nourish them, and stimulate the hair to grow long and beautiful. It removes dandruff with one application, stops itching scalp, falling hair and makes the head feel fine.

Parisian Sage supplies the hair with what is needed to make it soft, thick and gloriously radiant. It is sold in fifty cent bottles by F. S. Pickering, and at all drug counters. Look for the trade mark—"The Girl with the Auburn Hair." Accept no other.

SAVED BY HIS OFFICER.

In the course of a letter home, Lance-Corporal J. Preston, 2nd Battalion Inniskilling Fusiliers, writes:

"I was lying wounded and sleeping on the field when an Artillery major picked me up and took me to the artillery camp, and gave me in charge of the Medical Corps. Only for that I never would have seen England again."

Private James Allan, a Gordon Highlander, who has returned from the front, bears testimony to the heroic bearing of the officers. What they seemed to be chiefly concerned about was the proper protection of their men, and in regard to their own lives they took extraordinary risks.

THE SAUCY ARETHUSA.

The Arethusa, the ship which played so important a part in the fight off Heligoland, bears a famous name. In the great French war there was a famous frigate, "the Saucy Arethusa," which fought an action with a French vessel which was immortalized in one of Dibbin's most celebrated sea songs. The Admiralty has ordered the following verses from that song to be engraved upon a brass plate and fixed in a conspicuous place on H. M. S. Arethusa of to-day:

Come, all ye jolly sailors bold,
Whose hearts are cast in honor's mould,
While English glory I unfold,
Huzza for the Arethusa;
Her men are staunch
To their fav'rite launch,
And when the foe shall meet our fire,
Sooner than strike we'll all expire
On board of the Arethusa.

And, now we've driven the foe ashore
Never to fight with Britons more,
Let each fill his glass
To his fav'rite lass;
A health to our captain and officers true,
And all that belong to the jovial crew
On board of the Arethusa.

All the ships which took part in the action off Heligoland, are to have the words "Heligoland, August 28th, 1914," painted in gold lettering in some convenient place.

HOW SIR A. CRAIG DIED.

Sir Archibald Gibson Craig, of the Highland Light Infantry, a lieutenant, was in charge of sixteen men, and the party was proceeding to a somewhat steep hill when they came across a large number of Germans, the enemy's force being estimated by the H.L.I. privates who told the story at between 300 and 400. The men had not been aware they were so close to the Germans, but when Sir Archibald recognized the position he drew his sword, and, holding it aloft, shouted, "Charge, men! At them!" rushing in front of his small force himself. "Our men fired a volley and then charged with fixed bayonets," said one of the soldiers. "The Germans in the rear apparently thought there were more troops than really were, for they retreated. Our men had, however, soon to retire, two being killed and three wounded, and the remainder got back safely, carrying the bodies of their dead comrades and also the wounded men. Sir Archibald Gibson was shot through the mouth, and I think he must have been instantly killed."

THE BIRDS ARE GONE.

The birds are gone; the woods are still;
In shaded vale, on wooden hill,
Hushed is the wild bird's merry song
That cheered the wild woods all day long.
Where once the woods with music rang,
And nature's sweetest songsters sang,
The wintry winds now fill the air
With ceaseless moaning everywhere.
The merry wren, the saucy jay,
The bobolink with soulful lay,
The oriole on topmost bough,
Singing and swinging—are silent now.
But then, when lovely springtime comes,
We know that from their southern homes,
A myriad throng, sweet singers all,
Will from a thousand treetops call,
Singing their songs, so rich, so rare,
God's winged minstrels of the air,
Filled with His love, their voices raise,
Chanting loud anthems in His praise.

Much Pain From Kidney Disease

Kidney derangements are often associated with disorders of the liver and bowels, and under these conditions ordinary kidney medicines usually fail to effect cure. It is because of their unique, combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so generally successful, even in the most complicated cases.

Mr. Emanuel Bernard, farmer, St. Paul's, Kent county, N.B., writes:—"About eighteen years ago my wife was bad with kidney disease, and suffered greatly from headaches, pains in bowels and stomach, and her heart was affected. For a year she was treated by her doctor, with no apparent benefit. She then used five boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with most satisfactory results. This gave us such a good opinion of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills that we always keep them in the house to be used for all derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 35c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXCHANGED THEIR HEADGEAR

One of the finest acts of humanity recorded from the battlefields is the following, related by a wounded soldier in Liverpool.

The wife of a colonel was making the round of a Liverpool hospital and stopped at the bedside of a wounded Highlander—a very bad case. The gallant fellow, one of whose legs had been recently amputated, was toying with a German helmet, evidently a trophy of war.

"Well!" said the visitor, "I suppose 'you killed your man?"

"Well, naw," modestly replied the soldier. "You see it was like this. He lay on the field pretty near me with an awfu' bad wound. I was losin' a lot o' blood fra' this leg o' mine, but I managed to crawl up to him an' bound him up as best I could. He did the same for me.

"An' this, o' coorse, wi' nathin' at a' said between us, for I knew nae German an' the ither man no' a word o' English. When he's done, not seein' hoo else to thank him, I just smiled; an' by way o' token handed him my Glengarry, an' he smiled an' gave me his helmet."

ALWAYS BETTER.

Our best blessing of the past is limit for to-day's blessing. If day cannot be better than all past, then our Lord is not what chains to be. But we know that is better than any claim that language can express. Writing young man who, at a summer ference during the first week of vacation had received one of greatest spiritual blessings of life, a friend said: "I hope your ond vacation week was a refresh and restful one,—better even than first. We don't have to be at Princeton Conference to find Lord giving us ever-increased things in himself, and saying 'Behold, I make all things Where He is it may always be better than the best yesterday we knew. And where we are is when He is." That is our guarantee an always better life.—Christ

Yet neglect of this internal bathing shows itself in spotty, and sallow complexions—as well as in dreadful headaches and biliousness. Deafness Cannot Be Cured

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

CLEVER CRIPPLES.

Talleyrand, the notorious French statesman, friend of Napoleon, and ambassador at the English court, was designed for a military career, but an accident when one year old rendered him a cripple for life. His cunning cleverness, political penetration, adroit intrigues, and ingenious subterfuges were vehemently opposed by the Emperor's wife Josephine, who energetically denounced him as a "cursed cripple."

Josiah Wedgwood, the famous potter and scientist, suffered from a disease of the right knee, which necessitated the amputation of the limb. Referring to this infirmity, Mr. Gladstone once declared: "It sent his mind inwards; it drove him to meditate upon the laws and secrets of his art. The result was that he arrived at a perception envied by an Athenian potter."

The early years of John Flaxman, who designed the choicest specimens of Wedgwood ware, were spent behind his father's shop counter, propped up by pillows, and amusing himself by drawing and reading. It was a long time before he could walk, and he only learned to do so by hobbling along on crutches.

Alexander Pope, the poet, is said to have inherited from his father his physical deformity and from his mother her violent headaches. Little more than four feet in height, his bodily infirmities rendered his life one long disease, yet he labored incessantly, and received £5,320 for his translation of the "Iliad."

Mrs. Browning, the distinguished poetess, was of a delicate constitution, and never enjoyed robust health. Her sufferings were due to an accident which happened in her sixteenth year. She was one day trying to saddle her pony in a field when she fell, with the saddle upon her, incurring an injury to the spine. The after-effects were so serious that for years she had to recline on her back.

Both Lord Byron and Sir Walter Scott were lame. Sir Walter's lameness was caused by a kick from a horse when acting as quartermaster of the Edinburgh Light Cavalry.—Northern Weekly Gazette.

J. W. Hamilton, of the Shelburne Roller Mills, and Mrs. Hamilton were at Embro last week attending the funeral of the former's brother, Andrew Hamilton, who died on Sunday.

Captain George Endacott Writes Delightful Descriptive Letter

Finds Climate in England to His Liking.

Sheriff and Mrs. H. Endacott have received the following delightful letter from their son, Capt. Geo. Endacott, who was one of the British Columbians who enlisted in the first Canadian Contingent.

5th Battalion, 2nd I. Brigade,
West Down, South Camp,
Salisbury Plains, Eng.
Nov. 11, 1914.

Dear Father and Folk at Home,—

Your letter of the 21st reached me "o.k." also got some of the beautiful maple leaves from Maple Brae, which Douglas left over for me on Sunday. I unfortunately didn't see him, as I was in London for the day. The boys he saw, however, reported that he was looking very fit, had a good horse, and was in the best of spirits. I met some of his officers at The Savoy and put in a word for him. Their camp is over at Pond Farm, about three miles from here. We are kept on the go pretty much, so that one can hardly find time to walk that far.

I didn't get a chance to look up the Gays, or any relations when we were at Plymouth, as we only had a few hours shore leave and we drove out on the London Road as far as Ivy Bridge. I liked the Devonshire country very much, and the people gave us a wonderful reception. Unfortunately we travelled at night, so I didn't get a chance to see the country. We are 20 miles from Salisbury City. It is a delightful hour's run in a motor, along beautiful roads and through pretty, thatched villages, old but well kept. The hedges and rows of elms along the road are wonderful and right now the copper beeches have wonderful tints as well as the many oaks. I enjoyed my four days in London and took in many points of interest, besides a couple of shows. The traffic on the streets of London is something marvellous and the drivers of taxicabs and busses, beat anything I ever saw for avoiding collisions, etc. I took in London Tower, and the Tower Bridge, Billingsgate Fish Market, House of Lords and Commons, Art Gallery and Hyde Park. On Sunday afternoon I got out to the Zoo at Regent's Park, and enjoyed looking around there. It covers about 34 acres and they have a wonderful collection. The King was down to review a week ago to-day and Sir Richard McBride was with him. McBride was in London when I was there, but I did not get to see him, as he was very busy and I could not wait around all day myself, with so much to be seen. "Business as Usual" in London, and one can hardly realize that just across the Channel a few miles, one of the greatest wars of the ages is being waged.

They have organized the battalion again under the new regulations and made, what they call four double companies; that is, they take two of the old companies and make into one, under a Major or a Captain, a second in command, and four Subalterns. They have so many Majors that I wasn't able to draw a double company, but was left on old company, and given charge of the base company. This company consists of 105 men and it is from it that the casualties are made up. It stays about 50 to 100 miles behind the firing line and sends on fresh men as they are needed. We get more regular food and sleep than on the firing line, but, of course, one does not know how long he will be left there. It all depends on circumstances, but I don't think I will be taken up, unless to take charge of a double company.

I haven't been on the base long enough to express an opinion, except that I am still my own boss. However, it will mean the breaking up of the British Columbia boys I brought with me, as they will be drafted to one company or another as they are needed and fresh ones from the brigade left in England sent over to take their places. This they do not like and at present are kicking hard.

There is nothing new about when we will go to the Front; in fact rumors have been about, that we may be sent to Egypt against the Turks. Only three brigades will be sent at the start and we hear that ours is one of them for sure.

Capt. Morgan is well and tents with me, but is attached to a double company as only one officer goes with the base, according to the establishment. We have had a lot of rain. I like the climate myself and it is a trifle milder I think so far than Vancouver. We have a lot of men away at present building huts at a place, Lark Hill, which is six miles from Salisbury. We expect to go into these soon and they will be much dryer and warmer than tents. I am in good health and weigh more than when I left. My left knee is a little strained at the end of a 12 mile route march, which we are continually having. Outside of that I am fine.

When I was in London I purchased a Jaeger sleeping bag, which is very warm and we ought to have had it in Quebec; also got a Wolseley sleeping valise, a kind of waterproof which goes over it and which makes it complete. We also have an oil burner in the tent to dry things and make a cup of cocoa at night.

The Brigade Ralph was with (the 36th Battalion was part of it) is in camp at Bustard. There is talk that they will be the one to be left in England.

Best love to all,
GEORGE.

MRS. W. E. McKAY

Death of Widow of Former Pastor of St. Andrew's Church.

The death occurred at her home on West Broadway at 6.30 o'clock on Tuesday morning of Mrs. Angelina McKay, relict of the late Rev. W. E. McKay, one of the pioneer Presbyterian ministers of this district. The late Mrs. McKay, who was in her 81st year, had been in failing health for several months and her demise had been expected for some days. By her death Orangeville loses another of its early residents and a woman who was held in high esteem by all classes and denominations of our citizens. Her husband, who died in 1885, was pastor for many years of the Old Kirk congregation in Orangeville, which, prior to the union, worshipped in a stone church which stood on the ground now occupied by the Orangeville Post Office. After the union in 1880 Mr. McKay became pastor of the newly organized congregation of St. Andrew's, to whose spiritual wants he ministered until his retirement from the active work of the ministry late in 1881. The late Mrs. McKay is survived by a family of four sons and three daughters. The former are Messrs. Edmund and Willis McKay, of the National Biscuit Company, New York, W. J. L. McKay, barrister, of Toronto, formerly Crown Attorney of Dufferin, and Kenneth McKay, municipal reporter for the Toronto Evening Telegram. The daughters are Mrs. A. Mackid, Patterson, N.J., Mrs. G. W. McKee, of Toronto, and Miss Emma McKay at home. A daughter, the late Mrs. J. F. Dodds, died eight years ago. The late Mrs. McKay is survived by 15 grandchildren and 9 great grandchildren. Deceased lady was a Canadian by birth, having been born in Carden East. She was a descendant of an old United Empire Loyalist family, which came to Canada from Vermont at the time of the American Revolution. Mr. Isaac Lockwood, a well-known citizen of Napanee is a brother.

Mrs. McKay was a member of St. Andrew's Church and was at various periods during her life identified with all the departments of active church work. She was a woman who enjoyed the good will and love of all who knew her. By her close friends she was held in the sincerest affection and the memory of her upright life and character will be long and tenderly cherished.

The funeral will be held from her late home to the Forest Lawn Cemetery at 2.30 o'clock this (Thursday) afternoon. A short service will be held at the house at 2 o'clock.

Funeral of Mrs. Harry Clark

The remains of Mrs. Harry Clark, whose sad death at Delisle, Sask., was reported in last week's Banner, reached Orangeville on Saturday night accompanied by her young husband, their little son and Mrs. Clark's father, Mr. J. M. Rowan. The funeral, which was a very large one, was held from her parents' residence on York St. to Greenwood cemetery on Monday afternoon, Rev. G. W. Robinson, pastor of Orangeville Methodist Church, conducted the solemn service at the stricken home and afterwards read the burial service at the grave. The casket was almost hidden by the many beautiful floral tributes that bore mute but convincing testimony to the love and sorrow of numerous friends. Among these was a beautiful wreath from the Ladies' Aid Society of the Union Church, Delisle. The remains were borne to their last resting place by Messrs. J. C. and J. E. Rowan and W. Parks, of Toronto, Ernest Horne, of Whitby, Willie Thomas, of Alton, and Mac Rowan, The Maples. Before leaving for Ontario the body was taken to the Union Church in Delisle, where an impressive funeral service was held, Rev. Mr. Thorne, Methodist minister, and Rev. Mr. Macdonnell, the Presbyterian minister, taking part. The interior of the church was heavily draped in black and purple and a large concourse of sorrowing friends completely filled the edifice.

Mrs. Sirr's Death

Circumstances in connection with the death of an aged woman named Mrs. Ann Sirr at her home on Sarah St. on Saturday afternoon caused Dr. James Henry to decide to hold a Coroner's inquest. This took place on Saturday night, Coroner Dr. James Henry presiding and County Crown Attorney J. L. Island conducting the examination of the witnesses. The witnesses called were Dr. T. H. Henry, who had examined the body, Thos. Campbell, son-in-law for whom Mrs. Sirr kept house, and Wm. Campbell and Mrs. Violet Marshall, two grandchildren. The jury brought in a verdict of death from natural causes brought on by old age and organic heart trouble. The jurors were Robert Curry (foreman), John Cruikshank, Wm. Hatcher, James Creary, Arch. Irwin, Jos. Holmes and Fred. Manning. Campbell had been tardy about calling in a doctor, but beyond this there was not any evidence of wrong doing. Mrs. Sirr was 72 years of age and had lived with Campbell and looked after his children since the death of his wife a number of years ago. She has a brother in the West, who is said to be wealthy. He was here a few years ago and wanted to take his sister to live with him, but it is said she declined to leave Orangeville and the children, whom she had promised her daughter she would care for. The funeral was held to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Monday, Rev. G. W. Robinson conducting the services.

S. T. Newton Will Be Superintendent of Extension Work

Head of Technical Department at Kelvin Goes to Agricultural College.

The appointment of S. T. Newton, head of the technical department of the Kelvin Technical school, to the position of superintendent of extension work at Manitoba agricultural college is announced. Mr. Newton was brought up on an Ontario farm and spent several years in farming. After completing the Ontario High School course, he spent one year in Toronto University, and later had considerable experience as a teacher in the rural schools of Ontario and Manitoba. During recent years he has been identified with the manual training department of the Winnipeg schools as assistant superintendent; and for the past two years has been head of the technical department at the Kelvin High School, and principal of the evening classes at the same school, where 1,500 students are in attendance.

Mr. Newton was one of the first students in special courses at Manitoba agricultural college. He afterwards studied at Stout Institute, Menomonie, Wis., Bradley Polytechnic Institute, Peoria, Ill., and at Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York.

In addition to his connection with Winnipeg schools, Mr. Newton has been, for the past five years, in charge of the Agricultural Society work being carried on in Manitoba by the Dominion Commission of Conservation, and is, therefore, very familiar with agricultural conditions within this province. He has made a careful study of the problem of vocational education in its relation to the farming and manufacturing industries; and, being possessed of unusual organizing ability, is singularly well qualified to take charge of his new work.—Winnipeg Telegram.

Mr. Newton is a former Mono boy and took his High School course in Orangeville.

Received Maple Leaves

Miss Louise McGuire was one of several Orangeville people, who sent maple leaves to England a couple of months ago in response to a request which appeared in the Canadian press about that time. The other day Miss McGuire received the following letter acknowledging receipt of her collection:—

London, Nov. 11th, 1914

The collection of maple leaves which you have been so good as to forward, in response to the request recently put forward in the Press, has duly reached me and I beg that you will accept my cordial thanks for the trouble you have taken.

Many applications for Maple Leaves are received here throughout the year, from all parts of the United Kingdom, in connection with Anglo-Canadian and other similar events, and it is only by such friendly co-operation as you have shown that we are able to meet them.

Yours Faithfully,
W. L. Griffiths.

Amaranth's Contribution

Amaranth township's contribution to the Patriotic Fund consisted of two cars of wheat, oats, potatoes, some dried apples and a cash balance of $52.75. The potatoes, oats and apples were forwarded to the Department of Trade and Commerce at Montreal. The cash balance was sent to the Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance at Ottawa. THE MILLENNIAL

Have Had Six of Them and Now in the Seventh

Sam. Stump Figures Out Exactly Where the World is At.

Orangeville, Nov. 27th, 1914.

Dear Editor,—

Thanking you for the space given me in your paper for the article of appreciation on Pastor Russell and seeing an answer to it and a criticism of the Millennial not having arrived yet, I beg the privilege of answering that part as I believe it to be important.

In the first place we would ask ourselves what is the meaning of millennial? Well it simply means one thousand years—"mill" means one thousand and "ennial" means annual, or one thousand annuals. Now the next point is, has the millenial arrived? Let us see! We have had six millennials since the creation of man and now we are forty years in the seventh. Now, let us see if that is not correct. We will take the Bible and secular history for the only substantial proofs, not going into detail because space will not permit. The first period marked in the Bible is from Creation to the Deluge, a period of 1656 years. The next is from the Deluge to the covenant with Abraham, a period of 427 years. The next period we cannot find in the Old Testament, but the Apostle Paul draws it to our attention in Galatians, ch. 3, v. 17, which shows that it was a period of 430 years from the Covenant of Promise to the Law Covenant at Mount Sinai. The Children of Israel were 40 years in the wilderness and six years was spent in dividing the land to them by lot. They were under Judges for the space of 450 years (see Acts 13:19-21). Then comes the period of Kings, 513 years, which can be easily figured if any one will go to the trouble. Then the desolation of the Land, 70 years, when Zedekiah was taken prisoner to Babylon. Here secular history begins. From this date to A.D. 1 was 536 years and to A.D. 1873 a period in all of 6000 years. So you see the seventh millennial really began in 1874. But the Gentile times does not end until 1914, going forty years into the Seventh Millennial. The Gentile times began in 606 B.C., when Israel's last King was dethroned. So, to be exact, their lease of power expired on Sept. 20th of the present year, Jewish time. That would be at the end of the present year. And what do we see? The Gentile nations were so angry that they began nearly two months prior to this time to [illegible] one another to pieces.

Now, have we any evidences that the millennial is at hand? Yes, I think so. The prophet Daniel draws our attention to the very time that we are now living in (Dan. 12:4). He says that Michael (Christ) shall stand up (take control) and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation. He also states in the same verse of the same chapter that in the time of the end many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased. Surely this prophecy has been fulfilled. But someone would say, why the world has not received any blessings in the Millennial as yet. Yes, it has. God has been giving wonderful blessings to the world. Nearly all the wonderful inventions have come in the last forty years. The world has been progressing by leaps and bounds, but the world has not appreciated the Goodness of God, hence the present distress and trouble. But then God that the end of this trouble will bring in the Kingdom for which we have so long prayed, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in Heaven." For His Kingdom shall break in pieces all other kingdoms.

Yours Respectfully,
S. A. STUMP.

A BIG LAW SUIT

Neely's, Limited, Take Action Against C. N. R. for $3,638.000

Leaside, Glenavon and Montreal Properties Involved—Plaintiffs Allege Failure to Carry Out Agreements.

Three writs are being obtained by Neelys, Limited, of Toronto, to-day, which involve $3,638,000, in a suit which they are instituting against the Canadian Northern Railway Company and subsidiaries. The suit is in connection with properties which were purchased by contract from the railway in Montreal and Toronto.

The Toronto property totals in value $1,138,000, which comprises $1,000,000 worth or thereabouts, of property in Leaside, and $138,000 worth in Glenavon, and adjoining property to Leaside. In Montreal the land in question is that of Mount Royal, a municipality which is owned by the C. N. R., and in which Neelys, Limited, invested $2,500,000.

The Toronto writ is being issued at Osgoode Hall to-day by M. K. Cowan, K.C., of the firm of Beatty, Blackstock, Fasken, Cowan and Chadwick, as counsel for Neely's, Limited. A similar writ is being obtained in Montreal.

The base of the suit against the Canadian Northern by the firm of Neelys, Limited, is failure to carry out agreement in connection with improvements to property. As an inducement to purchase this property, Neelys claim, the C. N. R. made an agreement to erect car shops, roundhouses, etc., and to employ at least 1,000 men at Leaside. Also they agreed to build three hundred houses for accommodation of the men. They were also to put in a street railway service connecting with the Toronto street railway. Street paving, water and sewer accommodation, and other such facilities were minor agreements made, according to the plaintiffs, which have not been lived up to.

Similar agreements are alleged to have been made with the Montreal properties, exclusive of the shops and houses. Surface street railway connecting with Montreal tramways, sewage connections, waterworks and street paving were among the improvements they agreed to make in that city.

"We," said Mr. T. A. Neely, of Neelys, Limited, "are taking this action, not only to protect ourselves, but to protect our friends and clients as well. These gentlemen have left it entirely to us to see that their interests are properly protected. We feel, therefore, that there remains only one course open to us, that is to secure them a refund of their invested money with interest."

Inquiries as to what reply would be made to the charges by the C.N.R. were made by The Telegram of Hon. D. B. Hanna.

"I know nothing of the suit," was the answer received.

An attempt was made to get into communication with the railway's solicitors, but none of them could be found.—Evening Telegram.

The case has a local interest owing to the fact that a number of people in Orangeville and vicinity invested in Leaside property.

LAUREL.

The members of Laurel L.O.L. No. 330 will hold their annual meeting and election of officers on Monday evening, Dec. 7th. A full attendance of the members is requested as this is probably the most important meeting of the year.

At the last meeting of the Laurel lodge, our Orange brethren had an exceedingly interesting discussion on the question of compulsory military service. While it was quite informal in character, the debate brought out many good points. Some arguments put forward by those who took part were advanced with a good deal of force and ability. We understand that the debate will be continued at next Lodge meeting.

Mr. Robt. McConachie has started a crusher in the Presbyterian Church shed. This will be a great help to the farmers of the neighborhood. All should patronize Mr. McConachie's undertaking.

Laurel Presbyterian Church is holding its annual Xmas entertainment on the evening of December 22nd.

Mr. George Curry and mother have moved into one of Mr. R. Fife's houses and Mr. Wilfrid Fawcett and bride are moving into the house lately occupied by Mr. Curry.

Mr. W. C. Hall has disposed of his 200 acre farm on which the stone quarry is situated, for the sum of $30,000. The sale was made to a syndicate, which intends making a live concern out of it and shipping the stone, which is of excellent quality, to all parts of the province.

Mr. F. T. Blair, of West Toronto, is visiting his sister, Mrs. R. H. Galbraith.

The Elba branch of the Women's Institute will meet at the home of Mrs. J. Thompson on Wednesday evening, Dec. 9th, at 7 p.m. Candy demonstration by the girls of the Branch. The programme will include a debate on the subject, "Resolved that we gain more Knowledge by Travel than we do by Study." This will be followed by recitations, singing and instrumental music. Meeting is open to members and their families.

The skating rink committee have organized for another winter's management of the rink. The surroundings are now better than ever. Alterations and improvements have been made tending to the convenience of skaters. An expert manager and rink master have been engaged for the season who will attend to the rink and look after the comfort of all patrons. Season tickets at reasonable prices are now ready and can be had from Mr. M. Sanderson.

The members of the home defence guard now number nearly forty, several more having handed in their names on Tuesday night. They are hard at work drilling once a week. Captain McCaughrin is always on hand and puts them through their facings and instructs them in the requisite manoeuvres. Rifles and ammunition are expected and after a little practice with that weapon "woe" to the first individual of German proclivities who shows his face in Caledon East.

WAR TIME IN ENGLAND.

Contrary to quite general anticipations the war does not seem to have disorganized British industry. On the contrary, in some respects trade in that country has been stimulated by war. Cotton manufacturers have been hard hit, but in many other lines there is unusual activity, and the general result is, as the Westminster Gazette says, that the percentage of unemployed at the beginning of November was only 4.46 as against 5.79 a month earlier. This, however, is largely explained by the fact that 1,000,000 men have been withdrawn from the field of labor for service in Kitchener's new army. In some trades, however, men are actually working night and day, those so employed being largely engaged in the manufacture of war supplies for Britain and her allies as well as for states yet neutral. The boot trade is a case in point. Tremendous orders have been received in Nottingham, the great centre of the British boot trade. About 1,500,000 of these are wanted by Lord Kitchener for his men at the front and for his new troops. France has placed an order for over 500,000 pairs of boots in Nottingham and 750,000 in Kettering. Russia has ordered 500,000 pairs of boots from Bristol, and Italy is inquiring for 250,000. Greece, Bulgaria and Roumania have all ordered boots, their aggregate demand coming to about 200,000 pairs. All these boots are high-class goods of the British army pattern, which cost $4 a pair wholesale. Then there is the item of clothing the army. Over 1,000,000 uniforms are wanted at once for the new troops. Another 600,000 are wanted for the old troops and the territorials to replace those which are being worn out under war and war training conditions. There is no need for any tailor in England to-day to be idle. Clothing manufacturers are welcoming with open arms anyone who can sew, and every factory in the United Kingdom is working overtime. The cloth mills, too, are getting their share, and are in many cases working double shifts.

GREAT LITTLE WARRIORS.

Jellicoe, French, Joffre, Wolseley and Roberts All Short Men.

It is more than remarkable that the greatest of modern military and naval commanders have, almost without exception, been short of stature. Rodney was short and Nelson was shorter. In fact, the greatest naval commander in the history of the world, the man who now towers literally above all his fellows, and whom German air raiders would probably dearly like to topple over into the fountains of Trafalgar Square, was quite a shrimp of a man, and, being deprived of an arm as well as an eye, looked smaller as he grew older. Nelson was probably the greatest little man who ever lived.

Admiral John Jellicoe, whom every Briton believes, if he gets half a chance, will prove himself a modern Nelson and win another and even greater Trafalgar, is also a man of very moderate stature. And it is a truism that "stockiness" is the rule in the navy. Perhaps salt checks growth! But, whatever it does with the rest of the body, it does not seem to stunt the wits. Witness that gallant little Japanese admiral, Togo. He had brains, courage and skill in a very high degree.

Napoleon, the greatest general of all time, the man to whom all military men look to-day as their exemplar and model in strategy and tactics, whose genius still dominates warfare, was notoriously short of stature. He was the butt of his schoolfellows on that account, and it was reckoned as a great disability in his military prospects.

His final conqueror, Wellington, often regarded as pretty tall, was by no means so. He is generally depicted on horseback, and his portraits are very deceptive because a big nose seems to require a big body to match it. But what about Wolseley, and Roberts, and French? In ordinary company all three were wont to drop out of sight. Wolseley was the smallest of the lot. The one and only "Bobs" would barely have got into Kitchener's new army if the measuring tape had been applied to him. Well for his country was it that he was measured by capacity and not by inches.

Both the leaders of the armies of the west, French and Joffre, are little men. Joffre looks like a healthy, good natured, prosperous, stout grocer.

John French is a little taller than Roberts, but not much; yet it was as a cavalry leader of infinite daring and unsullied success that he sprang to the front in the South African war. Where so many bigger men failed French succeeded, and to-day he has the confidence of the whole British race, as a little man who is capable of great things and intends to do them.

The Question of Height.

Apropos of the height of soldiers a prominent military man said recently:

"The British army has raised the height limit for volunteers to five feet five. Short Britishers object to this—and with reason.

"For consider the Japanese. They are incomparable soldiers. Yet the five feet five limit would bar most of them out.

"Consider the Gurkhas, the hill tribe soldiers of India. They are as valiant as the Japs, ye their height runs from four feet eleven to five feet four.

"At one of the London recruiting stations, just after the establishment of the new rule, a short and chunky East Ender who had been rejected by the examining surgeons pointed with a scowl towards a taller East Ender who had been accepted and said:

"'Aw, look at him! An' I knocked 'is 'ead off lawst Saturday night!'"

A Fine Mummy Case.

The Egyptian Sculpture Gallery at the British Museum has received an interesting sarcophagus of the nineteenth Dynasty, of date about 1300 B. C. It is of red quartzite, about seven feet four inches in length, and was made for one Thothmes, who is described in the inscription as "a royal scribe, overseer of the cattle of the temple of the gods Ra and Tum." On the lid, which is sculptured in human form, is a figure of the sky-goddess Nut, who is represented with outstretched wings, emblematic of her care of the mummy, and below the figure is a prayer that she may protect the body of the deceased.

A Typographical Error.

The festival of St. Alban, the first British martyr, is celebrated, according to the English calendar, on June 17, whereas in the Roman calendar St. Alban's Day is June 22. In all English prayer books, also, prior to 1662, St. Alban is commemorated on June 22, and the present discrepancy seems to have arisen from the typesetter of the prayer book of 1662 mistaking the X of XXII for V, and rendering the date June XVII—an error which has been perpetuated ever since.

A Canine Collector.

A familiar figure in the Strand, London, during the past few weeks has been the big St. Bernard dog which patrols Wellington street to Charing Cross collecting for the Patriotic Fund. He is unaccompanied, and religiously does his "sentry-go" between points, only stopping his perambulation when some pedestrian drops a coin into either of the boxes slung over his back.

Whole Party Gone.

The heavy toll of war is illustrated by Rev. R. J. Campbell, pastor of the City Temple of London, who told his congregation the other Sunday of a dinner given last July in honor of a young man who had attained his majority. Of that gathering all have been killed so far, he said, except one, and that one is thought to be dead.

AN ARMY CORPS.

How Divisions, Regiments, Companies, Etc., Are Made Up.

Curious though it may seem, it is not quite correct to refer, as many people do, to the Indian and Colonial troops as part of the "British army." Strictly speaking, the term "British army" only applies to the land forces of the United Kingdom, which consist of the regular army and the Territorial army, and that part of the former which serves in the British Dominions overseas, it being customary to refer to these troops as the "British army" in contradistinction to the "Native army" or "Indian army" in India, and to the "Local Forces" in South Africa and in the British Colonies.

The regular army, whether at home or abroad, is paid for by the Imperial Exchequer, except in India (although certain colonies pay contributions towards its upkeep). India, however, while paying for its own native army, also pays a contribution towards the cost of troops at home.

The permanently embodied portions of the regular army consist of thirty-one cavalry regiments, twenty-five horse artillery batteries, 147 field batteries, ninety-nine companies of garrison artillery, seventy-seven companies of engineers, nine battalions of Foot Guards, 148 battalions of infantry of the line, besides departmental services, some of which come under the head of the Army Service Corps, that highly-organized department of the army which attends to the transport of baggage, supplies, and transport of food and forage, and also assists the medical service. It should be mentioned that part of these sections of the regular army are stationed abroad during peace times, but, on mobilization for war, the bulk becomes absorbed into an expeditionary force.

This is divided into various army corps, according to the number of men sent to the front, an army corps comprising infantry, cavalry, and artillery, in command of general officers. The British army, in times of peace, is divided into six army corps, half of which are composed of regular troops, and the remainder Territorials. The strength of an army corps is not definitely fixed, but consists of about 40,000 men.

A British infantry division is about half an army corps, and is the smallest tactical unit possessing all arms. It usually consists of twelve battalions, each of 1,000 men. In addition to this, there is at least two squadrons of cavalry, from thirty-six to seventy-two guns, beside field companies of engineers, medical supply, transport, and signal services. In all, its strength is normally about 20,000 men.

The war establishment of a cavalry regiment is twenty-five officers, 537 other ranks, and 562 horses, formed into three squadrons. A cavalry brigade is made up of three regiments, and a division of four brigades; so that a division consists of twelve regiments, supplemented by two horse artillery brigades, engineers, signal troops, field ambulances, and cavalry train, not to mention one aeroplane squadron. The total establishment of a cavalry division mobilized for war consists of 9,896 officers and men, 10,195 horses and twenty-four guns.

Tabloid Rations For Soldiers.

Each British soldier on active service carries in his kit a small package containing what is known as an "emergency rations."

The "emergency ration" is wrapped in a small package. When the emergency arises the centre band of the package is torn off and two small tin cans are disclosed. One can contains a quarter of a pound of concentrated beef and the other the same quantity of cocoa paste. The combination of the two foods is sufficient to maintain the strength of the average man for 36 hours, if consumed in small quantities.

The beef and the cocoa paste may be eaten dry but greater flavor is gained without loss of nourishment if the beef is allowed to simmer in water over a fire, and the cocoa paste be made into cocoa. The amount of beef in the tin will make two quarts of beef tea and the cocoa paste can be converted into the same quantity of cocoa.

Another Veteran Gone.

A Crimean veteran of the East Yorks Regiment, named McCarty, died recently at Airdrie, thus reducing by one the rapidly diminishing band of Crimean veterans. With his regiment he took part in every engagement before the dreaded Malakoff Tower, Sebastopol, and after months of hardship in the trenches, he with his comrades of the French and British armies at last took the batteries after a fearful bayonet assault. His honors were the British and Turkish medals with clasps, and the rare distinction of wearing his company's French Crimean medal.

Cost of Rat Destruction.

The destruction of rats costs the Presidency of Bombay a pretty substantial figure every year. On the recommendation of the advisory board of the Indian Research Fund Association, the Government has sanctioned the employment of Maj. Kunhardt, I.M.S., for another year at the cost of Rs. 58,000 (about $9,335) to carry on experiments in eradicating or mitigating the prevalence of plague by systematic rat destruction in the off season. The experiment will extend over four districts this year.

Crusade Against Mosquitoes.

Malaria is on the increase in Madras, India, and the Medical Officer has invited the co-operation of all residents of the Fort in preventing, as far as possible, the breeding of mosquitoes.

Ceylon's Offer Accepted.

Ceylon's offer to provide a contingent has been accepted by Lord Kitchener. The contingent will be used for service in Egypt. Ceylon will pay the cost of the transport.

TRIED TO PASS CHEQUE FOR $500.

But Manager of Bank was Suspicious

Nervy Attempt to Get Good Money for Bad Paper Foiled in Brampton.

An unsuccessful attempt was made by some unknown man to cash a bogus cheque for $500 at the Dominion Bank here this morning. Between half-past ten and eleven o'clock a man came into the bank and asked to have a cheque, endorsed with the name of R. E. Porritt, a Chinguacousy farmer, for the sum of $500, cashed. The clerks handed over the cheque to Mr. Gordon, who refused to cash the cheque, which was on a city bank. The man demanded to know why, as it was properly endorsed and was signed by Mrs. Sweetman, who he claimed was housekeeper for Mr. Porritt at Snelgrove and that he was hired man there. Mr. Gordon called up Mr. Porritt by phone, but he was not at home. The man left the bank and a few minutes later Mr. Gordon received a telephone call, purporting to be from Mr. Porritt, who stated that the cheque was alright and that he should cash it. This the bank manager refused to do, still feeling that there was something wrong about the matter. Not long afterwards another telephone call was sent in to Mr. Gordon, who found that Mr. Porritt was speaking from his farm. The latter stated that he had not before spoken to the bank, and had just been told that he was wanted on the phone. The unknown man gave the name of John Holder and the signature of "R. E. Porritt" on the cheque was a very clever forgery, bearing a close resemblance to Mr. Porritt's own signature. The man drove to the telephone office in a buggy and spoke from there to the bank. He is described as being about thirty years of age, wore glasses and had a rain coat on while in the bank. The matter was placed in the hands of the police and an effort is being made to locate the forger.

This is the fourth attempt made to pass bogus cheques on the Brampton branch of the Dominion Bank, only one being successful. In that case the thief got away with $1900, which was no loss to the bank here, as the cheque was marked by a Toronto bank.—Brampton Conservator.

ALCOHOL

Has Effect of Producing Mental Instability and Deterioration

To the Editor,—"A recent report from one of the Glasgow District Mental Hospitals gives the usual testimony as to the influence of alcohol in producing mental instability and deterioration. On this point is says:—In 49 cases alcohol was put down as the determining cause of insanity out of 263 admissions and in combination with other diseases in ten other cases made 22.4 per cent. of the admissions. As usual the indirect influence of alcohol in causing insanity was very striking. The cases in which a history of the abuse or nonabuse of alcohol by the parents was obtained gave a percentage of parental abuse of alcohol of 51.6 per cent. But when these cases were separated into two groups, namely, those who were above and those who were not above the age of 26 years on their first attack of mental illness they found a history of parental abuse of alcohol of 80.60 per cent. of those whose first breakdown took place before they had completed 26 years of age, while of those whose first breakdown took place after the age of 26 years there was a history of parental abuse of alcohol in only 36.6 per cent.—The Presbyterian."

The evidence is now beyond dispute that more insanity is caused by alcohol than by all other causes put together and saddest of all, as the above article shows that it is not so often the drinker that suffers as his innocent offspring.

FINED FOR LAUGHING.

Gilbert and Sullivan's Manager Was a Martinet of the Stage.

The strictness with which the late Sir W. S. Gilbert governed the Savoy company, in the days of the famous partnership between himself and Sir Arthur Sullivan, has given rise to many stories. Not only was a veto placed on "gagging" during a performance—Gilbert insisting that his lines should always be strictly adhered to—but "clowning" was absolutely forbidden at rehearsals.

An amusing illustration of the strict methods adopted at the Savoy in those days is afforded by a story told by Miss Julia Gwynne, who became Mrs. George Edwardes.

One day, during a performance of "H. M. S. Pinafore," Mr. Richard Barker, the stage manager, called Miss Gwynne up to him and said:—

"Gwynne, I saw you laughing! What have you got to say?"

"Really, Mr. Barker," replied Miss Gwynne, "I assure you — you must have been mistaken. I was not laughing—it was only my natural amiable expression that you saw."

"Ye-es, I know that amiable expression!" Then, turning to the call-boy, Barker pronounced sentence thus: "Gwynne fined half a crown for laughing!"

This story is told in some reminiscences of Gilbert, Sullivan, and D'Oyly Carte, by F. Collier and C. Bridgeman (Pitman). Sullivan, it appears, was as strict about the correct rendering of his music as Gilbert was in regard to the proper speaking of his lines. There were occasions when a singer would, with full assurance of his own perfection, give forth some song hardly recognizable by the composer, whereupon Sullivan would humorously commend the singer on his capital tune and then he would add—"And now, my friend, might I trouble you to try mine?"

There was another occasion when a tenor, as tenors are wont to do, lingered unconscionably on a high note. Sullivan interrupted him with the remark, "Yes, that's a fine note—a very fine note—but please do not mistake your voice for my composition."

Such was Gilbert's thoroughness and strict attention to detail that, when he and Sullivan were preparing "Pinafore," they paid a visit to Portsmouth and went on board Nelson's famous old flagship, the Victory. There, by permission of the naval authorities, Gilbert made sketches of every detail of the quarter-deck, to the minutest ringbolt, thole-pin, or halyard. From these sketches he was able to prepare a complete model of the Pinafore's deck. With the aid of this model, with various colored blocks to represent principals and chorus, the author, like an experienced general, worked out his plan of campaign in the retirement of his studio, and so came to the theatre prepared to marshal his company.

Bayonet Work.

No soldiers like to face the bayonet, least of all the Germans. But the death-rate from cold steel, in the different wars of the last century, show that it is not so deadly as is generally supposed—perhaps because the enemy usually fly when they see it! In Prussia's war with Austria, in 1866, the death-rate through wounds inflicted by the bayonet was given as 4 per cent. in the Austrian army, and 5 per cent. in the Prussian. In their war with the French in 1870 the Germans killed ninety-nine men with shrapnel and the bullet for every one they put out of action with cold steel. But then, the Germans lack the dash necessary for a bayonet charge. If we turn to the work of the British troops, we find that during the Crimean war, at the Battle of Inkerman, the bayonet work of the soldiers accounted for the comparatively large number of ten in every 100, while during the Boer war some authorities have estimated the death-rate from this cause at 8 per cent. of those killed in action.

During the present war there have not been many chances for a bayonet charge, but when it has taken place the old cry, "Now, lads, give them the bayonet," has always called forth a cheer. The French, too, are fond of the bayonet; it suits the style of their dashing attack, and they have christened it "La Rosalie"—for it is often red.

Sambhar Now Scarce.

Indiscriminate slaughter of Sambhar by villagers in India, is likely to cause the extermination of this noble species of deer. Even now they are very hard to find in places where they used to be common. These large deer can be easily killed without the use of firearms and with the aid of even one or two useless pariah dogs. A dog has only got to chase one or even a herd and they make for the closest water available and stand in it, and so long as the dog stays near them and barks they will not leave the water but will allow themselves to be surrounded and killed by men armed with only sticks and axes.

India's War Prison.

Prisoners of war sent to India will be interned in Ahmednagar, a large city of the Deccan, in the Bombay Presidency, about 1,100 miles from Calcutta and 122 miles east of Bombay. It was founded four hundred years ago by Ahmed Nizam Shah. In 1797 it fell into the hands of the Mahrattas and in 1817 became British.

Sardines as Fertilizer.

Tons of sardines were caught on the West Coast of India last year and used in the manufacture of fish-manure, which was exported to the amount of 25,000 tons. The quantity of fish-manure used in India by planters and agriculturists was no doubt considerable; and that means a large addition to the 25,000 tons.

Skin Trouble on the Scalp

Skin Dried and Cracked and Hair Fell Out—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Eczema is annoying and distressing at any time, but doubly so when it gets into the scalp and causes the hair to fall out. Here is a grateful letter from a lady who was cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hector Currie, Tobermory, Ont., writes:—"I was cured of a disagreeable skin disease of the scalp by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. The trouble started with itching and pain in the scalp, the skin would get dry and crack, and at times would bleed and the hair would fall out. I tried three doctors without benefit, and suffered for three years. Reading in the almanac about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I began its use, and am now completely cured. The hair has grown again, and I am as well as I ever was. You are at liberty to use this letter, for I am glad to recommend so excellent a treatment."

Dr. Chase's Ointment has no rival as a cure for itching skin disease.

A TESTING TIME.

We do not think that in many years, probably not within a generation, possibly not in its whole history, has the Christian Church been put to the test as it is being put to the test this very hour. For its members to be absolutely loyal to their Master's spirit and teaching and yet loyal to ruler and country, keeping Christian and cosmopolitan all the way through, is not, with some, the easiest thing in the world. For ministers and members to realize that the things for which the Church stands are still the great things, and to keep seeking great spiritual opportunities, is difficult, in the midst of all the excitement and unrest and fear of the hour. And to meet the calls that come seeking self-denying helpfulness at our hands, is testing, and will test still more, the heroic quality of our Christian sympathy and unselfishness. But is not the day of our great testing the day of our great opportunity? We believe that it is.—Christian Guardian.

CHINESE DRESS CHANGING.

Some interesting changes in the dress of the Chinese women are noted in a report from the American Consul-General at Hong Kong. One of the features in the open ports of China and in Hong Kong, he states, is the tendency among Chinese women of the fashionable class, especially in diplomatic circles, to adopt foreign-style clothing modified to suit Oriental taste. Formerly a Chinese woman completed her costume in winter by a furlined garment, sometimes more than one, or by garments quilted with cotton or waste silk filling. These garments are now little used, having been replaced by long coats. Some women use wraps wholly foreign in style. Leather has generally supplanted cloth shoes for Chinese women, and among the working classes they are using leather shoes as far as possible. Foreign made shoes or local shoes of foreign style, and with foreign machinery, are common. The change has already made itself felt in the shoe business at Hong Kong, and its influence is extending. The innovations in dress have brought with them a demand for foreign dress accessories. Foreign styles of dressing the hair are becoming more and more common, a

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case".

Mrs. W. N. KELLY

CHICKEN SLAUGHTER IN GUELPH.

Police Discover Bodies of 22 Fowl Hidden in Bush.

There was murder committed down in St. Patriek's ward sometime last Saturday night, and the fact was only discovered by the police when the remains of the deceased were found lying in some bushes just off the road from Stevenson street. It was not a human being that was murdered on this occasion, however, and the sight which met the gaze of the officers of the law was not one to cause them to shudder. What they discovered there last night were the remains of 22 prize chickens, while scattered around on the ground were the feet and heads of about a dozen more, the bodies having been taken away, and probably formed the foundation of several Sunday dinners.

An investigation at once followed, and it was not long before the owner of the chickens was found in the person of Mr. John M. Taylor, a gardener, who resides at 2 Hardy street, near Grange street. He stated that some time during Saturday night, thieves had broken open his barn, which is situated about 100 yards away from the house, breaking no less than three locks in the process, and had carried off 35 of the very best fowl which he possessed. It was a regular clean up. Mr. Taylor states that the biggest part of the chickens had been entered for the Winter Fair, and were valued anywhere from $2 to $10 each. He says $100 would not begin to cover his loss. There were Plymouth Rocks, White Wyandottes, and Rhode Island Reds in the lot. The birds were frozen stiff, and are in good shape for the table, their necks having been wrung. They were all brought down to the police station, where each one was identified.

Mr. Taylor also states that about $35 worth of pork, which was also in the barn in a barrel, has disappeared. This was not found in the bushes with the chickens. He declares that a couple of months ago another lot of 20 chickens disappeared in the same mysterious manner.

One arrest has already been made in the case, an Italian who is alleged to have been seen going away from the bushes where the chickens were found.

There have been reports of thefts from various portions of the city, including the O. A. C., and Prof. Graham came down this morning, thinking that perhaps some of his birds might be among the lot found, but none of his was in the lot. It is the opinion of the police that foreigners are responsible for the most of the chicken thefts.—Guelph Herald.

Mr. Geo. Gregg and Mr. J. B. McArthur were asphyxiated in the former's home at Clifford by gas from a coal stove. Mr. Gregg was almost dead but will probably recover.

Samuel Ritchie, a son of the late David Ritchie, of West Garaftaxa, died at Fergus, aged 60 years. For 23 years he lived at Riverview. He leaves to mourn his loss a widow and nine children.

Renewed Vigor in Old Age

This Letter Brings a Message of Cheer to the Aged—Results of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the declining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter.

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes:—"At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their health and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. For sale by all dealers.

LOYAL TO THE EMPIRE

PEOPLE OF INDIA ACCEPTS OBLIGATIONS OF THE WAR.

They Welcome the Conflict as an Opportunity to Prove Their Worthiness to be Citizens of Greater Britain—Women Are Devoted to the King-Emperor and Are Praying For the Success of the Troops.

That India is loyal to Great Britain in regard to the war, despite any fears to the contrary, is maintained in a letter from Franklin D. Cogswell of Ewing Christian College, Allahabad, India, which says in part:

Widespread restlessness and discontent there may be among the 315,000,000 that make up India's population, but the violent preachments of educated Indians domiciled abroad scarcely represent the true nature of the opposition to British rule in India or the aims of the most influential Indian leaders. The goal of the national movement, as freely expressed for years from platform and press by the men who command the widest respect, is self-government within the Empire. India wants the same privileges that are enjoyed by the autonomous dominions of Great Britain; at the present time the great portion of her citizens appear to be looking no further.

Thus instead of there being any wild outbreak of rebellion in the hour of Britain's trial in the west there has been a noteworthy demonstration of loyalty throughout the peninsula. "Britain's war is our war" is the cry that has echoed from the huge mass meetings that have been held in every important town and city in the course of the last week. Instead of the war's being a signal for chaos, it appears to be regarded as an opportunity for India to show that she is worthy of the place in the Empire that she has been demanding.

One of the most feared and most respected of the opponents of the Government, Sir Pherozeshah Mehta, phrased the idea in a ringing sentence that was greeted with tremendous enthusiasm at a mass meeting in the Bombay town hall when he said: "We have often met in this hall to assert our rights as citizens of the Empire; we are now proud to meet to accept our duties and obligations."

It is not only from astute leaders who grasp the political significance of the position in which India now finds herself that present manifestations of loyalty are coming. The war is the absorbing topic of every gossiping folk whose hearts are incapable of any feeling more mixed than that of simple devotion to the King-Emperor are hoping and praying for the success of his forces. Him they know. He came to them to assume his Indian realm in the most gorgeous durbar of recent centuries. He is their personal sovereign.

A grizzled old bazaar merchant came into one of our college buildings the other day, and on seeing a picture of the King-Emperor raised his hands devoutly, saying: "He is our King. We eat his bread. We pray God to give victory to his arms."

Almost immediately after the nerve wrecking period of suspense over England's decision was ended by the declaration of war against Germany, the ruling chiefs offered their armies for use wherever the English should need them. Ten of the chiefs proposed a gift of a hospital ship, the Loyalty, which has now been accepted by the viceroy. Everywhere funds are being raised for the care of wounded and the relief of distress. Even Indian ladies, whose freedom of gathering is so seriously hindered by the system of seclusion to which they are subjected, have formed Loyalty leagues, that have expressed "their readiness to place their services at the feet of the King-Emperor in such manner as may be found suitable," and have begun to raise money for relief measures.

Everywhere huge sums for general support of the war and for the maintenance of hospitals and medical work have been subscribed. Not only English churches have made prayer for British victory; in mosque as well special prayers have been held.

The viceroy's recent announcement that two divisions, including some regiments of Indian regulars, would be sent as an expeditionary force has been met with great enthusiasm. Their destination is, of course, unknown, but the general hope is that it is Europe. On the part of European and Anglo-Indian residents, of course, there has been much volunteering, and the local companies of militia in every city have been much strengthened.

In a country so divided by social and religious differences as India, it would be strange if there were unanimity in such whole hearted expressions of loyalty as the foregoing. There is a section of educated India which gives a very tempered expression of its enthusiasm for the cause of the Empire. It is inclined to sympathize with Austria in its vigorous stroke to end the plotting of the Serbs against the dual monarchy, and to honor Germany for her complete loyalty to her ally when Russia took up the cause of Servia. The idea of England fighting on the same side with Russia is highly displeasing.

Vague rumors of renewed fraternizing of Germans and Turks have filtered through the one strictly censored cable open to Europe, which have made the intentions of Turkey a vital issue to India. If Turkey throws her German staffed and German equipped army in with her Teutonic friends, thus forcing the British Empire, with more Mohammedan subjects than any other Government, to oppose her, there would at the least be uncertainty about the attitude the Moslem leaders of India would assume. At present, however, the Moslem press is affirming the loyalty of its community in carefully chosen terms.

CONSERVATION OF LIFE.

The following is from the pen of Hon. Clifford Sifton, Chairman of the Conservation Commission of Canada, and is worthy of careful perusal:—"Has it ever occurred to you that nineteen-twentieths of the things that occupy our attention, outside of the ordinary work of securing a livelihood, really do not matter at all? Do you realize that after all there are only a few things that affect our happiness? One of these few things is the preservation of life and health. Nothing here below matters to those who are dead, nothing matters very much to those who are sick and suffering and without a prospect of regaining health. At the root of all happiness of the individual and of the nation lies the question of the preservation of life and health.

A generation ago in Canada little attention was given to what is called public health. The individual was left to kill or cure himself by patent medicines or domestic remedies, varied by an occasional doctor's visit. To the prevention of disease little thought was given. No longer than twenty-five or thirty years ago epidemics of disease were popularly spoken of as visitations of Providence and punishment for sin. It is true that these epidemics were punishment for sin, but it was the sin of avoidable ignorance.

There has been a new revelation since that time. Public health is now the new gospel, and it is a sound gospel. An army of functionaries now act as curators of public health all over the world. Another army of trained scientists and investigators labor at the problems of life and health. Sanitary science demands the services of many of the world's devoted and unselfish investigators. As a result of their work new facts and new theories are put forward for public guidance in such a volume that the hard-worked health officer has not time to read them, much less investigate and determine their merits. This difficulty we hope in part to obviate. To observe the forward march of sanitary science, to note the discoveries of practical importance, and to place the results of this work before those who are in need of the latest and best information on the subject, is, in a modest way, the aim of this publication.

It will not be an easy task and in its performance we shall no doubt leave much room for legitimate criticism; but an honest and we hope a fairly competent effort will be made to disseminate light on the subject which vitally affects every human being.

Much progress has been made in Canada in the lessening of mortality and suffering by the adoption of scientific means for the prevention of disease. Where thirty years ago ignorance and prejudice permitted great mortality and a distressing amount of preventable suffering, the light of science and modern sanitary methods have wrought a great and beneficient change. Nevertheless, we are only beginning to understand the problems which confront the health officer and the sanitary engineer. Constant study combined with persistent effort to adapt means to ends will bring about still greater benefits.

It is a great and inspiring work. 'Mens sana in corpore sano' was the wise dictum of the ancient philosopher; but it has taken twenty centuries and more for the human race to achieve that elementary knowledge necessary to enable it to successfully combat the most common and ordinary diseases which prevent the body from being sound. The conservation of life and the increase of happiness by the prevention of disease; These are the ideals to which our efforts are directed and in the prosecution of these ideals we confidently bespeak the sympathy and support of all who are in a position to offer effective assistance.—Conservation of Life.

THE STRAIN ON GERMANY.

Germany, says the military expert of the London Times, is maintaining battle fronts some 600 miles in length, and every yard of the line means sacrifice and means costs. Officers, men, horses, guns, supplies, clothing, equipments, and cash have to be provided with a prodigal hand for every mile of the ever-lengthening front, while no success has yet been achieved corresponding to the immensity of the effort made. Half a million Germans killed and wounded; as many more down with sickness, exhaustion and starvation; foreign trade paralyzed; banks robbed to provide loans; shipping idle; factories silent; unemployment increasing; and winter coming on—how can the country stand the strain?

Mrs. Thos. Beattie, an old resident of Hillsburg, died last week at the advanced age of 85 years.

Review of Work of Dufferin Office During Past Year

Herewith we publish the report of the work of the Dufferin County Branch of the Department of Agriculture, which Mr. H. A. Dorrance, the District Representative, submitted to the County Council at its meeting a couple of weeks ago. The report is informing in many ways and shows how rapidly the work has developed since the office was opened in this County.

Orangeville, Ont.
November 2nd, 1914.

The Warden and Members of the County Council
of Dufferin:

I have the honour to present the following report from the Dufferin County Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture for the year ending Oct. 31st, 1914.

The work of this office divides itself naturally into two distinct branches, the work conducted in the office and the outside or field work. I am pleased to state that for the present year both branches of the work have increased to a very large extent, the increased work showing that the people of the County are beginning to realize the value to be gained from making use of the office. The work will be discussed under its various heads.

The work conducted in the office consists in giving information to the public on practically every line of work and problem connected with agriculture and the various branches of work connected with it, by letter, telephone, and personal visit to the office. Problems on every possible branch of the work are referred to the office for solution and in so doing large numbers of circulars, bulletins, reports containing the latest information along various lines are distributed to farmers and others in this way. While we have not the accurate returns of the number of visitors actually coming to the office, yet the number is estimated to be over two thousand, and the record number to the office in any one day has been sixty-eight. This number is made up of people from all parts of the town and county, and as mentioned above, the variety of their problems is almost as large as the number of people.

One of the largest branches of the office work during the early season of the year consists in the examination and analysis of samples of grasses and clover seeds. Farmers are availing themselves very rapidly and extensively of the opportunity to learn the exact nature and contents of the seed they intend using. We have added to our equipment for testing seeds a small Cleaner and Tester completely equipped for showing exactly what can be done with various samples and giving the farmer an accurate idea of what his sample of seed contains and what it can be made to grade. This has proven a very popular and valuable addition to the benefits from this work. Samples are examined as carefully as possible by us, and the majority of them are then forwarded to the Seed Branch, Ottawa, for official grading and analysis. In connection with the seed work, there has been a very large demand for better seed, many farmers coming to us to procure supplies of good seed and this has increased very rapidly, and many farmers are requesting us to pay more attention to this part of our work. Our services have been most in demand in procuring stocks of seed corn, and the results of the past season show the value of the work that has been done along this line. The valuable part of this work consists in that it enables us to more quickly introduce the best strains of up-to-date and suitable varieties of crops asked for.

In addition to the work entailed in carrying on the work outlined our office has been the headquarters of the Orangeville Horticultural Society and considerable work has been done in carrying on the plans of this organization.

FIELD WORK.

The various lines of work covered under the head of field work have grown very rapidly and requests for assistance have come to us in larger numbers than ever, and these have occupied practically all our time so that the greater portion of our time has been spent in the field.

The usual number of requests for assistance in pruning, spraying, and general orchard culture have been attended to during the year. The plan of former years has been followed, that of going to the farmer's orchard and there giving him instruction and demonstration on his own trees, thus giving him a model for his guidance and something that he can use to follow his own work by, and, at the same time provide an object lesson to the community in which he is located. Instruction in this manner was given in some ten different orchards in various parts of the county, and I am able to report that there has been a larger quantity of spray material used this year than before. I have been informed and can vouch for this from my own observation that there has been more pruning done during the past season than in any season for many years. There is still much to be done in this line, farmers being slow to realize the advantages to be obtained from giving proper care and attention to the orchard they have. Besides the instruction given in spraying, pruning, and orchard management, we have assisted the farmers, as far as possible, to purchase their supplies and equipment from satisfactory sources and, also, where possible, to assist in marketing.

During the year numerous lines of experimental work have been conducted in various parts of the county on farms and on the demonstration plots in connection with the High School. In connection with this work, I might state that the experiments carried on have been rather in the nature of demonstration rather than experiment, in giving farmers in various sections of the county samples of improved grain, corn, fertilizer tests, etc., in an endeavor to find out the value of these materials from crops in various sections of the county. The fertilizer tests have been very largely carried on in co-operation with the fertilizer companies, they supplying the material, and their representatives taking charge of the work. So far as the demonstration plots are concerned, we have been somewhat disappointed with the results obtained there. This has occurred from two causes, first, the unsatisfactory condition of the plots and, second, the increased demand upon our time in various parts of the county, making it practically impossible for us to be on hand when attention is most needed, and the recommendations that we have in connection with these plots is, that since the work being attempted is, very largely, duplicating what is being done by the Experimental Department at Guelph under very much more satisfactory conditions than we have here, they will be used for some other purpose until such time as conditions warrant continuing plot work. We have found that these demonstrations are much more valuable when placed on some farm than they are under conditions such as we have on the plots.

On account of the exceptionally dry season during the past two years, it would seem that the farmers of this county fail to realize the necessity and value of underdrainage, consequently, the amount of survey work done during this past year has been somewhat small. The surveys this year, when extensive, have been worked in co-operation with the Physics Dept. of the College at Guelph, and where of a smaller nature, we have attended to them ourselves. These smaller surveys have consisted, chiefly, in running open drains and giving depths and grades. In connection with this work we have been called to a number of cases where it has been an endeavor to settle disputes between neighbors over outlets. In some cases we have been able to reach satisfactory settlements, and in other cases we have not. This is one of the unpleasant features of drainage work, and one that is not always too satisfactory, but it is work that we are always willing to undertake and do our utmost to secure satisfactory results. Only one large tile drainage scheme has been undertaken during the year, and this has been, possibly, the most extensive yet undertaken in Dufferin County. This scheme was the drainage of practically one hundred acres in Amaranth, the property of Reuben West, and required almost thirty thousand tile for its completion. This problem was a somewhat difficult one to handle from the nature of the land and, during the summer, it received considerable supervision, and results to date would indicate that the work has been satisfactorily performed. Many sections of this county are in very bad need of underdrainage, and this scheme of Mr. West's should be watched carefully by every farmer whose land is inclined to be wet. This farm has not given satisfactory results in the past, owing to the extremely wet nature of the soil, and being in a convenient location should prove an excellent demonstration of the value of underdrainage for the people of the county.

During the year special attention has been given to assist in solving the farm labor problem. This past year has been rather a peculiar one for securing help, and we are unable to report such numerical success as in 1913. A considerable number of laborers have been secured, but with varying results. Directly through our office, we have placed some fifteen laborers, and have forwarded a large number of applications to be dealt with direct by the Department of Colonization, and on these applications we can give no definite report.

This is a branch of work, that seems to me, should receive special attention from some organization inside the county. It is impossible for me to continue to become personally responsible for advancing fares, expenses to Toronto, and other expenses incidental to securing laborers, and unless some arrangements are made it will be necessary for us to discontinue the present system of handling laborers, and handle the work direct from the Dept. of Colonization. Prospects for this coming season would indicate that the labor problem will be a more serious one than has been supposed, and will be one that in this county will need special attention.

The most extensive line of work carried on during this past year, and one which promises to be a strong feature of District Representative work, not only here, but in all parts of the Province, has been the Rural School Fall Fair work.

Through the valued financial aid given by the County Council, we were enabled to hold four School Fairs in the various sections of the County this year. Schools were selected with centres at Horning's Mills, Laurel, Mono Centre and Marsville, and Fairs held at these points. Some forty-four schools were selected, but for various reasons, lists were not sent in from three, and forty-one were included.

The work was carried on this year as in previous years, the material being distributed to the children to be taken to their homes and attended to there, and the products of this material to be shown at the Fairs.

During the summer these plots were inspected and prizes awarded for the care of the plots. The material distributed consisted of O.A.C. No. 72 Oats, O.A.C. No. 21 Barley, Delaware, Davies Warrior and Empire State Potatoes, Our Ideal Mangolds, Wisconsin No. 7 Corn, Golden Bantam Sweet Corn and a limited number of eggs of the Bred-to-Lay strain Barred Plymouth Rocks. In connection with the care of this material at home, only some general directions as to care and management were given, the pupil being required to learn for himself or herself the best way of handling the material.

During the year six hundred and eighty children in the different sections of the County were given material by this Department. In the majority of cases, the greatest interest was shown in the work by both parents and children, and the results obtained would seem to amply justify the extension and continuance of this work.

At the four Fairs held this Fall, the exhibits in every case were of the highest quality and the attendance at the Fairs numbered nearly two thousand with an entry list of about twelve hundred entries.

In connection with these Fairs, an organization of the children is formed, having officers similar to those in an ordinary fall fair, and the work done by these children directors is quite creditable indeed. While the school fair organization and work is not perfect, there being a number of things that are not satisfactory as we would wish, yet changes are being made which should do much to make the Fairs more satisfactory.

These Fairs do much to stimulate problems. They act as a means of spreading good seed and poultry in the district and as feeders for the Agricultural Society Shows, and the results that we have seen show us the great benefits being derived from these Fairs.

An effort was made to attend as many meetings as possible during the year. A representative from the office attended all of the regular Farmers' Institute meetings and special meetings of the Women's Institutes.

Two Day Courses in Stock and Seed Judging were held at Orangeville and Shelburne; Seed Judging Courses at Whitfield and Grand Valley; Special Poultry Meetings at Jessopville and Mono Centre; Two Weeks' Courses in Agriculture at Honeywood and a Four Weeks' Course in Agriculture at Orangeville. These meetings have, on the whole, been largely attended, and considerable interest shown. Preparations are being made for this coming winter for a number of meetings and courses. Owing to present conditions, the Department has seen fit to cancel a number of meetings usually held, so that the number will be somewhat reduced during the coming year.

In addition to these meetings, we have attended all the social functions and gatherings where we could in any way meet with farmers.

Among the young men who have taken our Courses, we have conducted in co-operation with the Department of Agriculture, "The Acre Profit Competition" in potatoes and a "Feeding Hogs for Profit Competition" in each of which we have had a fair number of competitors. The winner in each Competition will receive a free Two Weeks' Course in Stock and Seed Judging at the O. A. College, Guelph, in 1915.

The work in reforesting has been continued. In all some 8500 trees have been planted out in various parts of the County in co-operation with the Forestry Dept., and in spite of the exceptionally dry summer, excellent results are being obtained, the loss being very small.

During the latter part of July and the early part of August, a number of outbreaks of the Army Worm were reported to the office. A representative from the office visited every outbreak directly reported, but we found that in every case to which we were called, the pest had practically completed its work, or that the usual precautionary methods had been adopted, and we were unable to take any very strenuous methods to get rid of the pest. The actual damage, however, done in the county, comparatively speaking, was very small, and indications would show that there need be little fear of any serious injury next year.

In addition to the definite lines of work described, I have acted, under the direction of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, as Inspector of the various members' plots in the county. I have been called in to assist in carrying on various lines of work for the Department in other districts in judging and holding special meetings.

In conclusion let me state that there are many lines of work in which there is a marked improvement being shown by the farmers of the county. The possibilities of Dufferin County, to my mind, are very great, but in order to realize these possibilities, there should be a more general awakening of the people to these possibilities, but progress, though slow, is marked. The motto of every one in the county should be "Dufferin, the Banner County of the Province," and with that aim in view, we offer our services and ask for the co-operation of all to make this true.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

H. A. DORRANCE,
District Representative.

ALTON.

Another of the early pioneers of Caledon passed away a few days ago in the person of Mrs. Ben. Madill, who departed this life at the age of 77 years. Her husband predeceased her about three years ago. She is survived by four sons and three daughters, namely, Cyrus, Ben, John and William Madill, Mrs. Geo. Gotherbam, Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Arthur Lovell.

On Friday night, Nov. 27th, the Ladies Aid of Alton Presbyterian Church held a very successful entertainment, styled an Oldtime Business Meeting of the Ladies Aid of the Mohawk Cross Roads. The principal parts were taken by Mrs. Dorrington as hostess, Mrs. Armstrong as president and Mrs. Alex. Dick as secretary, supported by seventeen of the ladies representing a Ladies Aid Society meeting of fifty years ago. The ladies were dressed in the style of fifty years ago, wearing hooped skirts and poke bonnets and their conversation was of the quaintly amusing character in vogue at that time. The ladies acted their parts exceedingly well and were enthusiastically received by the large audience. The church was filled to its utmost capacity and the ushers were obliged to put seats in the aisles to accommodate the overflow. We understand that the entertainment netted about $65.

The fine weather of the past few days has enabled the new proprietor of the McKinnon Flour Mills to repair the dam washed away some time ago. We hope to see the mill in operation again shortly.

Dr. Davison, eye specialist has been visiting Alton for the past few days. His headquarters are at the Dixie House. We understand that he has been doing a large business while here and seems to be giving satisfaction to his many customers.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Richard Page, an old resident of Alton, has been seriously ill, but is now on the mend again. We hope to see him around again shortly.

Mr. Norman Shaw, wife and child, of Toronto, are on a visit to Mr. Shaw's brother, Mr. Wm. Shaw.

Misses Edith and Helen White, Jean Smith and Kathleen Calhoun, of Shelburne, took in the entertainment on Friday night and were guests of Miss Susie Clark until Saturday evening.

ST. MARK'S A.Y.P.A.

On Monday evening next a fraternal visit from the Presbyterian Young People's Society will be on the programme. On Monday evening last the rector gave an address on the "Psalms in the Middle Ages."

Reid McAuley, mail carrier on R. R. No. 3, Shelburne, met with a serious loss in having his fine barn on the east half of lot 23, con. 3, E.H.S., Mulmur, destroyed by fire. About four o'clock in the morning Mr. McAuley was engaged putting down hay when the lantern he was using was upset.

WRECKAGE OF WAR.

Flashlight Pictures Taken on Trail of German Army.

Interesting Descriptive Article by Will. Irwin, Special War Correspondent of American Magazine.

Four Americans, of whom I was one, wandered too far from Brussels on the day when the Germans came, and when poor Belgium, pawn of this war, entered upon her agony.

We were trapped by the advancing army at Louvain, and passed four days there under a kind of polite detention. My memories of Belgium, in the stricken time, centre about this city of Louvain. She, with her tragic death as a city, sums up for me the rear of war, the train of blighted lives, of suffering, of fear, of hopeless, utter misery which it leaves behind.

Louvain, as we found it, was a pretty and quiet University town. Our own Ithaca, or Ann Arbor, or Cambridge with a Belgian and churchly twist. The Roman Catholic Church of the world maintained it; this university was the finishing school for the priesthood; even in America it is a boast of a Roman Catholic priest that he finished at Louvain.

Besides the university, the town included a brewery, famous for its sour beer, and a few glass works. The people, like all the Belgians, were a merry and peaceable lot. And suddenly—in the space of three weeks—Louvain, like all Belgium, was in the midst of an unjustified, and uncalled for war. Suddenly her best and most vigorous sons found themselves "called to the colors." Gradually the wounded came back, to fill the nunneries and monasteries. There came a day when the guns thundered, and the rifles rattled at their very city gates. Another day, and a bedraggled, wounded, sullen Belgian army poured through the town in retreat. All that day, refugees came pouring into Louvain, carrying their poor little necessities in bundles; before noon, this horde of misery was pouring on, stupid with grief and fear, toward Brussels.

By then, it was all over. The burgomaster, an old, sick man, soon to pay for the conduct of his city with his life, had met the invader at the Malines gate, had been seized as a hostage, had delivered over the keys, the government, the whole direction of his city, to the invaders.

Our party arrived from one direction just as the great, gray hordes of Germans came from the other. In glimpses here and there, we witnessed the thorough manner in which the German army takes possession of a conquered town. Plainly, they knew every alley, every seat of municipal activity, in this city which they had come to conquer. Within an hour the generals, the princeling who accompanied this army, and the higher staff officers, had been assigned to quarters at the "Table Ronde" the fashionable club of Louvain. Their eternal, gray automobiles had unloaded their kit, the servants of the club were at work getting dinner.

That night, one of us saw the headquarters of the General Staff. They had gone straight to the Palais de Justice, the court house of Louvain, and taken immediate and familiar possession. A battery of typewriters, manned by soldier and civilian clerks, was hard at work. Long before that, the windows and walls bore a proclamation in French and Flemish, announcing the names of three hostages who had been seized for the good behaviour of the town, and commanding the citizens to "rest tranquil" in their homes. The Germans had brought along the printing press which turned out this notice, and the linguists who put it into French and Flemish.

Wherever we turned, we saw that same methodical, cold-blooded efficiency, that provision for everything. The very automobiles, shooting round every corner, at reckless speed, carried musical horns, whose notes indicated the rank and command of their occupants. A two-toned bugle, very soft and musical, proclaimed the coming of the generals and the high staff officers, for whom everyone must make way.

More marvellous than anything else, however, was the absolute system with which they carried through Louvain almost without halt or stop, what must have been two whole German armies. Through the Grand Place, toward which three lines moved, from which three lines converged, the flow was, for three whole days, continuous.

A great gray machine—the word which has been spoken so often of the German army, and which must be repeated, because there is no other. And mostly it was literally a machine. To an extent which no one foresaw this has been a war of automobiles. Many of these had been hastily armoured against barbed-wire entanglements. In front would be a double scythe, sharp and strong, overhead would run a steel framework, to hoist the cut and tangled wires out of the way of the occupants.

The human machines who sat on these inhuman machines presented all the same blood, stolid silent type of North German. The infantry regiments, and sometimes the solid ranks of Uhlan cavalry, marched through town, singing; and that was the only human sign they gave. The army, as yet out of contact with the enemy, for these troops had not fought at Liege, was working perfectly, all its units still under absolute control.

The time came when this or that detachment, sent abroad for some military purpose, dropped out of line for a glass of beer, or for some food, for they were all ravenously hungry on this forced march to take Brussels. And the human side, a rather kindly and cordial side, began to show. Louvain, being a brewing centre, there was plenty of beer. The lucky detachments hurried to the cafes and bars. Some of them invaded our hotel. Here and there was a scholar who spoke English. We bought them beer; we chummed with them. A little soldier boy, to whom we gave a cheese sandwich from our own delicatessen supper, told us that he was from Hamburg; he had sailed to America; there it was where he learned his English. They had come a long way that day; he had seen no fighting but he had helped destroy a town. "They shot at us," he said, "and we killed them." All this in the most matter of fact way.

The officers we met fall into two classes: there is the traditional Prussian martinet, who shoves civilians off the sidewalk; he keeps his manners in war. There is also a class of cordial university trained human kings, who are pleasant to all men save their enemies. Such of these as spoke French or English joked with us over our presence in Louvain, traded reminiscences of America and England, bought us beer. They also spoke in the same strain as the men, concerning reprisals; on these they had a perfectly Germanic point of view. Inhabitants had fired on them; an infantry colonel had been killed as he slept; when these things happened, they followed their own inexorable rule: "Kill everyone, man or woman, in a house which has fired; kill everyone found with arms; if there is general firing, destroy the town."

It was another day, during which we kept to quarters in our little hotel by the railroad station, before we began to perceive that we might be living over dynamite. The sullen quiet of the citizens, creeping about such occupations as the Germans left them, we interpreted for absolute terror. We might have taken a hint, indeed, from the remarks dropped by Madame, at our hotel. A detail of soldiers came in to search our rooms for arms. Madame walking nervously behind, protesting that hers was a peaceable house.

More and more proclamations poured from that efficient German printing press, each stricter in its tone. First came one from the burgomaster and his two fellow hostages, assuring Louvain that their lives were in the hands of its people, and begging for order. Then one from the Germans, commandeering all gasoline; then another ordering the people to cease circulating in certain streets, and to keep indoors by nine o'clock. It was Wednesday when the Germans took Louvain. By Friday night, when the rear guard came through, they issued an imperative order concerning the conduct of the Rue de la Station, and the other principal streets. All ground floor doors must be left unlocked. All windows must be closed all night, and the curtains drawn. There must be a light in every window.

By this time, I think even we had begun to perceive the spluttering of the fuse. Our hotel faced the station and the railway yards. Here worked the postal and telegraph corps—on the first day the Germans had established a military post office, for soldiers' letters home. Here, also, were the quarters of the farriers, and from the area beyond rose and descended the great military aeroplanes.

In all this orderly confusion, we observed a gray prison van drawn up to a group of officers who stood near the freight house entrance. The door of the van opened; soldiers and two young men in their shirts descended. There was a brief conference; we saw someone reading a paper. The soldiers and prisoners remounted the van, drove off into the railroad yards. We strained our ears for the firing, but the cars rumbled too heavily. Presently, however, round the corner came four Belgian youths, wearing the insignia of the Red Cross, and they carried a covered litter. That happened twice more when we watched; once, just before the van drove away, the Belgian Red Cross came to our hotel for a litter which they had stored there; and once I heard the scream of a woman, as though in the final agony of parting. And that same morning, we heard a shot round the corner. A few German soldiers ran; then came silence. Presently, a prisoner went over to the railroad yards; then a litter passed, the occupant moving his head to show that he was alive. One Belgian in the crowd had tongue to speak. "It is a German officer," he said, "he is wounded in the knee."

"How?" we asked. "By accident," he said; but he blinked as he said it. And presently a corpse came back from the railroad yards.

We had seen three days of the German army by now; and it seemed to me, as I watched after this last tragedy, that the whole world had turned into a gray machine of death—earth and air and sky. The gray transport wagons rattled past, carrying gray machines of men. The gray motor cycles and automobiles streaked past, their mufflers cut out, chugging the message of death.

Overhead, the gray biplanes buzzed with a kind of supernatural power. The very singing of the regiments, as they swung in between the baggage wagons, seemed no more a human touch. It was mechanical, like the faces of the men who sang—it was the music of a music-box. And over it all, lay a smell of which I have never heard mention in any book on war—the smell of a half million unbathed men, the stench of a menagerie raised to the 'n'th power of stench. That smell lay for days over every town through which the Germans passed.

And in that mood of mine, I saw a group of German officers looking toward the sky, saw an unnatural light over everything. I craned my neck, expecting to see a monoplane. It was the eclipse. Never have I known so dramatic a setting for a mood of the mind.

And next day the Germans, save for the garrison and a little wagon transport, commandeered hurriedly from the country round about, were gone. We were free to return to Brussels. As we swung along, in the joyful hurry of departure, we found the city rebounding. The people had seemed afraid to talk with us, as though distrusting our foreign manners and clothes in such times. Now they crowded round and chattered in French, or, occasionally, in English. They were pathetically hopeful. Without newspapers, without any authentic information, they were grasping, like all Europe, at rumors. And these rumors were all joyous. The French and English had sent money to repair the devastations of the Germans. The French had come; they were fighting the Germans below Brussels; the English had destroyed the German fleet.

On the streets was another, a sadder thing. Down highway and alley crept funeral processions, sometimes following coffins borne shoulder high by youths, sometimes little, plain Belgian hearses with a gilded cross atop.

Yet, as we left, as we saw the last suburb of Louvain fade behind the hill, something of the joyous mood had infected me. Perhaps Louvain—barring that hard winter of starvation which all Belgium must endure—had seen the worst of this war. In happier times, I would come back. I should find time then to see the interior of those great, vaulted churches, with their treasures of the Middle Ages, which had stood locked during this curious visit. I should find time to laugh and to mourn with the good little Belgian people, whom I had met, over an old adventure, and an old sorrow.

II.

Let me leave Louvain for a time; I am writing, after all, not so much concerning that tragedy which all the world knows, as of war, and what it does to men and countries, not only Germam men and Belgian country, but all men and all countries.

I was again to see the German army intimately, three days later. The machine had gone on, clear through Belgium, even to the borders of France. The English had made a stand at Mons, on the left of the Allied line. A German flanking movement, hurled unexpectedly by means of perfect transport, at this point had cut the English to pieces. A German adjutant, who handed out information and passes at headquarters, had said:

"You can probably go with these passes at least to the rear of the army. We have some English prisoners on exhibition. Better go see them."

And so two of us rode in a Brussels cab to Braine-les-Contes, and then walked to Mons.

We had our passes; and to guard against an over-nervous trigger we tied on our left arms white handkerchiefs, that looked at a distance like Red Cross insignia.

Not a village was left intact in the path of the German invasion. Everywhere there were proclamations. In each town and hamlet, it appeared, the Germans had seized their three hostages, to be shot if citizens broke the regulation against sniping. From walls and windows, these men shrieked in black-letter type for their lives—begged the inhabitants not to molest the Germans.

Arles and Braine-les-Contes, second class cities like Louvain, stood unscathed; but the villages were ruined along our way. Some hamlets were gone utterly, only the walls standing after the fires; in one of these I found a group of inhabitants poking about in the ashes, trying to rescue what little they had. All wore that same expression of unemotional stupidity which I found in Belgium, to be the brand and mark of extreme suffering. It was a ruined countryside, too. There was neither cow nor horse in the fields. Germany, I understand, thriftily gathered her crops before she went to war; Belgium had been caught napping. Such wheat as the peasants had cut stood blackening in the shocks; the standing wheat drooped over-ripe, and it was dropping its seeds.

The eternal carrot and turnip and cabbage fields, which make Belgium the market garden of western Europe, were all unattended. Across the fields coursed uncertainly, needlessly, flocks of pigeons. I marked them anxiously, wondering at wild game birds in a country so settled; and then the truth flashed it upon me. These were domestic pigeons, whose home cotes were gone.

One perceives calamity like this only in little glimpses which testify the whole; and I think I caught it most typically in the state of the roads and streets. One who has ever motored over French or Belgian roads, in the far-gone period before this war, knows them for perfection. Anyone who knows the small French town, knows that you might take your dinner from its sidewalks. The roads were ruined, cut into furrows, the gutters stuffed with garbage and dirty straw, the tree borders barked. The towns, so neat a week before, were dirty beyond belief; and over everything still hung the stench of an army.

We had left Braine-les-Contes, and were walking down the road before we caught up with the transport of the German army. Amongst these men, as they sat stolidly bobbing up and down on the carts, or lolled at ease on their horses, shone out now and then, a fine, powerful, intellectual face. And it revived in me, always, the chief intellectual horror of war. In these ranks, and equally in the French ranks, march incipient Pasteurs and Ehrlichs, born with the genius to save the suffering in our world; incipient Faradays, born with the genius to interpret the forces of this world; incipient Rodins and Sudermanns, born with the genius to bring the beauty out of the world. There they go, on to the chance of death before the guns.

This was the same army which had moved through Louvain, but a different army, too. All along the front there had been fighting; discipline had relaxed a little; now they noticed us, the strangers, but with a kind of sullen ill will. The first officer who stopped us to inspect our papers growled as he ordered us on. The second spoke some English.

"We have three thousand English prisoners," he said with a kind of dull triumph. And then in a querulous tone, "Tell me, you Americans, what are the English fighting us for? Why are they not with us?"

The road reached a great, gardened nunnery, shaded by tall trees. At the entrance stood a shrine of the Virgin, dressed out with flowers, now fading. There were no nuns in sight, but only Germans and the gray dunnage of a German hospital train. All along the roadside lay the slightly wounded, their arms in slings, their heads bound up, a dead look in their eyes. Each wore, affixed to his coat, a numbered tag. From time to time, they passed a water-bottle down the line, drank, relapsed into silence.

We came, now, to a little village in which only one or two of the houses had been destroyed. A little wayside bar was open; we stopped for a drink of mineral water, ordinary water being dangerous in these times. A little man, his face lined and seamed with anxiety, crawled up to us and addressed us in East-end cockney English. He explained, quickly, that he was a Belgian, but had lived a long time in London.

"It started 'ere, gov'ner," he said, "they shot off their first cannon over there. All night they 'ad me for guide. They tied me 'ands. They said they'd shoot me if I guided them wrong. They just let me go."

And there, across the road, lay the fresh signs of battle. A row of trees topped a rise; behind it, the fields had been torn and trampled until the earth showed brown instead of green. In the foreground lay what looked like a trench, but it was a covered trench now—"the dead," the Belgian said.

And near this point, we came upon a farmhouse before which lay a group of men in unfamiliar uniform. I had looked at them for thirty seconds before I realized that I was looking at the uniform of a Highland regiment in war-khaki. They sat resting on a curb, their heads bowed; they lay stretched out in the road in an abandon of weariness and discouragement. The insignia had been taken from their uniforms. A detail of German infantry with fixed bayonets watched them; now and then, a soldier growled a surly order.

"May we talk to them?" I asked a sergeant who spoke French.

"Non—non," he growled. But as we passed on, a blue Scotch eye here and there glanced at us with a curious longing, as for news and conversation from one who spoke the mother tongue.

Around a bend appeared another line of prisoners, perhaps two or three hundred, this time mostly in the sober brown of the British line regiments. These marched wearily, in irregular ranks. Germans guarded them on all sides; the captors were shouting out orders; the English were answering in low sullen oaths from the corners of their mouths.

They passed; and, as the wayside sign proved, we were in the village of Nimy, a suburb of Mons.

Or what had been Nimy. In three different places it had been set on fire. The doors had been battered in, the windows broken, everywhere on the bricks were the splashes of bullets, of whole volleys even. In a street stood a little shoe store, its "best lines" displayed in a show window and dressed out with cards which read: "Cheap," "American fashion," and the like. The broken plate glass lay littered all over this little display. Further on was a hardware store, and this showed marks of a terrible struggle. Someone had built a barricade of stoves before the door; these stoves were all battered and broken; across them lay the wreckage of a door. Beside it a fire had started. The house was gutted—gone; but the pear garden stood untouched, the trees full of ripe fruit.

Here and there was a house unscathed amidst the ruin. Always it flew from a window the white flag of surrender; always on the door was chalked in German the legend—which we had been seeing all along the way—"gute Leute" (good people). A few women stood dumbly in the doorways of the unscathed houses.

We were in Mons, now—a "city of the second class" as we should say in America. The rear guard was quartered here; like Louvain the week before, it reeked with the army. Cavalry held the park; wagon trains occupied the whole great Grande Place. The walls were plastered with proclamations, announcing hostages, begging the citizens to be good, calling upon all who had brown leather, or men's shoes or socks, or gray cloth, to bring those commodities into headquarters. The cafes made a pretense of keeping open; a few silent guests even dined or drank at the tables.

There were no quarters anywhere for us, and as we, with our English appearance, threaded through the army, looking for rooms, the looks and gestures became even more hostile. We passed a battery of artillery. They stopped us. In concert, they poured out a flood of German, accompanied by the waving of clubbed muskets, to show what they had done to the English. A packet of cigarettes appeased them.

It was getting on toward eight o'clock, and a proclamation from that eternal German printing press informed us that all Mons must be indoors by eight. Down by the rusting, disused railway, we found at last a hostess with the courage to let us in. Two young German officers, she informed us, were quartered in her house. We saw them at dinner. As a wise precaution, we showed them our papers and explained who we were. They looked over the papers, said a few formally polite words and fell to the business of getting out reports, while they ate.

The German army had struck the enemy; it had seen its dead. Under a discipline no longer inhumanly machine-like, but dark and grim, it was rolling on toward Death, or Paris.

The time had come for four of us to leave Belgium; we were going back to Aix-la-Chapelle in Germany by a returning troop train; thence into the neutral territory of Holland.

Brussels, when we left it, was intact but hopeless—a city running quarter-speed. All industry, except for a little retail buying, had stopped. There was no milk for your morning coffee; and eggs were growing scarce. Our hotel kept service running as usual, with two companies of German soldiers quartered in the lobby. In an anteroom off this lobby, once a kind of ladies' parlor, a detail of the Red Cross, whose business it was to care for the feet of the soldiers, bandaged and soaked and patched.

The inhabitants merely stayed indoors, watching behind closed shutters, or roamed the streets aimlessly. There were no newspapers; there was no news at all, except the announcement that Namur had fallen, posted by the Germans at all the crossways. Crowds would drift back and forth, following aimless impulses, like the flocks of newly released pigeons which I had seen a few days before, over the barren fields by Mons.

The German garrison had settled down on the city temporarily and having found place and quarters, they began to display a little of their human quality to such of the conquered as would have commerce with them. I saw a detail sitting on a bench before a bar trying to flirt, in their heavy French, with three Belgian girls, whose lips laughed at the jokes, while their eyes looked defiance. I saw a soldier leading a stray baby home, and comforting him as he walked. Here and there, a soldier off duty would converse with a knot of people, giving them in French, or through an interpreter, such news as he had.

On the night before we left we visited at the house of an American who was standing his ground, when a Belgian entered.

"You knew Louvain, didn't you?" he said, in that even, dead tone with which people break bad news. "It's gone—destroyed, burned—'ecrase,'" —he burst out on that word. Then he told the story as he had heard it from the Germans. A son of one of the hostages had shot the German commander. It had been a signal for firing from the roofs. And the rest had happened as a matter of course.

"You'll see it to-morrow," he added.

At the Brussels station we waited from early morning until late afternoon. The Germans had restored traffic on this one line, to forward troops.

When I came into the Brussels station on the day before the Germans arrived in force it was neat, with perfect Belgian neatness; orderly, with a perfect Belgian order. Now infantry regiments rested in the straw along the platforms. A battery of artillery occupied the central platform. In one corner, a cook in his undershirt was dealing dinner into the mess cans.

Because we were going back to Germany, the troops were all smiles and cordiality; first toward their countrymen on the further platforms, and then towards us. Though we understood no German, and made it plain, they crowded round us, insisting on conversation.

Presently, we found the linguists among them. One had been a waiter in New York. He was going back after the war. Would we go to Hamburg? Because he had a mother in Hamburg.

There came then a straight, tall fellow, a corporal with a fine face. He had relatives in San Francisco, people of whom I know. Would I write when I went back, to say that I had seen him? He had intended to go to the Exposition.

There was still another, an officer, punctilious but very cordial. He had "finished" at Oxford, and got there his perfectly idiomatic English. His best English friend was still at Oxford. Would we take the address? And when we got out, would we send him a note? "To say that I'm, here and well," said the Herr Officer.

Yet, a moment later, when we asked him what Germany was going to do with Belgium, he said:

"Keep it, I suppose—then we'll be near England, and you'll see what we'll do to that horrible country!"

When the train started at last, fifty soldiers scrambled for the honor of carrying our bags. They refused tips. An excited little private came along, waving a bottle of port. He threw it into the window of our compartment, and stood bowing with his hat off. When we finally gathered speed, the whole station rose up and cheered us madly.

It was sunset when we began to get the heavy odor of smoke, and now we had come over a hill—to a sight of Louvain.

They had told us the truth; it was a city of desolation.

That part of the town which lay nearest had been burned the day before; the smoke lingered, but the fires were down. In the foreground a glass factory still stood. Behind it were rows on rows of houses, so orderly, so well arranged that we did not realize we were seeing a dismantled city until we noticed that the windows gaped empty, and all the roofs were gone. We strained our eyes toward the great Hotel de Ville, the pride of Louvain. It stood, rising stark and severely beautiful in the desolation, all its six steeples intact. But a scaffolding which had faced its western facade, was gone—it had been burned over. Besides it rose majestically four ruined walls, all that was left of old St. Pierre's, that irregular human Gothic church which had been gathering beauty for six centuries.

A private thrust his head into our window; we talked no German, but he yelled and babbled on and on. From the distance came regular explosions. He waved his hand in the direction of the sound; he made pantomime of shooting, cutting, thrusting, with a bayonet. There was no liquor on his breath; but he reeled and waved in all his movements. A detail strung along the station railing took up the conversation. And all gave play to those same exaggerated gestures, as of drunken men.

Through the main archway of the station, as shadows in the half-light, we could see soldiers; we could see a troop of men in white shirts, showing by their attitude that their arms were bound behind them. Three shadowy figures rose high above the rest on the pedestal of the statue of the "Liberator of Louvain;" we heard, in intervals of the babble, a voice either reading or chanting. We got this scene in a half-light of whites and blacks and grays, like a Whistler etching. In its very dimness, its suggestion of mystery, lay half its horror.

A detail of cooks brought up a sleek Holstein heifer to the entrance of the arch. My mind on the greater want, I wondered dimly what they were doing, until a soldier, with one bayonet thrust dropped her dead. They turned the carcass over; they fell to skinning it, to cutting it up. All through the rest of that chanting, that babble of the soldiers, sounded the blows of the meat ax.

A Hollander, white about the lips, translated from the babbling of the soldiery.

"Those up there are men who are to die," he said, "the rest are the men who have been caught in the town. They are watching for an example."

We saw the three dark figures descend; we saw the white splashes, which were the captives, file away. We say a dark line of soldiers fall low. I cannot say for sure, because there were many sounds, but I believe I heard, just afterward, the sound of volleys.

The engine came. And at last, we pulled out of Louvain.

The train shot into a cutting and after that was no more of Louvain but smoke.

It was in Holland, two days later, that I saw the tiny, significant thing which was to bind up all my recollections of Belgium of the German occupation, of Louvain. I had stopped at a post-office to send a cablegram. On the wall hung a poster, done with the art which the European puts into his posters—a thin, anaemic child, an anxious mother, a kindly physician, and a lettered appeal from the International Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. I remembered, then, that all through the half-ruined towns of Belgium I had been seeing this poster with eyes that saw not, until now.

The world had been transformed in a month; the currents were all running backward. In that incredibly remote period a month before, we had just bent all the fine strivings of humanity to the saving, the bettering of life. For this purpose, the abler and finer spirits of the age had been peering through microscopes, combining and recombining the elements of nature—to make life, which it lasted, more endurable, to check human waste, to bring a new kingdom of the spirit to the earth. To that end had Faraday labored, and Ehrlich and Metchnikoff, and those others more obscure, whose work flowered in the achievements of these giants. We were going further; we were beginning to see what we could do to co-ordinate all men's efforts for all men's good. We were trying to curb man's selfishness, that there might be in the world fewer hungry mouths, fewer lives blighted in the beginning.

And it seemed to me, as I contemplated that fading poster, giving forth its message of peace and good will from an old, dead world, that Odin sat enthroned in the seat of Christ.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS.

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excess of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS.

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, DEC. 10th, 1914.

The Unearned Increment

In the columns of The Sun a farm is advertised for sale a mile and a quarter north of the Kingston Road, in the County of Durham, a hundred and fifty acres with frame dwelling, large bank barn, horse barn, driving house and poultry house, and three acres of orchard—all for the modest sum of $3,500, or less than twenty-four dollars an acre. An expert informs us, that not to speak of fences, wells, drains and so on, the buildings enumerated would cost not less than four thousand dollars. And we have Mr. Donald Johnston's testimony that away out in British Columbia orchards are held at a thousand dollars an acre. Besides the farm has been cleared of forest, and its owners have contributed to the making of roads and to the building of schools, court houses, jails and railways.

Would the Globe be good enough to tell us what is the unearned increment on the land and what would be assessable if tax reform were in force and improvements were exempt from taxation?

The Globe ought to lock up Progress and Poverty, and for six months study the facts. We take the liberty to state a proposition or two, for its examination:

1. The flocking of people to a city for an extended period means that they find profit despite the exactions of the space owners.

2. The permanence of the population of great cities proves that the space owners do not exact enough to expel or drive out the people.

3. When profit diminishes from any cause, as from the destruction of national credit or the suffocation of the farmers, the space owners reduce their rents.

4. For that reason the space owners are now reducing rents in Toronto by twenty per cent., and before this storm is over they will reduce them so far that the first mortgagees will generally become the owners of space.

5. Generally, the people do not care a fig about the cost of space if they improve their lot.

6. The people of the Canadian West do not believe in the destruction of private property in land or the remaking of the world, although they have passed single tax acts.

7. They have passed these acts to increase their own space values by forcing settlement and outlay on improvements.

8. Their purpose will fail because settlement will not yield to threats or exactions, but only to the promise of profitable use of the Western land.

Therefore, we arrive at the conclusion to which every road conducts us that to people the land, increase space values and make everybody happy, the farmer's margin of profit ought to be increased. That is what we meant when we said that a trebling of farm values would involve a fortunate improvement in the welfare of the landowners, a vast increase in the production of wealth and the profitable employment of many thousands who, though not in legal fiction owners, would, nevertheless, enjoy an undeniable access to the soil, and in a just sense the ownership of it.—The Weekly Sun.

Final Dividend

Shareholders of the York County Loan and Savings Company are now receiving their final dividend from the assets of the company. The rate is 5½ per cent., which, with previous dividends, brings the distribution of assets during the nine years of liquidation up to 55½ cents on the dollar. The work of liquidation has been delayed by the difficulty of locating thousands of the shareholders. When the cheques for the first dividend were sent out 35,000 were returned by the post office for better addresses, and over 45,000 cheques for the second dividend came back. A total of $480,000 was represented by these returned cheques, but since then an energetic effort to find the shareholders has reduced this sum to $44,000. It is expected that fully 50,000 of the cheques now going out will be returned for better addresses. The final dividend brings the total distribution to $1,625,895.87, leaving a balance of unrealized assets with a book value of $26,323. The following is a summary of the realizations and expenditures by the liquidators since 1905:—Total amount received, $2,342,555; preferred claims, $276,357; general expenses, winding up $350,955; liquidator's remuneration (fixed by court), $98,714.; total dividends, $1,625,895; unrealized assets, $26,323.

Charged With Theft.

William Delaney, caretaker of the Superior Portland Cement Co's. plant, has laid an information against Alexander and James Cooper, Collingwood, whom he charges with stealing an inspirator, some small valves, a large steam globe valve, some pipe fittings, a wire cable rope and several small articles from machinery belonging to the Company. The thefts are alleged to have been committed last summer while the defendants were building a cement bridge near the Caledon Lake marl beds. Chief Marshall brought Alexander Cooper from Collingwood last week. James was excused from accompanying the Chief back on the strength of a doctor's certificate of illness, but will make the journey later. The preliminary hearing will take place before P. M. Pattullo next Tuesday.

THE SOUTH CHARGES

Evidence Was Taken Before P. M. Pattullo on Monday

The adjourned hearing of the charges against Wesley South of this town took place before P. M. Pattullo on Monday. The charges, five in number, which were laid by ex-Chief Wm. Marshall, are described in the information as "theft." The "theft" consists in receiving money from the Corporation of Orangeville for lumber supplied by one of the members of the Council. The bills were presented by South, who seems to have acted as an intermediary in the matter.

The hearing aroused a great deal of interest about town and a large audience was on hand when the trial commenced. County Crown Attorney J. L. Island acted for the prosecution and Messrs. C. R. McKeown and A. A. Hughson appeared for the defendant. South pleaded not guilty. The witnesses examined were Messrs. A. A. Hughson, Town Clerk, W. N. Irwin, who assists with the Treasurer's books, Chas. King, town engineer, J. J. White, Wm. Marshall and Councillor J. A. Matthews. Mr. Hughson produced the minutes of the Council and certain accounts which were filed as exhibits. These minutes showed that accounts of $77.73, $78.20, $34.80, $7.25 and $7.00 had been presented in the name of the defendant and passed by resolution of the Council. Mr. Irwin produced the Clerk's orders and Treasurer's cheques proving the payment of the accounts. Engineer King described his duties, which included the purchase of lumber material and the certifying of the accounts. Mr. White, who was Chairman of the Road & Bridge Committee in 1913, told the Court that King ordered the lumber used by his Committee. He understood that it was to be supplied by Matthews.

Wm. Marshall, who lodged the informations, swore that he had seen Matthews deliver lumber for which South billed the town. He did not think South had delivered any of it. South had told him he had no interest in the accounts. Marshall said that since 1913 he had been keeping tab on certain members of the Council. Mr. Matthews was not in favor of continuing him as Constable and had been at him a couple of times to resign.

Councillor Matthews, when placed on the stand, stated unhesitatingly that the accounts referred to in the charges were all in his handwriting and that the material charged for was all supplied by him and charged at the same prices as other parties paid. South did not know anything about the accounts and had not received a cent as commission or otherwise. The Council, witness stated, understood that he was supplying the material. He had no contract, but simply delivered the material as ordered.

After hearing the evidence the Magistrate adjourned the case until Tuesday, suggesting that in the meantime the Town Council which met Monday night, should pass a resolution asking the County Judge to make a thorough investigation. The Council did not act upon the advice and on Tuesday South was bound over to stand trial at the next General Sessions.

Psychic Research

Science treats lightly Sir Oliver Lodge's belief that psychic research has brought him into communication with a spirit world. The communications of a spirit world which reach us through stage performers and the substance and the language of which are not more than a revelation of the medium repeating them are not impressive. A French writer, Anatole France, who is always poking fun at the Jews, sends one of his characters down to interview Virgil, whom he finds very angry because an earlier interviewer, Dante, had untruthfully reported to the world that he had been converted to the reformed Jewish religion. A robust spirit world taking the trouble to communicate with us ought reasonably to be able to compile a dignified and correct conveyance of its message. On that account, probably, Sir Oliver Lodge relies mainly on the testimony of what is called telepathy is, of course, morally more and on coincidences of thought. Telepathy is, of course, orally more respectable than the spiritualism of the darkened room, but it can hardly be said that the strongest case which it brings forward is not a result of chance, unconscious suggestion, imagination, or the desire to win.—The Weekly Sun.

The Northern Electric Co's. account of $90 was referred to the Fire & Water Committee for report.

An application from Jos. Holmes for rebate of taxes on business assessment was referred to the Court of Revision.

Mr. W. H. White, South Ward, addressed the Council respecting an error in his taxes. The matter of his complaint was referred to the Court of Revision for consideration.

A letter from Frank M. Robinson on the subject of starting a knitted goods factory in Orangeville was turned turned over to the Industrial Committee.

The Fire Underwriters Association had its annual communication before the Council calling attention to the danger of fire from Christmas displays. The Association also reminded the town fathers that hydrants ought to be put in good order for the winter and the snow shovelled away from them so that they could be reached easily in the event of fire.

Mr. A. E. Amis had a couple of letters before the Council respecting complaints from taxpayers who feel they have been aggrieved. One stated that Judge Fisher claimed exemption from the income tax and had paid this portion of his tax under protest. The other referred to the claim of John Bennett, landlord of the Hotel Alexandra, that he should be exempt from business tax. Mr. Bennett bases his contention on a decision given by Judge Klein, of Walkerton, who held that hotels in local option municipalities, having been deprived of their licenses, are not liable for business tax. The communications were placed in the hands of the Court of Revision.

In compliance with the request of Dr. Margaret Gordon, President of the Women Suffrage Association, Council decided to take a referendum on the question of granting the franchise to married women, who own property and pay taxes. The referendum will be taken at next municipal election, provided there is an election for the Council.

John M. Dods claimed that he was entitled to be exempted from at least a portion of the taxes charged against him. After considerable discussion the Council decided to rebate Mr. Dods' taxes up to Aug. 1st, 1914, and to levy for school taxes on a $10,000 assessment for the remainder of the year. Mr. Dods will be required to pay full taxes on two parcels of property west of the factory.

The necessity of taking steps to provide a sewerage system was again impressed on the Council in a letter from Dr. J. W. McCullough, Provincial Officer of Health.

Ex-Mayor J. L. Island was voted an honorarium of $25 in recognition of his services to the town up to the time of his resignation.

Council voted $50 to Orangeville Citizens' Band and also showed its interest in the welfare of that institution by instructing the Clerk to write Geo. E. Reid, who is now in British Columbia and request him to return a clarionet which belongs to the town.

A by-law was passed appointing deputy returning officers and poll clerks and fixing the polling places for the next municipal election. The polling places and officers are:—

West Ward—Wm. Cruikshank's shop—Jos. J. Kelly, D.R.O., R. B. Henry, poll clerk.

A PERTINENT WHY

What is Reason for Licensing Sale of Harmful Alcoholic Beverages?

To the Editor:

"Consistency thou art a Jewel." We have very strict laws regulating the sale of morphine, cocaine, opium and other poisonous drugs and prohibiting their use only under special conditions. That is very wise but why license and encourage the sale of alcoholic beverages that do infinitely more harm than all the others put together?

The deaths from drink, in the United States, have been estimated to be ten per cent. of the total. If we estimate ours at even one half of that it gives us over five thousand deaths every year from drink. Physicians generally admit that that figure is much too low, but suppose that only five hundred or even one hundred lose their lives through drink is it not criminal to allow this slaughter to go on?

Look at the trouble and expense we take over one case of smallpox yet here is something that is a thousand times worse than smallpox allowed to be sold freely and one man allowed to urge and even force another to partake of it.

Hard times are ahead of us and yet two millions of dollars are spent every year over the bars of a small city for that which does more harm than opium, cocaine, war and pestilence all put together.

War is terrible but the Outlook, one of the highest class journals in the United States, in speaking of Russia having prohibited the manufacture and sale of intoxicants, said that "Russia has already conquered a worse enemy than Germany."

When will people learn the dreadful fact that beer and whisky are our greatest enemy, debauching and destroying the vitality of the race so that half of our young men are not able to pass the medical examination for service in the army?

BLOUNT.

Dear Editor, allow me a little space for a few of the principal items of news around Blount.

Many of our young people enjoyed themselves at the Fowl Supper given by the Women's Institute at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Meek. All report a good time.

Mr. W. P. Dodds is attending the Winter Fair in Guelph.

Mr. John White is moving into his new house this week.

Miss Lillian F. Duke is visiting friends in Caledon East.

The mail carrier is thinking of getting an auto to carry the correspondence from Ballycroy to Mono Mills.

Some things we would like to know:—

How C. C. enjoyed himself on Thursday evening.

If W. A. went to Hockley after the concert.

What G.P. thought of the concert on Thursday evening.

MARSVILLE.

Court Marsville C.O.F. held its annual oyster supper and banquet in the Orange Hall on Friday evening of last week and the affair proved a great success. The members and their wives to the number of one hundred participated in the social event. An excellent supper was served after which an entertaining program was provided by the Dyer Bros. and Mr. Neil McCormick. Patriotic and humorous songs by Bro. C. Coumop and Master Jenning Stanford were well appreciated. A reading was given by Bro. Armstrong and a short address by Bro. John Cornelius. Bro. L. Boggs, presided. It was after midnight when the National Anthem brought the happy event to a close and all dispersed feeling well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

The patriotic meeting which was held in the Disciples Church on Thursday evening was largely attended, but it proved a disappointment to all present as it was announced that our parliamentary representatives would be present, but both failed to put in an appearance. Rev. R. S. Scott was present and gave a thoughtful address on Militarism in Germany. Reeve Ferns occupied the chair.

The Marsville Rifle Association will hold a business meeting in the Orange Hall on Monday evening, Dec. 14th. All members are requested to be present.

The following are the officers of Shakespeare Court 7331, A.O.F., Orton:—P.C.R., N. Dearing; C.R., Arnold Black; S.C.R., Stanley Boggs; Treas., Jas. Nevills; Sec., L. Boggs; S.W., Stanley Dearing; J.W., Draper Depew; S.B., J. Boggs; J. B., D. Black; Trustees, D. Black, Sam. Boggs, N. Dearing; Auditors, N. Thompson, J. Boggs, V. Armstrong.

CALEDON.

We can now boast of three dramatic clubs, so who can bait that?

We have the Old Dramatic Club who presented The White Oak Tavern last year and who are working hard on their new play "The Danger Signal." Then we have The Caledon Dramatic Club," who made such a "hit" last year with the favorite melodrama "My Old New Hampshire Home," and who have reorganized this year and chosen the bright, sparkling, witty Irish play "Shaun Aroon," and last but not least we have the newly formed True Blue Club, who will put that old favorite drama, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," on the boards in a way that will do credit to the play and also to themselves. The Caledon Dramatic Club will present their new play for the first time in the Town Hall here on Christmas night, and the True Blue Club will appear in Erin on the 28th inst. Now who will be the next.

Rev. Henry Berry, of Hawkestone, visited Caledon friends while on his way to preach anniversary sermons at Holland Centre.

Mr. Harold Stuckey, one of the genial and obliging proprietors of Caledon's Departmental Store, has returned to business after a two weeks' vacation in the Queen City.

The people of this community turned out well to the Stock Judging Class held here last week by Mr. Carroll, the District Representative for this county. Very great interest was shown in the judging of horses and while all did not agree at first with the expert, Dr. Reed, yet when he gave his reasons for his work all were forced to admit that he was right.

Municipal matters are very quiet in Caledon considering the nearness of the election and some ratepayers predict an acclamation for the whole council. Reeve Quinn has only occupied the chair one year and the custom here has been to give a reeve at least two terms. We understand that there is a movement throughout Ontario to have all municipal councils re-elected by acclamation wherever possible and donate the money incidental to running an election to patriotic purposes, so considering local conditions Caledon should be in line.

MONO MILLS.

The annual Christmas Tree and Tea Meeting of Mono Mills Methodist Church will take place on Friday evening, the 18th inst. A varied programme will be provided by the S. S. children.

The concert held in the English Church hall under the auspices of Mono Mills L. O. L. No. 192 was a splendid success. The hall was well filled and the programme pleased everyone. The celebrated Laurie Bros. and their wee sister were the chief entertainers. The Misses Lyness provided some delightful music and happy addresses were given by R. Blain, M.P., Rev. J. A. Black and Rev. C. H. Quaife. The proceeds were about $69.

FIRE CHIEF WEDS.

Former Orangeville Boy Joins Army of Benedicts in Medicine Hat.

William E. Hatcher, Medicine Hat's Fire Chief, was married last evening at 7.30 to Miss Beatrice Auger, formerly of Maple Creek.

The ceremony took place at the home of Mrs. James Fleming, the bride's sister, and was performed by the Rev. J. W. Morrow.

The bride was attired in a blue travelling suit and was given away by Mr. Fleming. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the Fleming House, at which relatives of the bride and a few intimate friends of the bridegroom were present. The rooms were tastefully decorated with pink carnations.

Among the numerous presents to the bride were a bracelet watch from the bridegroom and a leather chair from the Old Timers' Lacrosse Club.

The couple were conveyed to the station in the Fire Department's car which was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Trailers of old boots and shoes, tin cans etc. brought up the rear.

They expect to be away on their wedding trip about a month and will visit Toronto and other eastern cities. They take with them the good wishes of a very large circle of friends. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Hatcher will take up their residence in Medicine Hat.

Chief Hatcher has been in Medicine Hat for nearly fifteen years and has always been connected with the fire department. He has been chief of the brigade since it was organized about seven years ago. Prior to that he was Chief of the Volunteer Brigade.—Medicine Hat, Alta. Morning Times.

Mr. Hatcher and bride arrived in town on Monday evening and are now visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hatcher. The Banner joins with the groom's many Orangeville friends in offering its hearty good wishes and congratulations.

ROSEMONT.

Mr. Jas. Christian, of Ennis, was in our village on Monday.

We wonder if there will be an election in Mono this year, and if J. W. intends coming out.

We expect a wedding near our village next week. Particulars later.

There was a lively time near the village Friday night last. There was considerable loud talk, but all ended in smoke.

Mrs. H. Little visited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hand, of Alliston, for a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Halbert and family, of Everett, spent Sunday at Mr. Thos. Henderson's.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Armstrong spent Sunday with Alliston friends.

Miss Ethel Little is visiting Alliston and Essa friends.

Mrs. John McDowell and little son, Claude, spent a few days last week with Toronto friends.

Our young people are looking forward to seeing our new skating rink completed, and then for the ice.

Thrashing is all wound up around our village again for another year.

Mr. A. Ferris, of Stanton, was in our midst last week doing some chopping.

Christmas will soon be here and the Russians have not reached Berlin yet.

Mr. Jim Murphy visited his brother, Mr. A. Murphy, of Everett, last week. The latter is very ill.

Mrs. Harry Clark

A copy of the Delisle, Sask., Advocate, which reached The Banner a few days ago, contained the following account of the death of the late Mrs. Harry Clark. The report indicates the high esteem in which Mrs. Clark was held in her Western home.

"The early demise of Mrs. Harry Clark, of Delisle, on Monday, November 23rd, has cast a gloom over the whole community. Mrs. Clark was one of the spiritually minded women of earth, whose influence for good was felt by all who knew her. Her father's affectionate tribute was, 'I never knew Lucy to retire to rest for the night without reading her Bible.' Blessed memory! Great sympathy is felt for Mr. Clark, his two little ones and family connections. The funeral service took place on Wednesday, Nov. 25th, at Delisle Union Church, where a large concourse of sympathizing friends paid their last respects to a beloved sister. Her pastor J. I. Thorn officiated, assisted by Rev. W. A. Macdonell.

Besides the husband and immediate relatives from the town and district, the mourners included Mr. T. Clark, of Bounty; and Mr. Rowan, of Orangeville, deceased's father, who arrived on Monday night.

A number of young men from the neighborhood—Messrs. J. Gordon, Ross Miller, D. C. Miller, H. Dyer, J. Price, J. Fisher were the bearers.

The deceased had lived in the Delisle district nearly four years, coming after her marriage from the east here. The big attendance at the funeral service showed respect from all. She was in her 32nd year.

Mr. Clark and little son, Donald, and Mrs. Clark's father, Mr. Rowan, of Orangeville, have taken the body East for interment in the home cemetery.

Will praying people remember aching hearts?"

Waste of Animal Life.

It is a dreadful thought that when animals are shot or trapped their young must often be left to starve. This is the case with larger as well as smaller victims of the fur-wearing fashion.

A writer tells of a baby bear which he saw, half way up a tree, where it had tried to take refuge. It was wailing like a lost baby, and looking around in vain for the loving mother whom it would nevermore see. It had been left to its fate by those who had killed and skinned the parents. Few animals are more barbarously treated than the bear, which is trapped or shot. In the former case it often suffers horribly before it is despatched.

It must startle the most unthinking to read the following list of animals killed in a single year in North America for shipment to the fur-market of Great Britain alone. Here are the figures: 128,000 foxes, 2,100 wolverines, and 82,000 beavers, 15,500 otters, besides 2,000 sea otters, 103,000 martens, and nearly 594,000 racoons, 867,000 skunks, and 2,000,000 muskrats. And these figures by no means represent the entire destruction of animal life required in one year that skins may be had for human dress.

The validity of the Act passed by the Ontario Legislature, imposing an added tax on life insurance companies, is to be tested in the courts. The companies hold that said tax is 'ultra vires' and have advised the Provincial Treasurer that they decline to pay the same.

PEEL COUNTY COUNCIL

Report of Proceedings at the November Meeting

J. D. Orr, of Brampton, Given Appointment of High Constable.

The November session of Peel County Council lasted from Tuesday until Saturday and was a particularly interesting one.

The engineer of York county wanted to replace the floor of a bridge on the Etobicoke border with treated wood block, but the council decided that plank would do.

A night watch who had been employed to guard the court house each night for the past month was dispensed with and Peel's capital will have to take its chances should there be an invasion of hostile Germans.

An account from Newmarket High School for the tuition of a Peel county pupil was laid over as the council was not sure that the residence of the pupil was in this county.

A motion recommending the appointment of W. J. Beatty as a member of the Toronto-Hamilton Highway Commission was carried.

Peter Rawn, of the Mono Mills district, claimed that a horse belonging to him had received injuries on the county road on 15th sideline, con. 4, Caledon, which resulted in its death. This and two or three claims for auto breaks caused by alleged defective county roads in the southern part of the county were referred back to the committee on county roads.

Messrs. Frank J. Jackson, of Toronto township, and John D. Gorbon, of Brampton, were appointed auditors at a salary of $30 each. The salary last year was $40 each.

The Women's Institute, which uses the council room in preparing material for the Red Cross Society was given permission to place a piano on the premises.

The judge's room had been fixed up at a cost of $79.

The County Property Committee was instructed to engage County Engineer Wheelock to prepare a large map of Peel to be hung in the council chamber.

Peel has been without the services of a High Constable for two or three years. A letter from the Crown Attorney asked that one be appointed. J. D. Orr, of Brampton, got the position at a nominal salary of $50 and fees. The county formerly paid a salary of $200 to this official.

The last motion of the session asked that a grant of $1000 be made to Toronto township to meet some of the expense incurred in repairing Dundas Street which is a part of the county good roads mileage. The request was not acceded to.

Reeve McCabe endeavored to have the money which was paid out of Albion's share of the good roads money for damage claims charged back to the county. The sum asked is about $1,500 made up as follows :—McClelland, $250; Keenahan, $400; Slack, $846. The council spent considerable time discussing this matter and finally referred it back to the Good Roads Committee.

The report of the Peel-Halton House of Refuge was presented by Mr. Earle, of Halton, and included every detail in connection with that institution. There are 12 inmates at present, six more than last year. There have been six deaths during the year. Each county is furnishing about the same number of inmates—Peel 21, Halton 20, and one is being paid for by Dufferin. The net cost is $5,784.77 ; net cost to Peel, $2,823.78. Some of the other figures are:—Salaries, $1,546.11 ; supplies, $1,340.60 ; dry goods, clothing, etc., $409.72 ; interest, $205 ; capital, $745.

The Patriotic Fund Committee reported that 87 volunteers and reservists had left with the First Canadian Contingent from this county. Of these 75 had been insured for $1,000 each in a straight life policy with the Metropolitan Life of New York, the only company that would accept the risks. The committee expects to insure the remaining 12 soldiers. The average premium on each policy is $42.06, which is the regular straight life policy plus $25 of a war indemnity. The company will accept the records of the British War Office as proof of death, and the policy is made payable to the Patriotic Committee. At the present time eleven families are on the list of dependents. The wife or mother receives $12 and $2 for each child monthly. This is in addition to the Government payment of $20 a month to the wives as separation allowance. Seven families have been given $20 each of an emergency grant.

Owing to a misunderstanding as to the status of the two or three small culverts on the Peel-Simcoe boundary line which had been constructed by Reeve McCabe, Albion, payment was deferred until such time as they are placed on the schedule of county bridges. Reeve McCabe pointed out as a peculiar fact that there is fifteen miles of this boundary over which the county Engineer or a county of Peel official has never travelled. Simcoe county council insisted on the construction of the culverts and no doubt Peel will consent to pay their share in due time.

The by-law to confirm the agreement between the County of Peel and the township of Toronto and the village of Port Credit was the most important business under consideration.

The Township of Toronto entered into an agreement with the Highway Commission to grant $4,000 per mile to that portion of the roadway running through the township. This was made on the distinct understanding that the county would assume half of the account, or $2,000 per mile. This the county was ready to do, on condition that the county be relieved of the maintenance of the road and also of the erection of a new bridge over the Credit River.

In stating the case to the council, Warden Rutledge said he had the direct assurance of Mr. Irish, a member of the commission, that the bridge would be built by them.

Reeve Elliott, of Port Credit, said the same assurance was given to that village by members of the commission who waited upon them, Mr. Lush and Mr. Davis both giving the Village Council to understand that this would be done.

With this assurance from the Commission, the County of Peel, the Township of Toronto and the village of Port Credit were ready to confirm the agreement, but it has since been stated by George H. Gooderham, M. P.P., chairman of the commission, that the construction of the bridge is no part of the contract and it must remain a County of Peel bridge. In view of this position the Council refused to pass the by-law.

A proposition was made by Reeve Elliott that if the county would contribute $2,000 per mile for that portion which is now in the incorporated village of Port Credit, the Village Council would take over the road.

The commission's difficulty arises from the fact that a bridge, which under the statute will meet the requirements of the ordinary traffic of a county highway, will not suffice for the traffic which will pass over the new provincial roadway. The attitude of the County Council at the present time indicates that the members believe the commission to be in duty bound to provide the whole cost of the bridge. As this is the last meeting of the Council, the working out of the question will be before the Council of 1915 at its session in January next.—Bolton Enterprise.

Had Nervous Dyspepsia

With Frequent Sick Headaches and Much Pain After Eating — Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured.

This letter is from a lady who gained 14 pounds by using the great food cure. It did wonders for her in improving her general health. She is enthusiastic in its praise, and refers to her neighbors as witnesses of the splendid results obtained.

Mrs. Susan Dobson, Spring Hill Mines, N. S., writes:—"It is with pleasure that I write to you in praise of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was troubled with dyspepsia, and could not eat without suffering much pain; also had sick headaches frequently, and my nerves were in bad condition. About ten years ago I took a thorough treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, using altogether 21 boxes, and since then can eat anything, have been freed from headaches, and my health has been greatly improved in every way. I gained 14 pounds in weight, and feel sure I owe everything to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You may use this letter, and my neighbors can tell you of my condition before using this treatment."

HAVE PRETTY HAIR

Thick, Soft, Fluffy and no Dandruff—Use Parisian Sage

If your hair is losing its natural color, coming out and splitting, or lacks that enviable softness, gloss and beauty, do not despair—pretty hair is largely a matter of care. If it is too thin make it grow. If it is harsh and brittle soften it up—lubricate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off. Freshen up the scalp with Parisian Sage — all dandruff disappears, falling hair and itching head case, your hair is doubly beautiful.

Parisian Sage, sold by F. S. Pickering and at all drug counters, is just what you need—a large bottle costs but 50 cents. It surely makes the hair lustrous and seem twice as abundant. You cannot be disappointed in Parisian Sage.

POULTRY HOUSE DESTROYED.

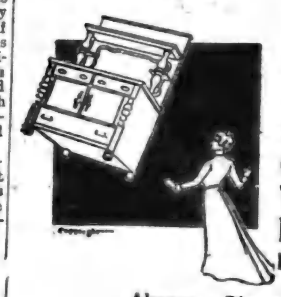
Nearly 5,000 Fowl Smothered or Burned, Being Fed for Killing.

Fire on Thursday last consumed the large frame poultry house belonging to Gunns, Limited, Harriston, in which were nearly 5,000 fowl being fed and made ready for killing. Nearly all the birds were smothered by the smoke or burned to death. The fire is supposed to have originated in the boiling room, where the feed is prepared. Fortunately, the wind was from the southeast, and carried the flames away from the main cold-storage building. As this is the busy season for the poultry business, quite a number of hands will be thrown out of employment. The loss will be a heavy one, but the amount of insurance could not be learned.

India Out of Matches.

A scarcity of matches is being felt in India, and if the war is protracted an absolute famine will likely result. Austria and Sweden did an extensive trade with India in matches and Japan was by no means a mean rival. It is practically impossible to get any matches from Sweden at present, and even consignments from Japan will be limited in quantity. Japanese matches are moreover not so popular as the others.

War In Schools.



The war news is being dealt with each day in many of the London schools, and the masters are explaining the situation to their classes. One master read out to his boys the whole of Mr. Lloyd George's speech, emphasizing those portions that expounded the developments preceding the outbreak of war.

Germany Counted on Short War.

A special writer in the Westminster Gazette (London) says that American friends of his who were in Germany when war broke out assure him that Germany counted on a short war. "Hence," says this writer, "the series of rushes—the rush to Paris, the rush to Warsaw, and the rush to Calais—and the trampling down of obstacles, legal and moral, which stand in the way of German necessity sprinting to its goal. My American friends surmise that the economic as well as the military preparations of Germany were laid down for a war which would be brought to a triumphant conclusion within three months, and that, if this calculation miscarries, the economic factors will become powerfully into play against Germany at the end of this period."

MRS RUSSELL'S EVIDENCE

Wife of Brooklyn Pastor Tells Why She Sought Divorce

Her Husband Had Acted Improperly with Other Women.

The story of 'Pastor' Russell's domestic troubles culminating in divorce proceedings by Mrs. Russell makes informing reading. It is told as follows in "Facts and More Facts." When reading the narration it should be borne in mind that Mrs. Russell's evidence is the story of a wronged woman as it actually appears on the Court records.

We have not space here to quote to any extent from the court records of this case; all we can do is to summarize the findings, and we will give nothing but what is public property and shall rather understate than overstate the case, from Mr. Russell's point of view. It came out in the evidence first that his "conceit," "egotism" and "domination" were such as to make life intolerable to any sensitive woman. Second, that his conduct in relation to other women was "improper." Third, that on one occasion that he was silent to his wife for four weeks, and only communicated with her by letters of a reproachful character. Fourth, that he sought by most despicable means to isolate his wife from society, and designed to get her pronounced insane in order to put her away.

As to his "improper" conduct towards other women. That you might see that I know whereof I speak and am telling the truth, I will quote from Mrs. Russell's evidence upan this subject taken in the Court of Common Pleas No. 1. She is under oath, and direct-examination by her Attorney, Mr. Porter.

Q. When did you have your first material disagreement with your husband?

A. The first serious trouble with my husband was what you stated this morning, the first indignity with this woman who was in the office and in our home.

* * * * * * *

Q. What was the name of the girl?

A. Rose Ball.

Q. That is the girl you spoke of a few moments ago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long had she been with you before this trouble arose?

A. She came to us in about 1884.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did she live with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did she live with you?

A. She was with us for about ten or eleven years—oh, she was with us about twelve years.

Q. Just state what you observed about your husband's conduct with this girl in your presence in your home.

A. Previous to this time my husband had suggested to me the idea of separation, and he said if I would agree to a separation he would give me the house in which we were living. He said we were incompatible.

Q. When was that?

A. That was shortly before this objection was made, about 1893. We were still living on Clifton Avenue.

Q. What brought about the proposition from your husband?

A. A number of disagreements, and one thing was this; there had been letters that my husband had written to parties to which I had to make very serious objections. One of them came to me in this way. Mr. Russell had certain letters, certain envelopes that were marked, "Personal" was printed on them, and he sent a number of these envelopes to persons that he wanted to correspond with him privately.

* * * * * * *

Q. I want you to tell us what your husband did in company with this woman Rose, in your presence and in your home.

A. One evening I spent the evening downstairs, and our library and bedroom were next to each other upstairs on the second floor and I spent the evening downstairs reading, and I went upstairs about ten o'clock to my room, and I supposed that he was either in the library or had retired, and when I went up there, I found that he was in neither place, and I stepped out in the hall and there I found that he was in his night robe, sitting beside Miss Ball's bed and she was in bed. On other occasions I found him going in there, and I found she called him in and said she wasn't well and wanted him in, and I objected to this, and I said that it was highly improper, and I said, "We have people about the house, and what kind of a name will be attached to this house, if you do that kind of thing?" and he got angry.

Q. You state that you found him doing this at other times. How often after that?

A. I found him a number of times; I don't remember how often.

Q. In her room?

A. Yes, sir. And I found him in the servant girl's room as well, and I found him locked in the servant girl's room.

Q. Did he make any explanation why he was in the girl's room?

A. No, he did not, he just got angry.

Q. What did you say to him about this conduct and what did he say?

A. I said to him. "We have a great work on our hands," and I said, "In this work you and I have to walk very circumspectly before the world, and if you are going to do things like this, what will happen? Suppose you are all right, don't you suppose people will talk about things like this? and I said, "I am not satisfied with it," and he said he wasn't going to be ruled by me. But I felt distressed about that.

Q. When would he go to the Watch Tower in the morning?

A. I don't remember; he generally went down alone.

Q. Who would return with him?

A. She came with him in the evenings, and they came home about eleven o'clock and the young men would go home, and he wouldn't allow her to go home with them, and she must wait and always go with him.

Q. I want the mere fact. Did this girl Rose go home with your husband?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the young men came home ahead of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State to the Court and Jury what talk, if any, you had with this girl Rose, in regard to her relations

A. I told him that I had learned with your husband..

something that was very serious, and I didn't tell him right away. I let a day elapse until I felt I had control of myself and could talk, and then I told him that I had something very serious to tell him about this matter and he said, "What is it?" and I said, "Rose has told me that you have been very intimate with her, and that you have been in the habit of hugging and kissing her and having her sit on your knee and fondling each other, and she tells me you bid her on no account to tell me, but she couldn't keep it any longer. She said if I was distressed about it she felt she would have to come and make a confession to me, and she has done that."

Q. What year was that?

A. He tried to make light of it at first, and I said "Husband, you can't do that. I know the whole thing. She has told me straight, and I know it to be true." Well, he said he was sorry; it was true, but he was sorry. He said he didn't mean any harm. I said "I don't see how you could do an act like that without meaning harm."

Q. What year was that?

A. In the fall of 1894.

Q. Did you state to your husband at this meeting any endearing terms?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were they?

A. I said, "She tells me that one evening when you came home," I asked her when did these things occur? I said to him, "She says they occurred down at the office when she stayed down there with him in the evenings after the rest had gone, and at home at any time when I wasn't around."

Q. Now, about the endearing terms?

A. She said one evening when she came home with him, just as she got inside the hall, it was late in the evening, about eleven o'clock, he put his arms around her and kissed her. This was in the vestibule, before they entered the hall, and he called her his little wife, but she said, "I am not your wife," and he said, "I will call you daughter, and a daughter has nearly all the privileges of a wife."

Q. Then, what other terms were used?

A. Then he said, "I am like a jelly fish. I float around here and there. I touch this one and that one, and if she responds, I take her to me, and if not, I float on to others," and she wrote that out so that I could remember it for sure when I would speak to him about it. And he confessed that he said those things.

When in court in Hamilton, Russell confessed with some difficulty that his wife had "found" him in his night robe in the room of Rose Ball, sitting by her bed and holding her hand, but explained that he was "only feeling her pulse," he admitted also that his wife "found" him locked in the room of the other servant girl, Emily Matthews, but explained that he had locked the door that the young woman might hear what he had to say to her. It is due Mr. Russell also to state that in the Court of Common Pleas, he swore that he was only locked in the servant girl's room a minute, and in our Court, he swore he was locked in the room but "two minutes." But his wife has a little different story to tell about the length of time that her husband was locked in the room. Though not under oath—the oath makes no difference to her—she said, "It was between six and seven o'clock in the morning. I missed my husband and went in search of him. I called to him but there was no answer. I went to Emily's room, and found the door locked. I called to him, and knocked on the door. I stood there for seven or ten minutes; then he came out. I reprimanded him, and he only got angry and said 'I will not be run by you.' These are not my words, but a statement of Mrs. Russell to my lawyers in my presence. Though I will not vouch for the truthfulness of this statement, I have all confidence in Mrs. Russell's veracity.

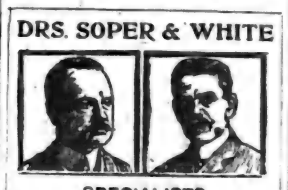
Indigestion and Headaches



Arising From Constipation, Cured and Regular Habits Established by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

In the western Provinces, where as many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

Mrs. H. K. Hewer, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Alta., writes:—"For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and languid feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

LAW AND FREEDOM

Answer to Argument that People Cannot be Made Good by Act of Parliament.

To the Editor,—

The defenders of the liquor evil have one stock argument which they are fond of using. They say that people cannot be made good by Act of Parliament and seem to think that puts an end to controversy on the subject.

The fact is that no one outside of an asylum ever said or thought that anything but the power of God could make people good. Law can and often does remove the cause of a great deal of evil and thus makes this world a better place to live in. No intelligent physician thinks that medicine cures disease but it often does remove the cause of disease and allow nature to effect a cure and change a life of suffering into one of happiness and usefulness.

Law can and often does prevent, to a great extent, the use of intoxicating liquors, and thus removes the cause of a great deal of crime, poverty and suffering. Just at present we have an example in Russia showing the marvellous benefits that follow prohibition of the liquor traffic. The Editor of the Outlook says that Russia, in prohibiting the use of intoxicants, has already conquered a greater foe than the Germans and remarks that this is practically a teetotal war.

But we have examples nearer home, Maine, Kansas and N. Dakota which show that after prohibition has been enforced for a length of time insanity and many other diseases become much less frequent, many jails and poorhouses become vacant, wealth increases, taxes decrease and the country becomes prosperous as never before.

Law can give liberty. At present the tyranny of one social custom compels thousands to drink to their hurt who would welcome a law that would set them free. Even prisoners in several jails are combining to beg the Government to stop the use of intoxicants. Law can and does prevent many causes of disease and it could, to a great extent, prevent this greatest of all causes of disease.

Law cannot make people good but it can make it easier for people to be good by preventing the use of a poisonous drug which makes men ten times more liable to do wrong.

Paris in War Time.

As a matter of course Paris is not the Paris of old. It is just as beautiful, from some points just as interesting, but 'twill be a long time before the capital returns to its former brilliancy. With three-quarters of the men in all walks of life away, many of the most important shops closed, nearly all private homes locked up, few large hotels taking guests, all museums shut down, this is not Paris. A very few stray cinemas have opened and are trying to do business, but the men and women left in the city do not seem attracted to anything so tame as a cinema scenario. They want to talk war, and nothing else.—New York Sun Corr.

MONO TAXES

Are Higher in Some Places Because of Special School Rate

Councillor Jas. A. Morton Shows Good Points in Work of This Year's Council.

Glencross, Nov. 7th, 1914.

Editor of The Banner.

Dear Sir:

Will you kindly allow me space in your columns to say a few words to the ratepayers of the township of Mono about their taxes. Some explanation on this score is a matter of importance, as there are so many of the ratepayers who do not understand the reason why the taxes are higher in some places and lower in others than they were last year. To those who do not understand why this should be I want to say that if they will compare their tax slips with last year's, they can see plainly that the township, county and general tax rates are the same as last year and that there is no difference in their taxes except in the special school rate, which is controlled by the Government and the Treasurer and the Trustees. Now, gentlemen, you see plainly that the Council has no control whatever over this.

Now, I wish to say a few words to the man who is writing to the Orangeville papers over the signature "Traveller" and who says that the taxes are up in Mono and that the Council must be hungry for money. To this man I want to say that he should compare the records of the councils of 1912, 1913 and 1914 before he would be justified in making these statements. Now we all know that the councils of 1912 and 1913, built eight bridges and that they issued debentures for $13,000 and also sold these debentures and paid for the bridges out of this money and so left them for their successors to pay back less one payment. Now, sir, we had this debt to pay off the township and eight more bridges to build and pay for out of the taxes we collect each year from the ratepayers and not out of the Bank, as our predecessors did. Now, sir, this is what the council of 1914 has done. It has also kept the roads and bridges in as good repair as it found them, if not in better. Do you think, sir, that you are justified in making such a statement. I would also ask you to remember that these eight bridges that the councils of 1912 and 1913 built will cost the ratepayers $18,786.60. Do you not think this is an enormous sum for those eight bridges to cost? Do you not also think that the Council that has built one bridge on the Centre Road, and one on the townline between Mono and Mulmur and has at the same time met the debenture debt payment, which is $1252.44 out of the taxes collected this year, is doing it well, if not better, that the Council that left the township in such a debt? Kindly answer this question and let us know your opinion in your next letter.

Yours Respectfully,

J. A. MORTON.

A Successful Course in Stock Judging

Something new for Caledon township in the shape of a course in stock judging was conducted at Caledon last Thursday and Friday.

The course was under the auspices of the Farmers' Institute Branch and the Peel Co. Department of Agriculture, and was organized by Mr. J. A. Carroll, the District Representative. Notwithstanding the fact that most farmers were taking advantage of the mild weather to overtake arrears of ploughing, the attendance on both day's sessions was well up to expectations.

On Thursday afternoon Agricultural and Heavy Draft Horses were discussed by Dr. H. G. Reed, of Georgetown. Those in attendance first listened to an address by Dr. Reed in which the desired type and conformation of heavy horses was explained, and afterwards classes were brought in to be judged by all and reasons given for the various placings. Regarding the requirements for different classes of light and heavy horses there was considerable discussion and many points not previously understood by the majority were made clear.

A meeting held in the Town Hall on Thursday night was voted likewise a success. Addresses delivered by Dr. Reed and Miss Susie Campbell were highly interesting and instructive, whilst a musical program rendered by local talent was thoroughly appreciated. Friday forenoon was devoted to a discussion of Light Horses and in the afternoon Sheep and Beef Cattle were discussed by Mr. F. D. Shaver and Dr. Reed, respectively. This, the first course of the kind held in Caledon, having been so well taken by the farming community bids fair for the success of future events of a like educational nature.

Young People's Night.

The members of St. Mark's A. Y. P. A. entertained St. Andrew's Young People's Society on Monday night. The members of the visiting Society met at their own church and walked to St. Mark's. President G. C. Webster, of the A.Y.P.A., opened the meeting, Mr. Trueman Kellie, President of St. Andrew's Society, taking the chair afterwards. The programme, which was furnished by the visitors, consisted of selections by the S. S. orchestra led by Mr. T. Presley, a solo by Mr. Connop, a recitation by Mrs. Banks, a short address by Rev. W. M. Morris and a Play entitled "Uncle Jack" or "Testing Hearts." At the close of the programme refreshments were served by St. Mark's young people. Both Societies had a large turnout of members. The meeting was brought to a close with the National Anthem.

GEORGE B. HARSHAW

Was Born in Mono Township and Died in Florida

Friends of Mr. George B. Harshaw were pained to learn of his death which occurred at his home at three o'clock Sunday morning.

The funeral took place from the family home at 9.30 o'clock this morning, the services being conducted in the presence of a large number of friends by Revs. Alexander Linn and Dr. Compton. The interment took place in Cycadia cemetery, and the body was followed to its last resting place by a long cortege of sorrowing friends.

At the time of his death Mr. Harshaw was in his 57th year. He was a native of Toronto, Canada, and came to Florida from that place about twenty years ago, settling first at Sorento. At the latter place he established a fine orange grove which was destroyed at the time of the freeze in 1895.

He came to Tarpon Springs about fifteen years ago and bought valuable property on the north side of the river. Here he established a home where he resided until the time of his death.

Until a few months ago he had enjoyed good health, but has been confined to his bed most of the time for the past three months. His death was due to heart failure.

Mr. Harshaw leaves a wife and four children: Mr. Thomas Harshaw, Miss Lottie Harshaw, Mr. George Harshaw and Mrs. Peter Capsolis.

The pallbearers at this morning's funeral were: Messrs. J. C. Beekman, G. M. Morrish, C. E. Fulton, M. N. Hill, B. V. Goodwin and John Rondos.

Mr. Harshaw had many friends who deeply regret his death and the bereaved family has the sympathy of the entire community in the sorrowful hour. — Tarpon Springs, Fla., Evening Leader, Monday, Nov. 23rd.

Deceased was a son of the late Geo. Harshaw, one of Mono's pioneer settlers, and a brother of Mr. T. J. Harshaw, Prince of Wales Road. He was born and spent his boyhood in Mono.

Dance at Mono Centre

Friday last, Dec. 4th, will be long remembered as one of the big nights at Mono Centre. The occasion for this special remembrance was a big dance and euchre party, which took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Martin. There were about 100 invited guests present. Dancing started early in the evening, excellent music being furnished by Messrs. Patterson, Henry, Buchanan, Jackson, Sherra and McDonald. The floor managers were Messrs. Thompson, Bagnell, Jackson and Aikens, all of whom performed their exacting duties in a most happy and pleasing manner. A dainty repast was served at midnight and was greatly enjoyed by everyone. The programme was then changed and a number of songs were rendered by several of the guests. One of the events of the evening was a step dance by A. Patterson and R. Langford, to the accompaniment of the auto harp skilfully played by Mr. Fred. Buchanan. The dance was afterwards restarted with its oldtime vigor and no one thought of home until four o'clock in the morning. Mr. and Mrs. Martin and family entertained their guests with the utmost hospitality and are certainly entitled to a great deal of credit for the fine night's entertainment they provided.

Jimmie had a good keg of beer stowed away on the premises and the Inspector has sent an invitation to appear before the magistrate to answer about the matter. Time for it has been set.

Christmas shoppers will find good lines in Brass and Leather goods at the Banner Bookstore.

When evening falls you like to sit round the table and read, the whole family does. The Weekly Sun of Toronto has departments of interest to everyone, and the markets and editorials for the week down to a date are complete and a bright and helpful home paper for mother and the girls. It is all interesting, every issue is full worth while. It would make a Christmas present that would be a profit-bringer one, and you make the pay.

—About 20 of the members were out for band practice on Monday night.

—Subscribers, who paid The Banner in advance during the recent Voting Contest, will be given the benefit of our regular clubbing rates when they wish to renew their dailies.

—The Boy Scouts will please bring flags for Signalling Exercises on Friday evening. Will they also bring cuttings instead of papers in future, so as to save time at the meetings.

—Samuel Fitton, an English farm hand, was up before P. M. Pattullo on Tuesday on a charge of attempting to burglarize the house of Robt. Little, a young farmer near Camilla. The offence occurred last Thursday night. Little had given Fitton a night's lodging, but during the night found him prowling about the house. The offender was sent up to the County Judge for sentence.

—Stove wood thieves are getting in their work in good shape these nights. At regular intervals wood has been stolen from a pile in the rear of Mr. Beswick's furniture store, and the quantity taken has been so large that a plan has been arranged to trap the sneak in his nefarious act. Fire wood stealing is as bad as sheep stealing, and there is a possibility that this culprit will be placed where neither fuel nor food will cost him anything.

Black Hand Charge

A man named Geo. S. Wellar was arrested in Toronto last week and lodged in Brampton jail on a charge of endeavoring to extort $750 from Mr. W. A. Cranston, storekeeper in Caledon East, by means of threatening letters. The first letter Mr. Cranston received demanded $500 and when no attention was paid he received a second demanding $750. Failure to comply meant death. The money was to be left in a tin box in a certain woodpile. Mr. Cranston got Provincial Detective Miller on the job and he ran down Wellar as the guilty one. Wellar's father lives in Caledon East and he is a frequent visitor at his home. They say Wellar has virtually confessed, pleading poverty. He has been out of work as a carpenter since September. He is a big, fine looking man.

MIGHTY FORTIFICATIONS.

A Description of the Giant Defensive Works of Europe

Sebastian le Prestre de Vauban, a French engineer, who lived in the 17th century, conducted fifty-three sieges and never lost one. He is the father of the science of permanent fortifications. Europe, in the present conflict, bristles like an angry hedgehog with the vast defensive works which he originated. What discoveries Vauban failed to make were achieved by another Frenchman who happened to be born on the Belgian side of the frontier—Alexis Henri Brialmont. The two men are the Alpha and well-nigh the Omega of modern military engineering. Their joint work Brialmont's superimposed upon that of Vauban is being subjected to the severest test that ever was applied to the material devices of man.

The battering of the most formidable artillery in the world upon fortified places on either side of far-stretching frontiers is giving rise to a question of vital importance to statesmen and generals. That question might be put thus: "Has the science of projectiles and of artillery construction outstripped the skill of the building of fortifications?"

In other words, have the size, the mobility, and the penetrative force of the latest and greatest guns made useless the vast works of defence constructed all over the civilized world at an expense which has kept nations sweating to pay the cost?

The data furnished by the present hostilities, as far as they have progressed, are inconclusive as an answer to this question. It is true that Namur, the work of Brailmont, and one of the strongest fortifications in Europe, succumbed, after two days' bombardment, to the gigantic motor borne howitzers of Von Kluck's army. It is also true, however, that Liege, likewise fortified by Brailmont, was maintaining an effective resistance in some of its outlying forts as late as the end of August. Lille, strongly fortified, was surrendered without a blow. Verdun, pounded by the flower of the German army under Crown Prince Frederick William, showed no signs of yielding at any stage of the attack, and survived in effective condition to hearten the Allies during the retreat of the Germans under the terrific onslaught of the Franco-British forces.

Roughly speaking, Europe is divided into three parts by two distinct systems of opposing fortifications, marking the lines of contact between three rival races. These fortifications follow the strategic requirements of two frontiers—the Franco-German and the Russo-German. In some instances the discrepancies between geographical frontiers and military exigencies are so wide that fortified places stand many miles back of the political boundaries. In general, however, the fortresses of Europe stand in approximate alignment with the frontiers.

In addition to these three main divisions of the strongholds of Europe are the elaborate defensive works built through the centuries to protect capitals from invasion, and the vast fortresses constructed by small nations, either to enforce the neutrality of their respective territories or to repel invasion by powerful neighbors.

It is a notable fact, for instance, that some of the smallest countries on the European continent have expended relatively the greatest amounts on defensive enterprises of formidable scope. In the two countries that stand out most conspicuously in this respect Brailmont was the engineer and builder. It was Brailmont who designed and constructed the fortifications of Antwerp, Liege, and Namur in Belgium. Brailmont was the author also of the fortifications of Roumania, designed for protection against invasion from Russia.

The calculations of the past have been justified in the case of Belgium, which has based part of its defensive preparations upon the prospect of a German invasion. In Roumania the fears of the military engineers have so far been proved unfounded by the events of history, for Roumania has never been in conflict with Russia. By an odd irony of fate, however, Roumanian strategy has not anticipated the situation of to-day, wherein an invasion is possible from the Austrian side as a result of Roumania's likely intervention in the Russian operations against Austria.

Belgium is the most strongly fortified country for its size in the world. The little monarchy has been the battle-ground of Western Europe since Caesar's day. Armies have trodden down its soil with iron heels. German hosts have grappled with French; Anglo-Saxons have striven with Gauls; the Belgians themselves, half French and half Teutons, have struggled with their neighbors, the Dutch, for liberty.

Of the capitals, Paris is the most strongly fortified in the world. This condition is the result to some extent, of the disaster of 1870, when Prussia, after crushing the French armies in the field, overcame the last resistance of the third empire in its ultimate citadel.

Unlike Paris, Berlin is comparatively defenseless, in so far as any immediate fortifications are concerned. The fortress of Spandau is a semi-medieval, semi-modern work of which little is known outside of the intelligence departments of armies.

Spandau undoubtedly could give a good account of itself in the event of an attack upon Berlin but the German staff counts upon checking the enemy long before his cavalry appears in the suburbs of the capital. The real fortifications of Berlin are on the French and the Russian frontiers.

VIENNA, CITY OF BATTLES.

Vienna is a name that recalls sieges and battles and the din of races in a death-grip. German and Hun and Pole and Turk have fought beneath its walls; it was here that the gallant Sobieski, with his Polish Uhlans—the originals of the present German cavalry—smashed the power of Kara Mustapha in 1683 and saved drowning Europe from the final sweep of the Moslem wave.

St. Petersburg—now renamed Petrograd in an effort to banish the memories of the German civilization which gave Peter the Great to Russia and established the Slav "window in Europe" over the marshes of the Neva—is girdled by a ring of steel and concrete set across the entrance to the Morskoi Canal, the searoad to the Muscovite capital. At the harbor frowns the fortress of Petropavlovsk—Saints Peter and Paul whose dripping casements have stifled the cry of many a revolutionist. The guns of Petropavlovsk sweep the entrance to the gulf; on either side of the battlements of this main stronghold frown a line of fortresses and marine batteries, each fully manned night and day, keeping ceaseless vigil.

BELGIAN FRONTIER FORTIFIED

France has affected to regard the inviolability of the territory of Belgium as a sufficient barrier to a German invasion through Belgium. In practice, however, the French general staff has treated the treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of the little monarchy as a practically negligible quantity, and has carried out a scheme of fortifications along the Belgian border in the expection that Germany would step over Belgium to attack France in the northeastern region. The attention which the French have paid to the development of the fortifications of Dunkirk, Lille, Civet, and Mazieres, strung out in a line along the Belgian border, is conclusive evidence of this provision.

On the German side of the French frontier no lack of preparations can be laid at the doors of the German strategists, opposing Toul and Verdun are the great defensive works of Metz and Diedenhofen as a primary base in the event of an advance or a first line of defense in case of a retreat. Back of these two strongholds is a chain of forts strung along the valley of the Rhine.

These defenses, kept up and improved at great expense for the past forty years, are Strassburg, Germersheim, Mainz, Coblenz, and Cologne. The resisting capacity of these places is so great that an invasion of Germany by the Allies on the western front that is not predicted upon the reduction or the investment of at least Metz, Diedenhofen, Strassburg, and preferably Germersheim, is destined to end not only in failure, but in a probable disaster for the invaders.

No account of the fortifications of Germany would be complete without mention of the low-lying island of Heligoland, which barely tops the surface of the North Sea a few miles from the mouths of the Elbe and the Weser. Heligoland was a British possession until the year 1890, when it fell into the hands of the Germans by one of the most characteristic little diplomatic dickers with which the Kaiser has accomplished impressive results from time to time.

The price which Germany paid for the island of Heligoland was her renunciation of her "claim" in Zanzibar under the tripartite agreement which enabled Great Britain to establish a protectorate over the African island.

To-day the island which Germany obtained in return for a "claim" is a bristling center of land and sea defenses and a base for submarine raids that may prove of disastrous significance to Great Britain before the war is over.

On the Russo-German frontier two lines of fortifications glare at one another, charged with death-dealing power all along the artificial frontier which Russia, Germany, and Austria, then making common cause for the spoliation of Poland, created by the last phase of the dismemberment of that brave but unhappy country in 1795. On the German side are the bristling battlements of Konisberg, Danzig, Thorn, and Posen, the ancient Posnan of the Polish kingdom. In a general way these works are designed to reinforce the natural defensive features offered the the valley of the Vistula River.

GERMANIC LINES JOINED.

Where the German fortifications cease the common system of Germanic defense against Slavic invasion is taken up by Austria with the fortified cities of Cracow and Przemysl, which have played so important a part in the present Russian operations against Austria. These two points are the outposts, so to speak of the towering Carpathian Mountains, the geographical defences of Austria at this point of its frontiers.

To these defensive works on the German and Austrian side Russia has opposed a vast system of fortifications, laid out in the course of the centuries, in a long, bulging line from Koxno, in the north, to Kamenetz, in the south. Warsaw, the former capital of Poland, is the key to the series of Russian defenses—Warsaw, bitterly contested for centuries in the never-ending conflict between the Slav and his numerous enemies, the Tartar, the Gaul, the German, and the Slav himself.

The coast line of the British Isles fairly bristles with military works of various kinds, designed to prevent the only sort of invasion possible in that part of Europe—an invasion by sea. In that respect the defenses of Britain resemble closely those of the United States, which does not possess a single comprehensive structure for permanent defense at an inland point, but has confined its fortification works to structures designed to repel attacks by fleets.

The seaward defenses of Great Britain, however, are formidable. A girdle of concealed batteries, armed with the highest powered guns yet devised, encircles the tight little isle and its restless islet across the Irish Sea. These batteries are designed, of course, to co-operate with the fleet in the event of the employment of England's naval power to protect her shores. Naturally the mouth of the Thames, as the gateway to London, is well-guarded by permanent artillery, extending in a frowning barrier from Dover to Harwich.

DECISIVE TEST TO COME.

Such are some of the structures in the giant system of defensive works that have been built by the European nations at enormous expenditure and by the employment of the highest engineering skill obtainable. The frequent predictions in the past few years that science would soon devise new forces of destruction which would render mountains of concrete and steel plates as yielding as a child's sand-pile, have not been justified by the operations of the War of Nations. Neither has it been shown that fortifications can hold back great armies very long. The final test between the forces of defense and of offense, it is quite evident, is yet to come. If this test should result in the consignment of Europe's vast defensive works to the scrap-heap, then military science would revert in one respect to its beginnings, when warriors, unprotected by any defenses, faced each other in conflict breast to breast. The frequent employment of the trayonet charge in the present struggle would seem to indicate that the method of primeval man-to-man force is by no means a discarded element in warfare.—Munsey's Magazine.

DUFFERIN LIBRARY INSTITUTE

The convention this week of the Orangeville public library district was well attended, this being the first occasion of the sort on which the new Carnegie public library here was used. The convention proved to be most interesting to the numerous librarians who assembled and to many of the general public as well, for the public library is an institution which is of more than passing interest to everyone, and while the convention was devoted chiefly to discussion of phases of library activity it was still of consuming interest to those who love good books and who systematically devote time to culturing themselves from the pages of the best authors.

The session Tuesday afternoon was taken up with business, including the presentation of reports and inspection of the library building. At the afternoon session, Mr. W. O. Carson, of London, president of the Ontario Public Libraries Association, conducted an "instruction hour," dealing with the selection and purchase of books, handling his subject most ably. At the evening session, which was attended by not only the delegates, but by many citizens, a most interesting program was presented. His Honor Judge Hardy, Brantford, delivered a splendid address on Libraries, Active or Passive, containing much in the way of suggestions and plans for making the work of the library more directly interesting to the public at large and extending its scope. Mr. Carson spoke on the Modern Public Library Movement, showing what was being done in the way of education, through the provision of good literature. Mrs. Scott Raff, Toronto, took as her topic the Interpretation of Literature through the Spoken Word, showing how vastly more interesting literature could be made by being well read, referring to the ancient custom of having readers to interpret the works of authors of their time, and advocating the return to the custom. In the course of her address she read two selections; and the reading brought out beautifully the points in her address.

The session Wednesday morning was very interesting. Miss Patricia Speremen, Toronto, gave a practical talk on the care of books, their preparation for circulation and how to keep them in repair. Mr. H. H. Burgess spoke on the Use and Abuse of Libraries; and Miss Norah Thomson gave an address on Children's Reading. A short talk on departmental matters by Mr. W. R. Nursey, Inspector of Public Libraries, and the report of the Resolutions' Committee concluded the Convention.

The following were the officers elected by the convention for the Orangeville district this year: President, Rev. R. W. Phalen, Markdale; 1st vice-pres., James McKinley, Grand Valley; 2nd vice-pres., W. [illegible] Peacock, Brampton; sec.-treas. D. McPherson, Orangeville; executive committee—Rev. Dr. Calder, Shelburne; Mr. John Vance, [illegible] Mills; Mrs. C. Wissler, Hanover; H. Hart, Brampton; Miss [illegible] Scott, Owen Sound, and Mr. C. [illegible] Elvidge, Durham.

It was decided to hold the convention for this district in the town of Grand Valley.—Star & Vidette.

The Ontario Children's Aid Society has offered to look after 50 Belgian orphans if the Provincial government will bring them over.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. McDonald, Grand Valley, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Cassie Mae, to Mr. William A. Sutherland, Regina, Sask., the marriage to take place early in December.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS.

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Considerable merriment is being enjoyed around town at the expense of one of the popular young ladies. After washing her clothing on Monday and placing them on the clothes line to dry, she was surprised on looking out the window to see several men chasing a cow around the street with certain parts of her clothing over its head. The cow had got them fastened on her horns and the gentlemen in an effort to save the clothing created much amusement for the onlookers.—Flesherton Advance.

SHOOTING MATCH.

The first shooting match of the season was held in our village on Saturday, Dec. 4th. About twenty enthusiastic marksmen met here and with Jas. Milloy and Chas. Dyer as captains, sides were chosen, and a match held forthwith. The scores were particularly good considering it was the first match, first place being tied by Jas. Milloy and Jas. Johnston with a score of 165 out of a possible 175; 2nd, Neil McCormick; 3rd, Fred McMillan; 4th Robert Nodwell. At the conclusion of the match, the losing side took the winners, who were captained by Jas. Milloy, to the Exchange Hotel, where a sumptuous fowl supper was served by Mrs. Dwyer. After supper a meeting was held for the purpose of organizing the club. W. E. Nodwell was appointed chairman and Fred McMillan secretary of the meeting. The following officers were elected—President, Chas. Dyer; vice-pres., W. E. Nodwell; sec.-treas., E. M. Good; captain, Jas. Milloy; hon.-pres., Dr. Allan Gibson; committee of management, Anson Dyer, H. A. Carmichael, A. D. McFee, Jas. Johnston. It was decided that the fee for membership be 50 cents and the club be named the Garafraxa & Hillsburg Rifle Club. On motion it was decided that the committees of management, and president, vice-president, captain and secretary-treasurer, meet at the call of the president to draft a set of by-laws governing the club. The club purpose holding their next shoot on Saturday, December 19th., when a large number of new members are looked for. Ye editor thinks that every man should join this club as in our opinion rifle shooting is one of the most fascinating of sports and being one that does not require the muscular powers of an athlete is therefore available for all classes.—Hillsburg Beaver.

THE BANNER, DEC. 17th, 1914.

Gospel of Cheerfulness

Every optimist in Canada ought to take a pessimist in charge. The cheerful man should gently lead the disciple of calamity to some quiet corner, and there impart to him as kindly as only the true optimist can, the knowledge that this country will still be distinctly visible on any good map of the world when peace is concluded in Berlin. The pessimist is not a thinker and his imagination flourishes only in grooves of gloom. It is necessary that he be trained to walk upright in the sunshine among people who are learning to adapt themselves to new conditions, before he can be expected to shake off his adopted convictions and take his proper place in the daily toil of the nation. The national machinery of this country did not stop when the first German goose-stepped across the borders of Belgium. Canadians did not take to their cellars nor cease to eat as usual. Neither did the products of the fertile fields of Canada disappear from the bins and the elevators or the livestock perish on the hillsides. Few manufacturing plants of importance had to close because of the inauguration of hostilities and those that did will be started again before long. Admittedly the war has disturbed business, but not beyond the possibility of rapid and efficient adjustment, and those adjustments have in large measure already been achieved. As the first shock is always the hardest to bear, it is reasonably safe to assume that the problems of the future will be as capably handled and that day by day the nation will progress to a position of steadiness and contentment.

There were not lacking pessimistic pedants to preach that dark days were dawning when Canada's volunteers began to gather for service overseas. Yet, because of that mobilization, factories throughout the country were soon running with full staffs, and in many cases, running overtime, to furnish the equipment required. Boots, socks, underclothing, uniforms, rations, rifles, and ammunition had to be acquired. As the Government has announced that a second contingent will follow the first and that men will be constantly in training here while the war lasts, it is likely that these self-same factories will continue to operate, as a result of the war, while the conflict lasts. In addition, quite out of a clear sky, came orders for saddles and harness from the Governments of Great Britain, France, and Russia in large quantities, because the manufacturing plants of these countries could not produce the supplies needed quickly enough. The harness business is always rather dull in the fall and the demands of the armies of the Allies were gratefully received. Canada is being called upon to furnish horses at good prices, and beef at good prices and prices, and beef at good prices, and in bulk considerably greater than is customary in times of peace, so Canada's portion of the war surely has not been an unmitigated evil.

The markets of a few manufacturers were upset by the Old World fighting, but they will find that their products may be diverted to other markets. As a matter of fact producers so placed are not numerous in Canada. The majority of our manufacturing plants are devoted to the production of goods essential to the daily routine of the people and the demand in the home market is sufficient to enable them to maintain operations.—The Financial Post.

The Knocker

The Dufferin Theatre was showing some very instructive pictures last week. Among them was one entitled "Burying the Knocker," which portrayed a number of Board of Trade members with spades about to bury a large sledge, which represented the local knocker. Every town has one or two citizens of this class. In fact some progressive men claim that the knocker is a necessary evil, but our advice is—don't knock. It does you no good and your friends will be inclined to give you the same treatment as the Board of Trade men were giving the big sledge.

It is gratifying to know that business conditions in our town are better than in many towns around us. When a citizen was trying to persuade a Toronto wholesale produce house to send its buyer here weekly, the firm declined saying that the merchants in Orangeville always paid more for produce than they could. Keep up the good work and we will bury the first person we hear knocking our town.

Municipal Notes

A good story is told of two well-known candidates who were canvassing in a nearby township last year. Both happened on the same road a short distance apart. The one who was bringing up the rear called at a certain house, where a bright little girl came to the door. "Little girl, will you please bring me a drink of water?" asked the candidate. The girl cheerfully complied with the request. Then he handed her some candy, saying at the same time, "Did the man just ahead of me give you any candy?" "Yes, Sir." Then he gave her a nickel and asked, "Did he give you any money?" "Yes, Sir, he gave me ten cents." Then picking her up he kissed her and said, "Did he kiss you?" "Yes, Sir," came the frank answer, "and he kissed ma, too."

No Criminal Business at the December Sittings last Week.

The December sittings of the County Court took place in the Court House here on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week, His Honor, Judge Fisher, presiding. There was no criminal business whatever. The civil list consisted of three cases, one of which was allowed to stand over until the June Court. The cases were as follows :—

Marien vs. Young.—An action brought by Roch Marien, a well-known Montreal horse buyer, against Robert Young, of Mono Mills. The suit was instituted to recover the balance of the purchase price of a stallion which Young bought from Marien and afterwards returned alleging that the horse had proved unsatisfactory. The case has been before the Courts nearly a year and particulars have already appeared in The Banner. The jury disagreed at a former trial. The plaintiff sent word that he was unable to attend Court owing to illness. The trial was allowed to stand over until June, Marien being obliged to assume responsibility for the costs of the day. A. A. Hughson for plff.; C. R. McKeown, K.C., for deft.

Vail vs. Brown.—This was an action for improper and excessive distress, instituted by Thomas Vail, a farm laborer residing in Melancthon township, against James Brown, a farmer living in the same township. The plaintiff, it appears, leased a farm in Mulmur from the defendant at a yearly rental of $125. He claimed that Brown made an illegal seizure of his goods and chattels, causing him damage to the amount of $500. The defendant on his part alleged that the goods of the plaintiff were being removed from the premises and that the rent had fallen due and was payable by reason of violation of the terms of the lease. The goods, Brown contended, were sold by public auction and not sacrificed, but nevertheless did not satisfy the claim of the defendant.

The trial was quite lengthy, commencing early Tuesday afternoon and engaging the attention of the Court until late Wednesday afternoon. About a half dozen witnesses were examined on each side. The jury did not bring in its verdict until 11 o'clock Thursday forenoon. The result was a win for the plaintiff, who was allowed $299.85 damages and costs of the action. W. D. Henry, of Lucas, Raney & Henry, Markdale, for plaintiff ; C. R. McKeown, K.C., for defendant.

Meeks vs. Knowles.—An action for $500 damages for breach of contract entered into between the plaintiff, Joseph Meeks, and the defendant, Vincent Edward Knowles, for the lease of the e½ of lot 27, con. 2, Amaranth. The parties are both farmers residing in Amaranth. The defendant alleged that the lease had been terminated by its surrender and the abandonment of the premises prior to the commencement of the action. Knowles also set up a counter claim of $40.

Plaintiff got judgment for $50. The judge reserved his decision regarding costs.

The jury was composed of T. J. Parks (foreman), Alex. Stafford, Robt. Thompson, Wm. Prentice, R. J. Ormsby, Robt. Lennox, Wm. Lindy, Hugh Fawcett, Thos. Frampton, Robt. C. Thompson, Samuel Evison and David Gordon.

MAN WITH MANY COUSINS

"Canada First" McConnell.

Is 58 Years Old To-day—Wrote Famous Article in 1896—Old Boys' Associations.

Congratulations to Mr. Alexander Holmes McConnell, otherwise familiarly known as "Canada First" McConnell, who is 58 years old to-day. Mr. McConnell leaped into fame in 1896 when he spoke in an article which was copied from sea to sea, setting forth his view that this Canada of Ours should come first in the hearts of Canadians. "Made in Canada" was his motto and naturally the slogan of to-day finds an echo in his heart. Mr. McConnell is a Canadian, and Brampton, Ontario, has the honor of being his birthplace, he having first seen the light and breathed the Canadian air in that place on December 12, 1856. There, too, was born his mother before him. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that Canada should hold supreme place in the citadel of Alexander Holmes McConnell's soul. His very presence breathes Canadianism. "What has made Japan a great nation?" he asked to-day. "It is the movement in Japan which 40 years ago had for its object the placing of Japan before all countries, developing her industries and educating her people. The result is to-day that she is fighting for western civilization. The idea which I first enunciated was that John Bull would think more of us if we developed here a nation which would be a credit to him.

"A year ago I took the ground that part of the money for military training could well be spent during the winter months for drilling men out of work. I am glad to see that the idea has been adopted in connection with the unemployed situation."

Mr. McConnell can claim the distinction of having perhaps the largest number of cousins of any man in Canada. He has 54 first cousins and 180 second cousins.

Mr. McConnell was also heart and soul in the organization of the Old Boys' associations of which so many sprang into existence twenty years ago. Loving Canada with a deep intensity of devotion, he sought to keep alive in the heart of the exile the love of the old Canadian home and keep fresh and green the recollection of the happy and innocent days of childhood.—Evening Telegram.

Messrs. Wm. Robt. and John McConnell of this town are numbered among the numerous cousins.

Before Railway Board

An application was made by the Township of Amaranth before the Railway Board at a sitting in Toronto last Friday for an order compelling the C.P.R. to repair the subway under the big railway bridge at Waldemar. The roadway is in a dangerous condition owing to the obstructed view and is also flooded with ice and debris during the spring freshets. After hearing the township's case the Board suggested that the engineers of the municipality and the railway consult with the Commission's engineer as to the best method of remedying the trouble complained of. A proposal that met with favor was the shifting of the west abutment a distance of 15 feet. The C.P.R. engineer undertook to have an estimate of the cost of this work ready in a week, when the matter will be considered by the Board in Ottawa. Mr. A. A. Hughson, township solicitor, Reeve Williams, Deputy-Reeve West and Township Engineer U. W. Christie represented the municipality.

EDISON TO REBUILD.

Loss is Estimated at Nearly $7,000,000.

Fire destroyed virtually the entire main plant of the Edison Company in West Orange, N.J., on Thursday, causing damage estimated at nearly $7,000,000.

An entire square block of modern reinforced concrete buildings, which were supposed to be fireproof, was burned out by the flames. The only building saved in the block was the laboratory building, containing valuable scientific machinery under the immediate superintendence of the inventor, Thomas A. Edison.

In all eleven buildings in the main plant went down with the fire. The buildings destroyed included those occupied by the new Diamond Disc Company, the one occupied by the Kinetophone Company, and the building which housed the Bates numbering machine, together with the primary Edison battery building, the talking machine building, and the administration building.

Early in the day the fire was under control, and it was announced that there was no further danger of the destruction of the laboratory and storage battery plant. Several other buildings, including the warehouse for the storage of finished products of the plant, and the power house, also were far enough removed from the burned section to prevent their destruction.

While the fire was at its height, Thomas A. Edison, whose inventions are perfected and manufactured at the plant, announced that work of rebuilding would be started as soon as the debris cooled sufficiently for the workmen to clear it away. In line with this announcement word was sent out early the same day to all employees of the plant to report for duty as usual, but prepared to assist in reconstruction work. Many of the 7,000 men and women employed by the company will be retained in their regular capacity, it was said, while all will be given employment of some kind.

The loss was estimated at between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000. The plant was covered by $2,000,000 regular insurance, the remainder of the loss being protected by a self-insurance fund maintained by the company. This, however, was said to be small.

There were between 250 and 300 men and women working at the plant on the night when the fire started, and it was impossible to ascertain until a poll of all the employees could be taken, whether reports that several lives were lost are true.

At least one man perished in the fire. This became known with the finding of a charred body in the ruins of the film house, where the explosion occurred which started the blaze. Two other men, both watchmen, were reported missing.

The flames were beaten back from the laboratory and workshop of Mr. Edison, where were stored invaluable records and materials gathered from every corner of the world the result of more than thirty years of the inventor's efforts. At the height of the fire a force of men removed the most valuable records to Mr. Edison's home in Llewellyn Park, not far away.

ELBA.

The Elba Branch of the Dufferin Women's Institute held a largely attended open meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Thompson on Wednesday evening, Dec. 9th. A delightful programme was provided under the supervision of Mr. George Little, who made a capital chairman. The opening number, a verse of "The Maple Leaf" and the chairman's address were followed by a well-rendered trio by Mr. and Mrs. Tansley and Mr. Summerfield. A debate on the subject, "Resolved that we Gain more Knowledge by Travel than by Study" was ably contested by Mrs. J. Fines and Mr. Norman Lindsay for the affirmative and Mrs. Jos. Little and Mr. Thos. Little for the negative. The negative won by a narrow margin. Other numbers were music by Miss Dean, Miss Edith Montford and Miss Dean and Mr. Lindsay, a Paper by Mrs. Smith on Institute Work, a duet by Mr. L. Tansley and Mr. B. Summerfield, a recitation by Miss B. Yool and a solo by Mr. Robt. Lindsay. The programme was brought to a close with the National Anthem. Refreshments were served during the evening and before the gathering dispersed a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Thompson for their kind hospitality.

ALTON.

The members of the Young Ladies' Club met at the home of Mrs. L. H. Lemon one evening recently and presented Miss Alma Patterson with a handsome silver casserole.

The young people of Alton held a ball in Science Hall on Friday evening. A number of guests were present from a distance. We understand that the ball was a splendid success.

We are glad to hear that our village is reaping some benefit from the war. We hear that Mr. John Dods has secured a heavy order for underwear for the soldiers. The order, we understand, will furnish enough work to keep his mill busy for the next four months. It is an ill wind that does not blow somebody good.

We are sorry to have to record the death of another of the early residents of Caledon in the person of Mrs. Wm. Noble, who passed away in Toronto, at the ripe old age of 82 years. Mrs. Noble was first the wife of Mr. Wm. Bacon, who formerly resided on the 1st line, west, a short distance above Melville Cross. Her first husband died about forty years ago. She afterwards married the late William Noble, a former school teacher in Caledon, who predeceased her by about ten years. Of three sons by the first marriage, Miles and William Bacon are living in the Canadian West and the youngest son, Ben, died in the West some years ago. There was also one daughter. The remains were brought to her old home for interment, the burial taking place in Alton Cemetery on Friday last. A large number of friends were present from Toronto and other outside points. Among others we noticed Mr. Ben. Fallis, a C.P.R. engineer, who married a daughter of Mr. William Bacon, Mr. Frank Harrison, formerly a C. P. R. conductor, now living retired, and Mr. Miles Bacon, one of the sons from the West. There were also many friends of the younger generation.

The police trustees of Alton village have appointed Alexander Crawford to the position of village constable. The new peace officer entered upon his duties the other day. Look out boys and do not congregate upon the street corners or use bad language or Alex. will be after you.

Principal Macdonald and the pupils of Alton public school are planning to give a patriotic concert in Science Hall on Friday evening. A good programme is in course of preparation and the entertainment should draw a large audience.

GRANGER.

(Intended for last week.)

Cutting feed has been the order of the day around this locality.

While cutting feed at Mr. Arthur Halbert's last Wednesday Mr. Geo. Jackson had his hand badly cut, and we are sorry to say it is not improving very rapidly.

People are very busy now making preparations for Christmas.

A number of people attended the Aberdeen–Fines wedding and report a good time.

Mrs. Arthur Halbert has returned home from her visit with friends at Riverview and Melancthon.

Mrs. S. J. Halbert from Everett visited Rocktown friends last week.

Miss Olive Wilson spent the week end as the guest of Miss Bessie Turner.

Mr. and Mrs. Elgie entertained a number of young people last Friday night.

Mr. Lawrence and Miss Elma Halbert visited Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Halbert last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fines visited at the latter's home on Sunday.

Mr. Roscoe Ladd is now taking a week's holiday.

Mr. Eddie Small spent Sunday evening at Mr. Arthur Halbert's.

What we would like to know:

What time Groves got home last Thursday night?

If Brink ever loses his buggy now?

How H. Fines likes hauling?

Which Jack or Norman makes most frequent trips to Geo. Lindsay's?

When Perry will make his next trip to the Temperance House?

Why Jas. Holmes makes such frequent trips to Rocktown?

Why Toni wasn't at Jim Dean's on Sunday last?

Where Leonard was on Sunday?

—Fine line of Xmas papeteries just opened at The Banner BookEstore.

CALEDON EAST.

The Women's Missionary Society of Knox Presbyterian Church has secured the services of Miss Glendenning, returned missionary from China, who will speak at the afternoon service next Sunday at 3 o'clock upon the work in the Celestial Empire.

Mrs. J. A. Donaldson returned home last week end after visiting friends at Orangeville and Waldemar for a few days. She was accompanied home by Miss Lily Duke who will remain a guest at the Donaldson home for a while.

Mr. John Hulse, of Dundas, a former citizen of this village, took a run up and spent Monday and Tuesday in town, looking up old acquaintances, who expressed their delight at his visit. He was also on a business as well as a pleasure trip. John is now foreman of the Dominion Transportation and Transmission Electric Co. and is in a fair way to further promotion.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, of Alliston, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hutchinson over the week end.

Rev. J. H. More took ministerial work last Sunday at Alliston. He was accompanied by Mrs. More and family.

Mrs. (Rev.) G. H. Purchase, of Mono Road, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist Church on Sunday night and gave a stirring exposition of the International Sunday School Convention which was held at Ottawa some time ago. The lady speaker held the attention of the audience like a professor, all being highly pleased with her effort.

The caretaker of the Methodist Church, having resigned the position, the temperature of the edifice seems to be somewhat uneven, as some of the choir are said to be frigid and some torrid.

Mr. James Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wilson, of Star City, Sask., and Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McLeod, 4th line, Caledon, were united in wedlock, on Wednesday noon, at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Mr. Wallace, of this place, performed the ceremony. The happy couple left in the evening for Toronto and points far east. Mr. Wilson will spend a couple of months before returning West and will be accompanied by his bride. At the same time and place, Mr. and Mrs. McLeod's daughter, Maggie became the bride of Mr. Watson, of Snelgrove.

The Junior League of the Methodist Church are all enthusiastic over the Christmas ship, "The Junior," which will arrive in port on Wednesday next, December 16th, at 8 p.m., to be loaded with Christmas gifts for poor children in the Queen city. Santa Claus will be on board and the Juniors have prepared a splendid programme to celebrate his coming and will welcome all their friends at an admission of 15c and 10c. Don't forget the date.

Mrs. R. Mercer, of Earlton, New Ontario, formerly of this place, is spending a few weeks among acquaintances in this vicinity.—Enterprise.

GLENCROSS.

The Orange Hall was crowded to the doors during the big concert given on Friday night under the auspices of Purple Valley L.O.L. No. 84. The members of the lodge and their friends were out in full force and taxed the seating capacity of the hall to the utmost limit. An excellent programme was provided, notwithstanding the non-appearance of some of the speakers who were expected to contribute to the edification and entertainment of the big crowd. W. Bro. H. A. Duke, of Orangeville, County Master of Dufferin, made an excellent presiding officer. Rev. G. W. Tebbs, rector of St. Mark's Church, Orangeville, Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas, pastor of Orangeville Baptist Church, Mr. C. R. McKeown, M.P. for Dufferin, and Deputy-Reeve T. J. Parks, of Mono, were the speakers of the evening. The addresses were all appropriate and were well received by the audience. Deputy Reeve Parks, who spoke in a humorous vein, was given quite a hearty reception. A very fine musical programme was provided by the Orangeville Male Quartette, consisting of Messrs. J. E. Jessop, leader, Harding, Huston and Faulkner. Mr. W. G. Martin, of Mono Centre, also contributed some excellent solos. The officers of the Lodge and Bros. J. Hewitt, D. Still, T. H. Moffitt and T. H. White, the members of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the programme, are entitled to hearty congratulations upon the success of the concert. The proceeds, we understand, amounted to $45.00 or upwards.

Mr. and Mrs. John Jones spent Sunday with friends in this village.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pulford spent Sunday evening with Mrs. Jos. Lavery, sr.

There will be anniversary services in the Methodist church on Sunday next, at 10.30 in the morning and at 7 o'clock at night. On the following Monday evening there will be a concert and Xmas Tree, at which a fine programme will be provided.

Mr. Hiram Gibson finished his term of threshing at Mr. William Boyce's on the 9th of this month.

Mr. Pugsley visited Toronto on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hanna and Mrs. Slack, of Toronto, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. McClelland, on Sunday.

Notwithstanding the bad roads quite a number attended our Fowl Supper last Thursday night. We understand that $125 was taken in at the door.

A large number of the farmers are busy teaming rye, which is selling for 95 cents. Wheat is bringing $1.10.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Greenaway are home visiting the latter's people, Mr. and Mrs. J. Taylor.

Mrs. R. Slack is visiting friends here at present.

Messrs. Austin Fagin and Ernest McDonald gave this town a flying visit last evening.

Mr. A. Gibson has his new house all ready for lathing.

Mr. Ed. McClelland, our general merchant, is decorating his store for Christmas.

Mr. Stanley Taylor says that this little village is not to be compared with the city. I wonder what is wrong. It must be the effects of the war.

The ability of the English Church people to provide a pleasant and profitable evening has often been proved in past years and this entertainment will certainly be well worthy of the patronage of all those who appreciate anything of this kind. Presents from the Christmas Tree will be distributed to the children. Entertainment commences at 8 o'clock. Admission, 15c.

The teachers and officers of the Methodist Church Sunday School are making arrangements to hold a Christmas Tree Entertainment on Friday evening, Dec. 18th. Tea will be served in the Orange Hall from 6 to 7.30 o'clock; entertainment in the church to commence at 8 o'clock. The programme will consist of recitations, choruses, vocal and instrumental music, speeches etc., contributed by the pupils of the Sunday School, assisted by Miss McFarlane, Miss Martin, of Caledon East, Miss Laura Henry, Rev. Mr. Pugsley, of Palgrave, and others. Admission, 25c.

The annual entertainment of the Presbyterian Sunday School will be held in the English Church hall on Monday evening, Dec. 21st. See bills for full particulars.

A very successful Concert in aid of the Red Cross Fund was held in Shannon's school house on Friday evening last. A good programme was presented by the pupils of the school under the leadership of their teacher, Miss McGirr. Miss Bessie McQuarrie and Mr. Bert Lindsay also contributed several vocal selections. The proceeds amounted to about $16.

Owing to the inability of the Militia Department to authorize the regiment to be known as the Dufferin Light Infantry the drilling, which has been going on here, has been discontinued until spring.

WEST MONO.

On November 25th the Parish was favored with a visit by Miss Summerhayes, of Toronto, General Secretary of the Diocesan Woman's Auxiliary, who organized a branch of the Woman's Auxiliary with a membership of twelve. The following officers were elected:—

Hon.-Pres., Mrs. Miller; Pres., Mrs. Meek; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Wm. Jackson; Corr.-Sec., Mrs. Jos. Jackson; Treas., Mrs. J. Anderson; Dorcas Secretary, Mrs. John Jenkins.

The first meeting for work was held at the residence of Mrs. Wm. Jackson, with a good attendance and much work done. The next meeting will be held (D.V.) at Mrs. J. Anderson's on the second Tuesday in January.

Divine service next Sunday, Dec. 20th, in St. Matthew's at 11 a.m., St. George's at 3 p.m. and Herald Angel at 7 p.m.

A very happy Christmas to all! May all enjoy it! As Charles Dickens says, "Christmas! there seems to be a real inspiration in the word." Christmas time is a good time, a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time. Yes! because the central thought in the teaching of Him in whose memory we keep Christmas is Love—and, as is fitting, Christmas is the season when men are not ashamed to admit they have some trace of this kindly feeling in their make-up. At Christmas time we lay aside the hustle and bustle and push of life's busy way and let the kindlier feelings within us have free play. We like to give our gifts, because it is a reminder of God's great gift to man—His Incarnate Son. Giving rather than getting is the business of this day and the most liberal of us cannot help getting more than we give. We go forth with our hand full and we come back with our heart full, for the kindly feelings we have engendered in other hearts. It is essentially a children's day because of the Christ Child and so we can say as said Tiny Tim, "God bless us every one."

On this Holy, Happy Day we hope to hold service in acknowledgment of God's good kind gift to us—Herald Angel 10.30 a.m.; St. Luke's 3 p.m., St. Matthew's 7.30 p.m.

With all kindest thoughts.

H. A. MEEK.

BELFAST SET HIGH STANDARD

Figures of Recruiting.

Libel on Ulster Published by London Chronicle, Refuted by Belfast Telegraph.

Belfast Telegraph, Nov. 23.— The London "Daily Chronicle" is rapidly qualifying for first place in the competition for the libelling of Ulster. Time was when its rival, the "Daily News," was facile princeps in its grotesque misrepresentations and arrant falsehoods concerning the North of Ireland, but the "Chronicle" will soon make the leading organ of the Cocoa Press look to its laurels.

Ulster's response to the call for men for Kitchener's army has been so good compared with that of the rest of Ireland that the "Daily Chronicle" felt bound to give its readers an explanation. "Our special correspondent" was, therefore, detailed for the job, and the reason he gave for the large numbers of recruits in Belfast was that the people were out of work, and had no option but to enlist. This was about three weeks ago, and, so far as we are aware, this atrocious statement has never been withdrawn by our fiction-loving contempory.

We propose now to refute the "Chronicle's" statement by figures issued by the Board of Trade in the November issue of the Labor Gazette, which has just been published. This department is presided over by the Right Hon. Walter Runciman, who assuredly is no friend of Ulster. He is the gentleman who publicly apologized to Germany a couple of years ago for Earl Roberts' speech, in which he bade the men of England prepare for the ordeal which was coming; but he has yet to apologize to Earl Roberts—a man who had more nobility in his little finger than the president of the Board of Trade had in the entire of his body.

Now, Mr. Runciman's Department is not likely to cook figures to prove anything in favor of Ulster, so that if the Daily Chronicle's "special correspondent" turns to page 424 of the current issue of the Labor Gazette he will discover some very interesting information about the state of employment in Belfast.

He will find that during October the number of paupers in Belfast per 10,000 of the population was 88, whereas the average for the London districts was 228, for the nineteen principal districts in England and Wales 167, for the Scottish districts 208, for the Irish districts 203, the average for the entire United Kingdom being 191. Belfast has long enjoyed the reputation of being the only city in the United Kingdom to possess a pauperism rate under 100, but the present figure of 88 is the lowest that we can recollect for many years, and it is questionable if it was ever touched before. The September figure was 92, and the figure a year ago was 95. In the current returns, Bradford is the next best to Belfast, with a rate of 111. Yet, forsooth, the readers of the Daily Chronicle are told that recruiting is good in Belfast because the people are out of work.

Beside Belfast's splendid record of 88, we have Dublin with 265, Cork, Waterford, and Limerick with 304, Glasgow with 239, Manchester with 153, Liverpool with 209, Newcastle with 156, Hull with 2 4, Birmingham with 161, Bristol with 182, Cardiff with 200 and Leicester which is inundated with Government work, is as high as 206. Turning to the employment figures in the Gazette under the head of "Shipbuilding Trades," we get this illuminating sentence: "Employment continued very good at Belfast, where a shortage of riveters was again reported," and this, we may add, refers to a month in which there was practically no Admiralty work on hand in the port.

In the linen trade, which is concerned mainly with female workers, there has been a certain amount of slackness, but we learn from the "Gazette" that "at Belfast employment was rather better than a month ago, and after October 12 many weaving firms increased their hours from 40 to 45 per week, while at Portadown employment was reported as fairly good, with most firms on full time."

If the "Daily Chronicle" finds it necessary to give a second edition of "Recruiting in Belfast" to its readers, we would suggest that a good explanation would be that many of the men who have enlisted in this city are women, the linen trade being on short time. There would be as much truth in that version as in the one given three weeks ago, to the effect that recruiting in Belfast was good because trade was bad.

The linen trade, considering that the war has cut off a large market on the Continent, and has naturally interfered with the supply of flax and yarn, is in a remarkably good way, and infinitely better off than the cotton industry in Lancashire, of which we are told in the "Gazette," employment showed a slight improvement compared with September, but was still very bad.

"Compared with a year ago, there was a marked decline in every district and in every department." It is unnecessary to further expose the "Daily Chronicle's" attempt to blacken Belfast for political ends. The Board of Trade figures do that thoroughly, as do the recruiting figures we published on Saturday, showing that up to the previous night 14,701 men had enlisted in Belfast. On the census returns of 1911 there were 205,334 males in the city, more than half of whom are under the age average or are physically debarred from enlisting. It will thus be seen that the proportion of recruits in Belfast has been very good. If the same standard had been maintained all over the United Kingdom, the second million men would now be in camp.

Will You Help The Hospital for Sick Children, the Great Provincial Charity?

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child-life of Ontario.

Last year there were 394 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day; the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all these were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Toronto.

Great Britain's and Germany's Losses on the Seas.

While the Royal Navy has suffered extensively in the operations of the war on the seas, it must be remembered that the hidden mine and the secretive submarine of the enemy and the reckless courage of Admiral Cradock in opposing an enemy that outnumbered and outranged him are responsible for the major part of the losses. A summary of the respective losses shows —

GERMANY.

These estimates are based partly on official reports and partly on unconfirmed reports made on both sides. The losses are measured by the extent by which the navy of each country has been depreciated during the war from all causes, comprising mines, submarine attacks, naval battles, accidents, wrecks and internment.

ALCOHOL CUTS OF YEARS.

Insurance Statistics Prove.

An Average Reduction in Life of Four Years—What Prohibition Will Do for Russia.

That the use of alcoholic beverages shortens life in this country was reported as a statistical fact to the eighth annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents in New York. Figures on the subject were presented by Arthur Hunter, actuary, in connection with the findings of a mortality investigation into the lives of two million life insurance policyholders, covering a period of twenty-five years. Forty-three leading life insurance companies in the United States and Canada contributed their detailed records. The chief groups investigated included persons engaged in ninety-seven hazardous occupations, those having a family history of consumption, a defect in their personal history, those whose physical condition was not normal, and those whose habits with regard to alcoholic beverages were not satisfactory in the past or who used liquor steadily at the time of application for insurance.

FIFTY PER CENT. EXTRA.

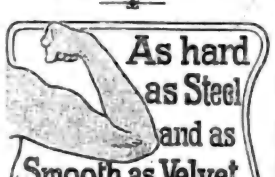
"Among the men who had admitted that they had taken alcohol occasionally to excess in the past," said Mr. Hunter, "but whose habits were considered satisfactory when they were insured, there were 289 deaths, while there would have been only 190 had this group been made up of insured lives in general. The extra mortality was, therefore over 50 per cent., which was equivalent to a reduction in the average life of these men of over four years. It means that in each year a number of men will die at an earlier age than they should. For example, at age 35, the expectation of life is 32 years; in the first year after that age, instead of say, nine persons dying, there would be probably 12 deaths; that is, three men would each lose 32 years of life; in the next year probably four men would each lose 31 years of life, etc.

MODERATE DRINKERS.

"With regard to men who had used beverages daily but not to excess, the experience of the companies was divided into two groups: (a) men who took two glasses of beer or a glass of whiskey or their equivalent, a day; (b) men who took more than the foregoing amount, but were not considered by the companies to drink in excess. The mortality in the second group was found to be fully 50 per cent. greater than in the first—an excellent argument for moderation in the use of alcoholic beverages.

"The Committee of the Medico-Actuarial Mortality Investigation did not make a report on the mortality among total abstainers, but sufficient statistics have been published to justify the statement that persons who have always been total abstainers have a mortality during the working years of life of about one half of that among those who use alcohol to the extent of at least two glasses of whiskey per day.

RUSSIA WILL RECUPERATE.



"In view of this, the effect of prohibition of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages in Russia must be very great. If the Government of Russia carry out their present intention to abolish permanently all forms of alcoholic beverages, the saving in human life will be enormous. It is not too much to say that the loss of 500,000 men as the result of the present warfare could be made good in less than ten years through complete abstinence from alcoholic beverages by all the inhabitants of Russia.

SALOON KEEPERS AFFECTED.

"Among saloon proprietors, whether they attended the bar or not, there was an extra mortality of 70 per cent., and the causes of death indicated that a free use of alcoholic beverages had caused many of the deaths. The hotel proprietors who attended the bar either occasionally or regularly had as high a mortality as the saloon-keepers: that is, the life time was reduced about six years on the average on account of their occupation. The mortality among those connected with breweries was about one-third above the normal. The large class of proprietors of wholesale liquor houses had an extra mortality of about one-fifth. In the fourteen sub-divisions of the trades connected with the manufacture or sale of alcohol there was only one class which had a normal mortality and that was the distillery proprietors."

OTHER STATISTICS.

Among locomotive engineers, as a hazardous class, the mortality was 60 per cent. in excess of that experienced among the insured as a whole, which is equivalent to five years reduction in the average life time. Among persons who were very light in weight, but who had not a family record of tuberculosis, the death rate from that disease was high. Marked overweight, too, has a material effect in decreasing length of life, especially at the middle and older ages. An extra mortality of 80 per cent. was found among sufferers from syphilis.

Relief at Once Cure Certain

Conclusive Evidence That Dr. Chase's Ointment Cures Itching Piles.

Mr. John G. McDonald, Pictou, N.S., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching piles, and found that the first application gave relief. After using a few boxes of the ointment I was completely cured, and can recommend it highly to all sufferers from this disease. You have my permission to use this letter for the benefit of others."

Mr. James M. Douglass, Superior Junction, Ont., writes:—"For about six years I suffered from piles, and often could not work for two or three days at a time, so great was the suffering from pain and itching. Doctors treated me in vain, and I tried many treatments before I came across Dr. Chase's Ointment. Two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me, and for several months I have had no return of this annoying ailment."

A description of what a United States visitor saw at close range in the vast British naval plant at Devonport, England, is thus set out in the New York World:

14 SHIPS IN SIX MONTHS.

What is going forward at express speed behind the walls of Britain's navy yards, if it were known to the German authorities, would dispel decisively any Teutonic belief that Admiral Jellicoe's fleet intends to restrict its activities to blockading the North Sea and keeping the Atlantic and other oceans clear of the enemies' vessels.

Within six months the lists of the royal navy will be aygumented by six super-dreadnoughts and eight battle cruisers from its yards at Devonport and Portsmouth alone. All of these ships will be equipped defensively and offensively more powerfully than any men-of-war of their respective classes now afloat. At least one of the super-dreadnoughts, for example, has an arrangement of turrets which is quite new and which permits big calibre guns to be fired broadside or straight ahead with equal facility.

No less than 9,000 men are employed night and day at the Devonport station, and there are always some 5,000 sailors and marines on guard there against attack from without or within—which latter refers to the very real peril of espionage.

It is not generally known that the tremendous expanse recently added to the Naval Barracks—as the Devonport point is known officially—includes six dry docks capable of holding the biggest battleship yet designed by the Admiralty's draughtsmen. It's a close fit, to be sure, when a giant of the Queen Elizabeth or Iron Duke class squeezes into one of these docks. Quite recently, the American visitor was informed, such a ship came back from the North Sea to have a few repairs made. After she was all in the dry dock, there was just six inches to spare at either end!

SIEGE HOWITZERS.

At present a very large number of men are engaged constantly at Devonport in turning 12, 13 and even 15 inch battleship guns into siege howitzers.

This operation is performed by detaching the gun from its turret, cutting down its muzzle and mounting it on an artillery carriage of special design and great strength. Owing to the Royal Navy's superfluity of big naval weapons the number of heavy howitzers now with the British expeditionary force—as the Germans have already learned to their cost—is almost equal to that of the enemy's complement.

WARSPITE A WONDER.

The superdreadnought Warspite, most important of the men-of-war building in the Devonport yard, is thus described

"Suddenly we—my officer friend and myself—stood alongside a dilapidated looking vessel, which I took to be an obsolete cruiser. My companion briefly introduced this object as His Majesty's super-dreadnought Warspite, of the Queen Elizabeth class, none of which are in commission as yet. The Warspite will be ready for action, so I learned, within six months. At present she is lying in one of the basins in the yard, submitting to the attentions of many hundreds of workmen, who clamber about her vast hulk like veritable ants. On the quay alongside of her are reposing the massive 15.5 guns, ten of which she will carry.

"Even my layman's eye could detect and appreciate the wonderful arrangement of her turrets, which, I am told, is absolutely new. They are laid each somewhat like boxes in a theatre, each jutting outward from the one ahead in such a way that she can fire all ten of her fifteen-point-fives from the bow as well as broadside on.

TORPEDO AND MINE PROOF.

"The wonderful slope—flange is the technical word—of her bow, narrow at the water line and widening in such a way as to offer the least possible resistence to the seas, is indicative of her great speed—twenty-six knots an hour—greater than that of the Mauretania! She displaces 28,000 tons of water. Most important of all, perhaps, is the fact that she has a triple coating of armour below the waterline.

"That and other features which it would be improper to reveal make her practically immune from any existing torpedo or mine. That is, she may be badly damaged by an explosion below the waterline, but she cannot be sunk by one. Her fuel is oil exclusively, no coal being used aboard her except for culinary purposes.

"She and her sisters are real beauties. Of course the reason she look so unassuming to my unpractised eye was because she had not been painted and was partly concealed beneath all sorts of scaffolding. Her cost will be close upon $15,000,000 before she leaves the hands of the engineers. And to think that such a vessel can be completed in eighteen months!"

DAYLIGHT SAVING

Scheme Has Proved Beneficial in Regina

Regina, Sask., Dec. 5th, 1914.—That the daylight savings scheme has been beneficial to the ratepayers of Regina, financially, is shown by the statistics prepared by the city light superintendent. From this statement it is evident that the ratepayers have not used from $20,000 to $30,000 worth of light that would have been used if the hours had remained at the same time as previously. These facts are shown in the annual report of the superintendent, who has made a careful study of the daylight savings scheme in Regina. This scheme has had many points to commend it, the saving in light being only one of the most important features. One of the decided advantages has been that all sporting competitions, such as baseball, football, etc. can be played in the evening, as it remained light until as late as 10 o'clock. Not only that, but the citizens of Regina are able to enjoy their evenings, in perfect daylight, on lake Wascana if they so desire. The scheme has been a decided success and Alderman Rounding, who fathered it as far as Regina is concerned, has announced his intention of endeavoring to have the daylight savings scheme start earlier next year than was the case this year.

AN "ATROCITY" STORY

Canadian Nurse Did Not Have Hands Cut Off

Harriston, Dec. 14.—Early on October a despatch from London appeared in the columns of The Globe stating that a Canadian nurse, Miss Beatrice Page, of Harriston, Ont., had joined the staff of a hospital in France. About a month ago a report was in circulation here that Miss Page was returning home, having had both her hands cut off by German soldiers. Numbers of inquiries are still being received by Postmaster McCready and others. Miss Page maintains a regular correspondence with her relatives, who live in Minto township, and they report that she is still on duty at the front, and that there is absolutely no truth in the report.

WILLIAM McKENZIE

A Former Resident of Mono Passes Away at North Bay

William McKenzie, Collector of Customs, and an old resident of the town, died at his home in North Bay a few days after a lingering illness. Deceased, who was a brother of the late Roderick McKenzie, of Granger, farmed and taught school in Mono township for a number of years. He was born in Vaughan township County of York, 64 years ago, and received his education at Guelph and Owen Sound. In 1900 he was appointed Sub-Collector of Customs at North Bay. Eight years later North Bay was made a Port and Mr. McKenzie became Collector of Outports at Sturgeon Falls, Sudbury and Cobalt. He had been Mayor of North Bay for four years and a councillor for five years. He was an elder in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and a staunch Liberal. All the business places in North Bay were closed while the funeral was in progress.

Death of Duncan Baxter

The death occurred at Norwich, N. Y., on November 24th, of Mr. Duncan Baxter, aged 61 years. The late Mr. Baxter was the youngest of eight children of the late John Baxter, of Caledon, and was married to Miss Lizzie McBride, of Albion township, by whom there are two daughters now living in the State of New York. Death came suddenly as the result of heart failure. The funeral was held on Saturday, the 5th inst., from the residence of Mr. Archibald Ferguson, 5 sideroad, to the family burying ground, on the 4th line, Caledon, and was largely attended by the deceased's many friends and acquaintances, as also by the widow and eldest daughter who accompanied the remains from Norwich. The late Mr. Baxter is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Arch. Ferguson and Miss Mary Baxter, of Snellgrove.

Mrs. Russell Anderson

We regret to learn of the death in Winnipeg on Dec. 8th of Laura Cuthbert, beloved wife of Mr. Russell Anderson, son of Mr. Benj. Anderson, of Winnipeg, formerly of Camilla. Mrs. Anderson was in her 20th year and her death occurred after a wedded life of only three and a half months. Profound sympathy is felt for the young husband, who formerly resided in Orangeville and is well-known here. Many of our readers will remember him as a student at the Orangeville Business College and later as a clerk in Marshall Green & Co's store, where he spent two years. While in Orangeville Mr. Anderson made his home with his grandmother, the late Mrs. Arch. Anderson, 1st street.

Mrs. Arch. Anderson

An old and widely known resident of Mono township has passed to her long home in the person of Mrs. Anderson, widow of the late Arch. Anderson. Her death took place at her home on First St., on Saturday after an illness of not more than two or three weeks duration. The end came suddenly, but peacefully, as befitted the close of a busy and useful life. The late Mrs. Anderson, whose maiden name was Anne Jane Burns, was born at Enniskillen, Fermanagh County, Ireland, on March 19th, 1831, and was therefore in her 84th year. She came to Canada when 19 years of age, was married in Toronto on March 23rd, 1854, and took up her residence on the 6th line, Mono, shortly afterwards. In 1878 Mr. and Mrs. Anderson moved from the 6th line to a fine property on the Centre Road near Camilla and 13 years ago gave up farming and came to Orangeville to spend the evening of life. Mr. Anderson died here about eight years ago. A family of six sons and three daughters survive, namely, Benj. and Stewart H., in Winnipeg ; James I., at Melita, Man.; Sandy in Oregon ; Dr. George, a medical practitioner in Elyria, Ohio ; Hilliard T., ex-reeve of Mono, on the old homestead near Camilla ; Mrs. R. G. Canning, of Violet Hill ; Mrs. J. C. Howard, of Camilla, and Miss Ida, at home. The late Mrs. Anderson had been a consistent member of the Methodist Church since childhood. She was the possessor of fine qualities of head and heart, generous in her sympathies and was highly thought of as a neighbor and friend. A large number of relatives and friends were here for the funeral, which was held from her late home to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. Rev. G. W. Robinson conducted services at the house and grave. The pall-bearers were four of her sons, Benj., James I., Stewart H., and Hilliard, and two sons-in-law, Messrs. R. G. Canning and J. C. Howard. The members of the family were all present except two sons, Sandy, who was unable to come owing to the great distance, and Dr. George, who visited his mother during her illness and had only gone home a few days before her death. Among the friends present from a distance were Messrs. Stewart, Nelson and James Burns, Mr. and Mrs. S. Thompson, Miss Dolly and Miss Mary Burns, all of Toronto, and Dr. Oscar Canning, a grandson, also of Toronto.

CHARGE DISMISSED

Judge McGibbon, of Brampton, Declares That C. W. Mack Was Blameless

The charge preferred against C. W. Mack of administering noxious drugs to a young girl in the township of Caledon was tried before Judge McGibbon at Brampton last week and dismissed. Mr. Mack, who is a well known Toronto business man, has a very pretty summer home called "Luckenuf" at Bellfountain. From the evidence given at the trial it appears that a young man living near Bellfountain attempted to assault a girl living in that neighborhood but did not succeed in accomplishing his purpose. As a result of her trying experience the girl's health was affected and her mother consulted Mr. Mack, who saw Dr. Goldie, of Toronto, who prescribed for the girl in the ordinary way. Dr. Goldie, a reliable practitioner, was called as a witness and testified that the prescription produced by the accused was the one he had given him when the girl's symptoms had been related to him and stated that it was for nervous shock and for no illegal purpose whatever. No suggestion had been made to the doctor by Mr. Mack that the medicine was for improper purposes and according to Dr. Fotheringham, of Toronto, who was also a witness, the prescription was one which any doctor would give under the circumstances and did not contain any drugs of a harmful or noxious character or which would be used for the purpose charged. After hearing the evidence Judge McGibbon decided that Mack was innocent of wrong-doing and acquitted him of the charge. The accused was defended by Mr. J. M. Godfrey, of Toronto. Hartley Dewart, K.C., of Toronto, was associated with Crown Attorney W. H. McFadden in conducting the prosecution.

Have You Heard the Bonstelles?

If you have not you will have a rare treat to look forward to. Despite the fact that there are three Dramatic Clubs in Caledon at present, the Bonstelle players, under the competent leadership of Mr. Edward Johnston, seem to have the confidence and respect of the entire surrounding districts.

On Dec. 29th of this month the Bonstelle Dramatic Club will present to the people of Erin and vicinity, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," dramatized in five acts. This is one of the oldest and most popular plays known to the theatrical world and the company are equally efficient, and will no doubt render a true to life and impressive reproduction. The Bonstelles are numerically strong, having a company of twenty-one, all of whom are clever dramatists.

Mr. Johnston is to be highly congratulated on securing such a splendid company and will likely have a number of engagements before spring. The Bonstelles are booked to play in Caledon on New Year's Eve and in Bellfountain on January 5th or around that date.

The ladies of Erin are also to be congratulated upon having engaged such an efficient Dramatic Club, and we hope they will have a huge success.

WILL CONSULT RATEPAYERS

Regina Adopts Novel Method of Ascertaining Assessment Values

Regina, Sask., Dec. 12, 1914.—Much interest is being manifested on the part of Canadian cities in the method by which the city of Regina will arrive at its assessment for next year. Assessment is supposed to be based on the realizable value of property, but as sales of real estate just at the present time are few and far between, it would be practically impossible to strike an equitable assessment which could not be upset by legal measures under the present system of valuation. To overcome this the city commissioners of Regina suggested a scheme to the council by which the assessment would be based entirely on the opinion of the ratepayers as to values. Council approved of this method and the commissioners will therefore take steps to secure valuations from the ratepayers, to assist in striking next year's assessment. By this means it is thought that an equitable and reasonable assessment will be arrived at without great difficulty to meet the present conditions.

Drink and Crime

To the Editor :—

I commend to your readers the following from The Pioneer.

"A Grand Jury sitting in Chicago a short time ago made a deliverance upon the liquor question which ought to have the careful consideration of everyone who seeks the welfare of his fellows. It said :

"'We find that a large percentage of the crime brought to our attention is caused directly by drinking malt or, alcoholic liquors, and we call the attention of the public to the need of more stringent regulation of this traffic. We find that a large percentage of those charged with crime are from seventeen to twenty-five years old and that in nearly every case they drank malt or alcoholic liquors before or during the commission of the crimes for which they were indicted.'

"We seriously question the wisdom of the state entering into a partnership with these interests for the sake of an apparent profit (through the license system) but which is really a dreadful economic loss, and through this partnership feeding drink to these boys with one hand while with the other hand it metes out punishment for wrongs in which the state is really a participant."

ORANGEVILLE — THE HOUSE OF QUALITY

Carney-Barbour

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. Robert Barbour, con. 10, Erin, on Wednesday, December 2nd, when their oldest daughter, Mary Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. John Carney, of East Garafraxa, by Rev. R. S. Scott, of Hillsburg. Promptly at 4 o'clock the bridal couple entered the parlor to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Isabel Carney, sister of the groom, and took their places under a beautiful evergreen arch trimmed with white ribbon and from the centre of which hung a large wedding bell. The bride was given away by her father and was gowned in white duchesse satin and allover shadow lace trimmed with large pearls and rhinestone ornaments. She wore the customary bridal veil and orange blossoms and carried a wrist bouquet of white carnations and maidenhair fern and was unattended. After the ceremony and the usual congratulations from the assembled guests all repaired to the dining room where a dainty wedding repast was served. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of black Persian Lamb furs. Mr. and Mrs. Carney took the evening train for Hillsburg on a honeymoon trip to Durham, Teeswater and other points, the bride travelling in a suit of burnt orange with white plush hat and white plume. The bride was the recipient of many useful and pretty gifts. Both bride and groom are popular in the community and a host of good wishes are theirs. On their return they will reside on the 16th line, Garafraxa.—Star & Vidette.

Aberdeen-Fines

At the residence of Mr. Richard Fines, Granger, a very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon, December 2nd, at 5 o'clock, when Otta May, the only daughter of Mr. and the late Mrs. Richard Fines, was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Mr. John Aberdeen, of Violet Hill, in the presence of seventy-five guests. The wedding ceremony was performed under a large and artistically decorated arch of evergreens and wedding bells, by Rev. Dr. Caldwell, M.A., B.D., of Shelburne. After the many congratulations to the young couple on their new and happy step in life, the guests repaired to the large dining hall, which was decorated with red and white, where a rich dinner was provided. A toast was given, followed by many felicitous replies, testifying to the welfare and worth of the newly-wedded. Friends and relatives from as far as Erin, Orangeville and Corbetton assembled with those in the immediate vicinity to honor the family and the young couple in the happy marriage. The bride was given away by the father, at the conclusion of the playing of the wedding march by Miss Margaret McKenzie. The groomsman was Mr. Wm. Aberdeen, brother of the groom, while Miss Edna Fines, of Erin, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. The bride looked charming and was beautifully dressed in white paillette silk, with silk lace flouncing trimmed with pearls, and wore the customary veil caught up with bridal roses and maidenhair fern, and carried a large bouquet composed also of roses and maidenhair fern with carnations. The groom's present to the bride was a mink throw, and to the bridesmaid a brooch set with amethysts, also to the pianiste an ebony set, and to the groomsman a watch fob. The display of presents to the bride was exceedingly attractive and costly, and such as showed clearly the high estimation that the bride holds in the community. From girlhood she has been an earnest church worker and for years an efficient church organist. Mr. and Mrs. Aberdeen will spend some time in a tour and visiting friends in Toronto, after which they will reside in their new home at Violet Hill.—Economist.

Galbraith-Littlejohn

A very quiet wedding took place in St. Mary's Rectory in Toronto on Wednesday evening, Dec. 9th, when Miss Coral Beatrice Littlejohn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Littlejohn, of Orangeville, became the bride of Mr. Alfred Blair Galbraith, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Galbraith, of Shelburne. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph Fennell. The newly wedded couple will make their home in Toronto. The Banner joins their many local friends in tendering its hearty congratulations.

A Pretty Double Wedding

A very pretty double wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McLeod, of Caledon, at high noon on Wednesday, Dec. 9th, when their daughter, Margaret, was united in marriage to Mr. Harvey Watson, of Snelgrove, Ont., and their daughter, Elizabeth, to Mr. James Wilson, of Star City, Sask. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Wallace, pastor of Knox Church, Caledon East, assisted by the Rev. J. Burkholder, pastor of Knox Church, Caledon. Miss Jennie Watson, of Snelgrove, played the wedding march, and the brides were given away by their father. There were about forty guests present.

ST. ANDREW'S ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Dr. Winchester, of Toronto, Will Speak at Both Services Next Sunday.

Anniversary services will be held in St. Andrew's Church, West Broadway, on Sunday next, Dec. 20th. Rev. A. B. Winchester, Pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, will occupy the pulpit morning and evening, speaking in the morning on the subject, "The Church of God" and in the evening on "The Signs of the Times." The evening topic, as the title indicates, will have reference to the present war and should possess a special interest on that account. Rev. Dr. Winchester is a gifted speaker with a logical method of presentation that carries conviction. He will be well worth hearing and his visit should bring together large congregations. Services will begin at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Special music will be provided by the choir under the leadership of Mr. J. E. Jessop.

Fire on Broadway

The Fire Brigade was called out about one o'clock yesterday morning to quench a fire in Miss McLachlan's grocery store near the east end of Broadway. Fortunately the blaze, which was first scented by Peter Griggs, was discovered before it had made very much headway. Considerable damage was done by smoke and water. William Fiddes, who occupies the adjoining premises, had some sewing machines damaged and the grocery stock of J. R. Harcus also suffered slight damage. We understand that the fire originated from a stove in the store.

St. Mark's Church Notes

The Sale of Work held in St. Mark's Church basement last Thursday under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary branches of the Church was a great success. Practically everything was sold, and a larger amount than in previous years was raised by the ladies.

The services on Sunday last were largely attended to hear Rev. C. S. Shortt, of Japan. Mr. Shortt preached two excellent sermons on different phases of missionary work in Japan. On Monday evening, in spite of the stormy weather a large congregation attended to hear Mr. Shortt give an illustrated lecture. The views shown were superb. They were colored by a Japanese artist in Tokio, and were the finest ever exhibited in the church.

The last of the special addresses on "The Second Coming" will be given on Thursday next. The attendance at these lectures has increased each evening.

The Sunday School entertainment will be held on Friday next. There will be a sleigh ride for the children preceding the supper (weather permitting) and Santa Claus will accompany them. An entertainment will be given after the supper, and a Christmas Tree will be stripped and then re-decorated with gifts for children less favorably off.

CANADIAN-BORN ADMIRALS

Men Who Have Risen High in the British Navy.

By W. A. Craick in MacLean's Magazine.

That there have been at least twelve Canadian-born admirals in the British navy within the last one hundred years, is a piece of information that will probably come as a surprise to many readers. Despite the immense amount of discussion of late regarding Canada's naval policy and the forced attention which has been directed to naval affairs by the stupendous events of the past few months, there is much ignorance abroad as to the part that natives of this country have already played in the defence of the Empire by sea. One may happen to be familiar with the names of two or three Canadians who have risen to flag rank in the Royal navy, but to be aware that the number extends to twelve, and possibly more, is not a matter of very general knowledge.

Two circumstances have made it difficult to keep track of the Canadian-born officers in the navy. In the case of the older ones, men who were born in the latter part of the eighteenth century, they were practically all the sons of Englishmen who had only just settled in the country. To a certain extent therefore they were not thorough-going natives of the soil and their birth in Canada might even be considered as more or less of an accident. At the same time there can be no valid reason for saying that they were not Canadians, since they were not only born here but spent their early years in this country.

Again, the necessity for entering the naval service at a very tender age, separated the lads from home ties when they were quite young. They did not grow to manhood in Canada and the fact of their Canadian birth was soon lost track of by their contemporaries. There was nothing to emphasize or perpetuate their connection with the colony and none of them ever returned to settle here, after completing active service, with the possible exception of Admiral W. F. Owen. For both these reasons, no Canadian tradition ever grew up around them and they have passed away, remembered only for their gallant deeds as British officers.

The careers of the adventurous twelve extend from the period of the Napoleonic Wars right down to the present day and include many thrilling experiences in all parts of the world. The twelve have among them witnessed a complete revolution in the methods of naval warfare. They have seen the wooden sailing ship superseded by the steam-driven armor-clad man-of-war, guns developed from small dimensions to enormous proportions and the whole character of the service changed.

DEAN OF NATIVE ADMIRALS

The oldest of the twelve was evidently Admiral Sir Edward Campbell Rich Owen. In the year 1767 a grant of the Island of Campobello, then a part of the province of Nova Scotia, but now incorporated in the province of New Brunswick, was made to Lieut. William Owen of the Royal navy, who agreed to return to place settlers on the island. This he did three years later, arriving himself with quite a following and established himself there. The year following a son was born to him who became eventually the first of the Canadian admirals.

Edward Campbell Rich Owen seemed destined for a naval career almost from the cradle, for at the tender age of four years he was borne on the books of the "Enterprise" in the Mediterranean and after that for a number of years on the books of various ships in the West Indies. However, his actual entry into the service was not made until he was fifteen when he was placed on board the "Culloden" on the Home Station.

OUTWITTING "BONEY."

Admiral Owen's chief title to fame lay in the splendid work he did as a captain in assisting to foil the plans of Napoleon to transfer troops across the British Channel. He was a most efficient naval scout, daring and resourceful, and to him the British admirals of the time owed that accurate knowledge of the French coast that enabled them to plan expeditions against inshore squadrons of the French fleet and the land batteries. On one occasion Napoleon was himself an eye-witness of a successful attack made by Captain Owen, in command of a squadron of British ships, on a division of his great flotilla and was greatly chagrined at the outcome.

Great honors were in store for the Campobello boy and he rose to the highest rank in the navy, with a knighthood to his credit besides. He saw much active service and was in supreme command of the Mediterranean Station from 1841-45. His death occurred in 1849.

Admiral Owen had a younger brother, born in 1774, who also rose to be an admiral. His talents seem to have been of a different character. While the elder Owen was a fighter and strategist, the younger brother was more of a scientist. This does not mean that he did not see active service. As a matter of fact he passed through some very thrilling experiences and was for two years a prisoner of the French. But his title to fame rests on the exploratory and survey work he did in little known parts of the world. Much of this is recorded in a voluminous book of which he was the author, entitled, "Narrative of Voyages to Explore the Shores of Africa, Arabia and Madagascar in H. M. Ships Leven and Barracouta." He was appointed vice-admiral in 1854, retiring the following year on a pension, and he died in St. John, N.B., in 1857.

It is interesting to know that the connection of the Owen family with the Island of Campobello was to be a lasting one. For more than a century the title to the island continued with them and there are still Owens there. It is said that the grant to Lieut. Owen, the father of the two admirals, was the only one in New Brunswick that fulfilled its original intention of establishing a system of landlordism such as exists in the Old Country.

THE TWO WESTPHALS.

Strange to say the third and fourth of the Canadian admirals in point of age were also brothers, the two Westphals, of Preston, Nova Scotia. Their father, George Westphal, was a retired German officer who had come to settle under the British flag in the new world. He was of Hanoverian descent, his ancestors being the Counts von Westphal, persons of some note in their own country. It is also said that his uncle had been tutor to the Duke of Kent, the father of Queen Victoria, which may perhaps account for the fact that his sons entered the Royal navy under that Prince's auspices.

The eldest son, Philip, was born in the year 1872. His early boyhood was spent among the green woods and by the broad lakes of Preston and then at twelve years of age he entered the navy as a first-class volunteer. From then until 1815 he passed through a succession of adventures in all parts of the world that were perhaps only to be equalled by the even more exciting experiences of his younger brother. However, despite signal services, Philip Westphal seems never to have obtained the favor of the Admiralty and it was long before his claim to recognition was rewarded. He did not become a captain until 1820 and did not gain flag rank until 1856. Retiring in 1856 he continued to reside in the Isle of Wight until his death in 1880, at the advanced age of ninety-eight years.

George Augustus Westphal, three years the junior of Philip, succeeded in obtaining many honors during his long and distinguished career. Like his brother, he enteres the navy under the auspices of the Duke of Kent. For a time he served on the North American station and was then transferred to the "Victory," the flagship of Lord Nelson. On her he fought in the Battle of Trafalgar and was severely wounded, being placed beside his wounded chief in the cockpit and witnessing his death. After this he experienced many years of active service, taking part in over a hundred engagements, being severely wounded three times and being eight times gazetted for signal service against the enemy.

The younger Westphal attained the rank of admiral in 1819, being then only thirty-four years of age and was knighted a few years after. At his death in his ninetieth year he was the last surviving officer who had been with Nelson at Trafalgar.

CAREER OF ADMIRAL WALLIS.

The fifth, and perhaps the most famous of the Canadian admirals, was Sir Provo William Parry Wallis, who rose to be an admiral of the fleet, the highest rank in the navy. Sir Provo was a native of Halifax, Nova Scotia, his father being chief clerk of the naval commissioner at the depot at that port. The naval tradition evidently ran in the family for Sir Provo's grandfather was also connected with the navy. He was a ship's carpenter and saw active service in the Seven Years' War. Later he became carpenter on the "Eagle," the flagship of Lord Howe in North American waters and was appointed in 1778 master-shipwright of the naval yard at New York. After the peace he was transferred to Halifax, where his family evidently settled.

The future admiral was born in 1791. During his school days he was borne on the books of several different ships on the Halifax station. His actual entry into the navy was made in 1803 when he became a midshipman aboard the "Cleopatra." He had not been long at sea when this ship was taken by a French frigate but it was soon after recaptured and the incident terminated satisfactorily.

Between 1804 and 1812 Wallis rose to be a second lieutenant, seeing service on a number of men-of-war. The latter year found him appointed under Captain Broke to the famous "Shannon" and it was he who brought the ship with its prize, the "Chesapeake," into Halifax harbor after the memorable naval duel on June 1st, 1813. For the part he played in this gallant action he was promoted to be a commander and on returning to England he was given his first ship, the "Snipe."

The rest of Admiral Wallis' naval career, while lacking the picturesque elements of his earlier days, was yet filled with activity. He saw service in all parts of the world, commanded numerous men-of-war and gradually rose from rank to rank until in 1877 he had become admiral of the fleet. On reaching the rank of vice-admiral in 1857, he was retired from active service, though it is interesting to know that by a clause in the Childers' retirement scheme of 1870, his name was continued on the active list along with all the old officers, who had commanded a ship during the French War. The few days that he had been in command of the "Shannon" brought him within this rule.

A FAMOUS NAVIGATOR.

The last of what may be termed the eighteenth century group of Canadian admirals was Sir Edward Belcher. Sir Edward was the second son of the Hon. Andrew Belcher, member of the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia, and was born at Halifax in 1799. He is to be remembered principally for his contributions to the science of navigation. Entering the navy at the age of thirteen, he took part in the defence of Gaeta and participated in the Battle of Algiers. For some time after he followed the usual course of changes from station to station, meanwhile attracting the attention of the authorities by his scientific attainments. When the expedition under Captain Beechy was fitted out to seek a north-west passage from the Bering Sea, Lieut. Belcher was chosen to accompany him. In this voyage of three years and a half, extending over seventy-three thousand miles, a large number of islands and stragetic stations were taken possession of. For his work on this expedition Lieut. Belcher was promoted to be a commander.

He later saw active service in the China War and for his work there was knighted. A few years later saw him advanced to the rank of vice-admiral. He was the author of several books, notably, "A Narrative of a Voyage Around the World," while his "Treatise on Nautical Surveying" was for long recognized as one of the ablest works on that subject.

ADMIRALS OF PRESENT DAY.

After a gap of nearly fifty years, during which apparently there were no future admirals born in Canada, the next officer in the list appears. This was Admiral Archibald Douglas, whose death occurred last year. He was born at Quebec in 1842, his father being a physician in the ancient capital. Entering the navy in 1856 on the nomination of the Governor-General, he was for some time stationed on the West Coast of Africa where he helped in the suppression of the slave trade. He was then moved to the North American station and during the Fenian Raid was in command of a gunboat on the Great Lakes. His aptitude was towards expert marksmanship in gunnery practice and on his return to England he was made senior staff officer of the "Cambridge," the gunnery schoolship at Devenport.

For two years after this he was director of the Imperial Japanese Naval College at Yedo, having been selected by the Admiralty as commander of the Naval Mission to instruct the Japanese navy. Later it was in the natural order of things that he should be appointed vice-president of the Ordnance Committee at the Admiralty and then second sea lord under Mr. Goschen in Lord Salisbury's third administration.

Sir Archibald obtained flag rank in 1895 and rose to be a full admiral ten years later, retiring in 1907. He was one of the modern navy's big men and to him must be attributed much of the efficiency which the navy enjoys in gunnery to-day. Many honors were conferred upon him during his later years.

A brother officer, whose death was also recorded recently, was Admiral Sir Charles Drury, who was born at Rothesay, N.B., in 1846. He entered the Royal navy when thirteen and saw fifty-two years continuous service. As an admiral he was successively commander-in-chief in the East Indies, the Mediterranean and at the Nore. Like Admiral Douglas he was for a time Second Lord of the Admiralty and like him he was honored on many occasions with titles and decorations.

THREE ADMIRALS LIVING

Rear-Admiral Daniel McNab Riddel, the next Canadian-born admiral on the list, is the senior of the three living admirals from the Dominion. He was born in Hamilton, Ont., in 1848, entering the navy in 1851. He has seen service on ever- station and was in action on board the "Himalaya" during the Zulu War. During the Venezuelan trouble he rendered important services, being then commander of the "Renown" on the North American station. He is now on the reserve list and resides in England.

Admiral John Denison, whose retirement was announced last year, belongs to the famous Denison family of Toronto and is the only member of the family who has so far obtained distinction in the navy, all the others being military men. He entered the navy at the usual early age and rose through all the ranks to be a full admiral. During his career he has been employed on many important and responsible missions, though it has never been his fortune to be in action. He was for some time in command of the Royal yacht "Victoria and Albert," and in close attendance on the late Queen Victoria.

HEAD OF NAVAL SERVICE.

Admiral Charles Edmund Kingsmill, by virtue of his present office as director of Canada's naval service, is a tolerably familiar figure to Canadians. He was born in Guelph where his father was a county court judge and entered the Royal navy from the "Britannia" training ship in 1870. He saw service on all the navy stations and rose to the rank of rear-admiral in 1908, when he retired to take up the work of organizing a naval service in Canada, an officer of the Royal navy he commanded several of the finest ships of the fleet.

The twelfth Canadian admiral, the late Edward Percy Ashe, death occurred a few months ago, belongs to Quebec, his father having been superintendent of the Observatory. His career as of Admirals Denison, Kingsmill was a worthy one them he worked his way up served his Sovereign faithfully was rewarded with well-earned motions. He became a rear- in 1908.

The twelve men mentioned with the very best in the navy and Canadians may be proud of their prowess.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

The Ottawa Case

Mr. Justice Lennox has given his judgment in the Ottawa bilingual school case. The finding is directly against the chairman, who dismissed the qualified teachers, and those who supported him.

The net result is that this unwarranted and illegal action of the chairman and majority of the Board has landed them in a most embarrassing position. The teachers whom they purported to dismiss have not been legally discharged. This involves a considerable financial obligation upon the Board.

It is perhaps too much to expect that the rebellious trustees will accept the judgment of the Court. In all probability they will appeal from his decision. The judgment has been written with that expectation apparently. We may be sure from the length of time taken that Mr. Justice Lennox has satisfied himself as to the soundness of his judgment. All that is likely to be gained therefore by refusing to accept the judgment is a delay which will be costly to the ratepayers, and have a disorganizing effect upon the schools.

It is to be hoped that the Government will devise some means by which a case of this kind can be dealt with more expeditiously. A few changes in the separate school act providing for the appointment of trustees by the Government would be an effective method of settling a difficulty of this kind. The truculent attitude of Chairman Genest and those who sympathise with him has not been met with sufficient determination. Now that Judge Lennox has given a judicial decision the Provincial Government would be warranted in taking any steps that may be necessary, no matter how radical, to exercise the authority of the Minister of Education in such a case as this. It is an outrageous proposition that a little group of French Canadians should defy the law, rebel against the Government and attempt by agitation to impose their will, not only upon the Premier and his colleagues, but upon the people of this province. Further paltering with the situation will be an evidence of weakness. The Sentinel hopes that some energy will be shown in dealing with the situation now that it has been settled in Court.—The Orange Sentinel.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, DEC. 24th, 1914.

The Christmas Spirit

It is under unusual circumstances that the world enters the Christmas season in this year of storm and stress. It seems unfitting and unfeeling to voice the old, familiar greeting "A Merry Christmas," when the armies of the great nations of the Old World are drawn up in bitter and unrelenting warfare and when millions of people are homeless, grief stricken and in manyinstances utterly destitute. What a contrast with the spirit and teaching of Him, who brought to earth the beautiful message of peace and good-will! It is, perhaps, impossible to spend a merry Christmas, because we would be inhuman, indeed, if thoughts of the suffering, misery and awfulness of war and its attendant evils, want and disease, did not rise up in the midst of our Christmas cheer, to sadden and chasten the soul. But if their Christmas is not merry, Canadians can at least have a comparatively happy, hopeful and thankful Christmas. True, our country is at war, but its shores have not felt the devastating touch of any foreign invader. Many of its brave and loyal sons are abroad fighting, or preparing to fight the battles of the Empire, but throughout the length and breadth of this broad Dominion there is peace, contentment and a freedom from want and suffering that stands out in happy contrast with the conditions amid which millions of people will spend Christmas Day on the other side of the Atlantic. Should Canadians not eat their Christmas dinner and hold their Christmas gatherings in a spirit of thankfulness rather than a spirit of gayety and joyousness? And as we contemplate the distress and the necessities of less favored peoples, should the thought of all we are permitted to enjoy not kindle and broaden our sympathies and make us more earnestly pray for the speedy advent of that blessed day when peace and good-will shall reign supreme, reaching out from all its great, throbbing centres of life, commerce and power even unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

MUNICIPAL NOTES

Everything seems quiet in East Garry.

There is very little election talk in Amaranth, but some of the ratepayers appear to think a shake-up would do good.

Wm. Tease, of Caledon East, and James Ritchie, of Star, are likely candidates for Councillors in the event of an election in Caledon. Councillor Hawkins will run again, so will Councillor Hilliard unless he stands for deputy-reeve.

Mayor Campbell and Reeve Fairbairn will probably be returned by acclamation in Orangeville. Deputy-Reeve Arnott and Councillor Henderson are mentioned as likely candidates for deputy-reeve. The personnel of the 1915 councillors is very problematical as yet. Much depends upon the result of the pending trial.

Reeve Marshall, of Mono, is seeking re-election and his friends think he will have a good chance for the Wardenship if he can make the grade. It rests with T. H. Moffitt to say whether he will have opposition or not. The members of this year's Council are all content to "stand pat" for another year. If there is an election it will be caused by outside men.

If Armstrong comes out for the reeveship in Caledon, Councillor Sam Kannawin, and Mr. Frank Wrigglesworth, who was defeated for Councillor a year ago, will probably fight it out for deputy-reeve. Councillor Jas. R. Hillyard is being strongly urged to run for deputy-reeve. If he consents he should have a big advantage in position in the event of a three-cornered fight.

The signs all point to a lively election in Caledon township. Many of the ratepayers are in favor of allowing Reeve Quinn to have a second term by acclamation, but Mr. Quinn has always met with stiff opposition in his municipal career and just now his opponents are busy persuading Deputy-reeve Dave Armstrong to enter the lists for the reeveship. Mr. Armstrong, we understand, is disposed to yield to the wishes of his friends. If he does Caledon will be the arena of a well-fought contest.

There is every likelihood of the usual lively election in Melancthon. R. J. Cornett, who unsuccessfully opposed Reeve Dryden last year, is in the field for the reeveship and will have James Higgins for his opponent. Reeve Dryden is likely to retire, although some of the ratepayers are in favor of giving him another term. Deputy-reeve Jas. R. Clark has definitely announced his candidature for a second term. He will probably be opposed by Wm. Dynes, a member of the present Council, and there is a possibility of a three-cornered fight with Mr. W. E. Reid in the field as the third candidate. If there are contests for the reeveships there is likely to be a big batch of candidates for Councillors

A Handsome Profit

In Brampton a net profit of $1,716.70 is shown by the report of the Hydro Electric Commission for the eleven months of the present year. The total revenue was $23,348.76 and the expenditure $21,631.96. The number of consumers is as follows:—Commercial light, 174; domestic light, 627; power accounts, 21; street lights, 525. The assets of the Commission are placed at, $78,236.21.

FOR THE WARDENSHIP

H. H. HILBORN
Reeve of East Luther

The out reproduced herewith is a fairly good likeness of Mr. H. H. Hilborn, the genial and popular Reeve of East Luther. Mr. Hilborn is seeking the customary second term as reeve and if re-elected will be a candidate for the coveted position of Warden of Dufferin. He was nominated for the Wardenship last January but withdrew in favor of Reeve Dryden, of Melancthon. His withdrawal was a generous recognition of Melancthon's claim to the Wardenship, as that municipality, although the largest in the County, had missed its turn a few years previously and consequently had not had the honor of a Warden for 20 years. Every municipality in the County has now been represented in the Warden's Chair since the present County Councils' system was adopted with the exception of East Luther. In pressing his candidature for the wardenship in 1915 Reeve Hilborn will, therefore, be doing no more than asking for fair play and equal rights for the people of the municipality he is representing. If he succeeds in capturing the office he will fill it right capably for, besides possessing a genial personality, Reeve Hilborn is a capable and energetic man of business.

Belgian Relief Fund.

Postmasters have been furnished with forms for the purpose of taking subscriptions for the Belgian Relief Fund. Citizens of Orangeville and people residing in this vicinity who wish to subscribe to this fund may therefore leave their contributions with Postmaster Harshaw, who has the necessary forms and will see that all contributions are forwarded to the central office. There is nothing but admiration for the heroic actions of the Belgian people, whose bravery gained the allies important time at the outset of the war and was probably the means of saving Paris from capture. The gallant little nation's losses in life and property have been appalling. It is estimated that out of a total population of 7,000,000 probably 1,000,000 have been killed, 2,000,000 have fled to Great Britain, France and Holland and a great majority of the 4,000,000 who still remain in the country have been reduced to destitute circumstances. To relieve the widespread suffering and destitution now existing $4,000,000 a month will be required for the next six or eight months.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Rev. A. B. Winchester Addressed Large Congregations in St. Andrew's on Sunday.

Successful anniversary services were held in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday. Rev. A. B. Winchester, the scholarly pastor of Knox Church, Toronto, was the preacher and addressed large congregations at both services. In the morning the gifted visitor spoke on the theme "The Church of God" prefacing his address with a masterly exposition of the opening Chapter of Revelations. Emphasis was laid on the zeal and activity of the early Christian Church, the speaker stating that more was sometimes accomplished in a few weeks than by many highly organized present day churches in half a century. This success was attributable to the fact that the Spirit of the living God came down and gave power to the Church. All history went to show that human culture, human wisdom and human scholarship if separated from God can only lead to darkness and despair. The walls of the Church of God were its members, who were called out and separated to God's service. The Church itself was a divine institution and a power that is bound to make itself felt and to be so manifest that it will be known and spoken of as others are known and spoken of. It is not a man-made institution but an organization formed by the living God and his one divine witness here on earth. Emphasis was also laid upon the importance and responsibility of membership in the Church. It was a glorious thing to belong to the living Church, but an appalling thing to be a dead member of a dead church.

The evening discourse, which was both erudite and comprehensive in character, was on the subject, "The Signs of the Times" or "The Signs of the Second Coming of Christ." Christ's second coming, Dr. Winchester pointed out, had an important place in the teachings of the early Christian Church. The speaker reviewed a number of Old and New Testament prophecies and showed the manner of their fulfilment, arguing from this that the prophecies regarding Christ's second coming would surely be fulfiled in God's own good time. The discourses were followed with rapt attention.

The church choir, led by Mr. J. E. Jessop, provided special Christmas music and fully sustained the high reputation it has long enjoyed. The soloists were Mrs. Boswell, Mrs. Edgar Jackson and Mr. Jessop. The day's collections amounted to $600.

School Entertainment

The annual entertainment of S. S. No. 1, Amaranth, took place in the school house near Farmington on Friday night, Dec. 18th. There was a very large gathering of the parents and pupils. The school room was most artistically decorated and its inviting appearance reflected great credit upon teacher and pupils. Rev. J. R. Bell was chairman and performed his duties in his usual pleasing manner. The programme included choruses, a Christmas Carol and Christmas Bells by the school and a number of recitations by the children. There were also three drills, which proved very popular. They were a Gun Drill by the boys, in which Albert Miller sang "Just Before the Battle, Mother," a Flag Drill by the girls, in which they sang "Red, White and Blue" and "Canada, the Land of the Maple," and an Evergreen Drill by girls, in which they sang framed in wreaths of evergreen. A song entitled "Rock a Bye Baby" by the small girls was well rendered, as was a song entitled "Mother, Old and Gray" by Rose Brown. Besides these there were a number of selections on phonograph and graphaphone which received loud applause from the audience. A very pleasing duet was also rendered by Miss Gertrude and Cecil Menary. Refreshments were served after the programme and a very sociable time was spent. The teacher, Miss Bell, is to be congratulated on the success of the concert, and the section is very fortunate to have the services of an instructress who is so painstaking and efficient in her work.

MELANCTHON

Sleighing is good and business is brisk in our burg.

Mrs. C. O'Neil paid a visit to friends in the Queen City.

Mr. P. Sime, the noted timber king of Corbetton, informs us that the market is very dull in the wood business all along the line, and the probabilities are that most of the wood will have to be held over until the war is over at least.

Our local grain market is busy this season.

We have never been in favor of newspaper correspondents assuming the role of critics of candidates aspiring to municipal honors, so we shall omit any comment at the present time.

Farmers are cutting and drawing up their winter's supply of wood—at least those who have any timber to cut, for timber is fast becoming a scarce commodity in this district. Very different from what it was years ago, when the farmers were so wasteful of their big maple trees as to leave them in log piles.

ALTON

The children of the Alton Public School held an excellent entertainment in Science Hall on Friday evening last. The audience crowded the hall to its fullest capacity. The children acted their parts well in the drills and other features of the program. Much credit is due to Mr. McGhie and the teachers for their success in training the children so efficiently. The concert was a treat that was relished by every one.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. Hester Neeley is on the way towards recovery after her recent severe illness. We are also sorry to hear that Mr. Richard Page is again seriously ill. Mr. Page has taken a bad turn that necessitated his removal to Guelph hospital for an operation, which, we understand, was performed on Saturday last. The latest report was that the operation had been successful and that the possibility was that the patient would recover.

A concert will be given in Science Hall on New Year's night in aid of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The programme given by Alton Public School on Friday evening will be repeated. The admission has been fixed at 15 cents.

The entertainment given in Science Hall on Monday night in connection with the Methodist Church was a great success. A very enjoyable programme was provided and was greatly enjoyed by young and old.

On the 25th anniversary of their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Smith, of this village, were presented with a valuable five-piece silver set by the six oldest members of their family. Along with the handsome gift went the hearty good wishes of their children for many returns of the day.

The Public School concert given by the school children of Alton in Science Hall on Friday evening last will be repeated on New Year's night, Jan. 1st, 1915, for Red Cross work in connection with the Women's Institute. Come and see the beautiful Flag Drill and song given by twenty girls, the eccentric but weird ghost drill, also the march, counter march and drill by sixteen boys in cadets' uniform. Interspersed with these features there will be songs, recitations, duets, quartettes and dialogues. This excellent programme has been made possible through the untiring efforts of Mr. McGhie and the two teachers. Miss Jean Barber and Mr. McDonald. So don't forget to come to Science Hall on Friday evening, Jan. 1st. Admission, 15c. and 10c. Come and help the good work along.

CALEDON.

On Monday morning death entered the home of Mr. Thos. Quinn, Reeve of Caledon, and claimed Miss Mary Morrisay as its victim. Miss Morrisay had only been ill for a few days and was not considered seriously ill till the morning of her death when she complained of severe pains and Dr. Thomas was again called. Although she suffered from neuralgia, the doctor did not expect such consequences so soon, but the neuralgia affected the heart and death quickly ensued. Miss Morrisay has lived with Mr. and Miss Quinn for the last eighteen years and was a source of great comfort to them. Besides Mr. and Miss Quinn, Miss Morrisay leaves to mourn her untimely demise, two sisters, who reside in Toronto, and a borther at Kenora and a large circle of friends who have the sympathy of the entire community in the sorrow which they have been called upon so suddenly to bear. The funeral took place on Wednesday from her late residence, Centre Road, to the R. C. Church, Albion.

Miss Louise Laughlin, who has been attending McDonald Institute in Guelph, is spending the Christmas holidays under the parental roof.

Mr. J. L. McDonald, of Alton, preached a very acceptable sermon in the Methodist Church here last Sunday morning. Rev. J. Burkholder occupied the pulpit in the evening. Mr. Bert Lindsay, of Caledon East, sang a very appropriate Christmas solo, which was highly appreciated by the large congregation.

Miss Irene Limebeer, of St. Catharines, is visiting her cousin, Miss Stella Limebeer, this week.

WHITTINGTON

The annual S. S. entertainment in connection with the Methodist Church will be held on Wednesday night, Dec. 30th. A varied programme of solos, duets, dialogues, recitations, pantomine, choruses, etc., will be provided by the children of the school, assisted by the people of the community. There will also be several short addresses. Admission, 25c.; children, 15c. A treat of candy for everybody at close of programme.

MONO CENTRE.

A large number of the parents of the section attended the concert given in the school house on Tuesday by the teacher, Miss Brett, and the pupils of S. S. No. 10. Mr. J. A. McFadden performed the duties of chairman in a capable manner and also entertained the gathering with a number of phonograph selections. Other numbers on the programme were songs by the school, dialogues, recitations, drills, etc. Presents were distributed to everybody before the close of the entertainment. The programme was greatly enjoyed by everyone and the entertainment was highly creditable to Miss Brett and her pupils. The Section is unfortunate in losing the services of Miss Brett, who has resigned to accept a position in her home school.

BLOUNT.

A number of our farmers disposed of a lot of army horses in Orangeville a week ago Tuesday.

Mr. George Woods entertained a number of friends to a fowl supper one evening recently.

Messrs. Cecil Welwood and Bert Speers visited Woodland Bros. on a recent Sunday evening.

Mr. Jackson Woods is spending his vacation with his uncle, Mr. G. Woods.

The Mono Mills Independent Telephone Co. is thinking of putting stronger batteries on lines 44 and 11 as they are not giving very good satisfaction at present.

The Blount School held its annual concert on Tuesday evening, Dec. 22nd.

Miss Ella Wilson spent Sunday of last week with Miss Margaret Welwood.

CATARACT

An unusual amount of interest is being taken here in the coming municipal elections. Cataract has not heretofore been specially represented in the township council, and the people hereabouts have about arrived at the conclusion that if they wish to have a direct influence in the doings of the municipal fathers they must get to work and elect a first-class man from among their own, substantial and highly qualified citizens. With this object in view it has been decided to nominate and elect a man of merit, a man of sterling worth and ability, and whose honesty is known to and admitted by every man and woman in the district and whose character is as solid and inflexible as the rocks that bloom at Credit Forks. The gentleman in question is Mr. E. W. Scott, than whom there is no man in this bailiwick better qualified in an all-round way to act as township councillor. He has the ability of a natural born legislator, and it is the people's loss that he has not been serving them long ere this. He is modest to a degree, and is known as E. W., W. E. or, to his intimates, as plain Billy. His abilities as a bridge builder alone would make his services of vast value to the township in these days of road reform, and that he will be elected by a good majority goes almost without saying. His friends here will rally to his support.

WEST MONO

Divine services will be held in West Mono Parish on Sunday, Dec. 27th, as follows: Herald Angel, 11 a.m.; St. George's, 3 p.m.; St. Matthew's, 7 p.m. Christmas Day—Herald Angel, 10.30 a.m., St. Luke's, 3 p.m.; St. Matthew's, 7 p.m.

St. Mark's Church Notes

The Sunday School entertainment held on Friday last was a great success. The children enjoyed a sleigh ride before supper, and on their return sat down to a most enjoyable meal. After this was over they went upstairs to the church and were shown a large number of views of the War. Then followed the programme, which included dialogues, military drill, recitations, music, etc., which was greatly enjoyed. No less than four Christmas trees were stripped, and besides this the Sunday School prizes were awarded by Santa Claus, who was a general favorite with the little ones during the evening. A large number of useful gifts were afterwards presented to Santa Claus to be sent to poor little children in need. Seventy-six articles were sent, including stockings, toques, mitts, mocassins, garments, books, toys, etc. Colonel Preston presided. A large number of adults were present.

The new organ has arrived and is now being installed. Particulars as to the opening services will be announced next week.

On Christmas Day Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8 a.m. and at 10.30 a.m. The Rector will preach at the 10.30 service on "The Re-discovery of Jesus of Bethlehem."

SCHOOL PRESENTATION.

On Tuesday the pupils of Holmes School on the Mono-Caledon townline presented their teacher, Miss Florence Cooper, with a gold cameo and pearl necklet and the following address:—

Miss Florence Cooper
Teacher Union S. S. No. ....

Dear Teacher,

At this glad and happy season of the year, your pupils have decided that it would be quite fitting to present you with some small token of their love and esteem. We, therefore, ask to accept this gold cameo and pearl necklet and with it we tender our heartiest wishes for your happiness and prosperity. Since taking charge of our school you have endeared yourself to us all and we have come to regard you in the light of a friend as well as a teacher. You have always shown a very hearty interest in our welfare and have not hesitated to go beyond the duties of the school room to help us along in our studies. We have always felt free to go to you for advice and assistance in our troubles and problems and have found you ready and willing to help us in the wisest way. That your cup of happiness may always be filled in gererous measure, will be our sincere and constant wish.

Signed on behalf of your pupils.

Master Wilson Henry read the address and Master Clarence Holmes made the presentation. Miss Cooper, who was taken quite by surprise, made an appreciative reply.

Windy Adelie Land.

The windiest region of the world of which we have any knowledge appears to be the coast of Wilkes Land, where Dr. Mawson's expedition recently spent two years. Records at Adelie Land for 1912 showed an average wind velocity throughout the year of about forty-eight miles an hour, while velocities of 100 miles an hour were common.

Silver Plated Bodies.

A German professor has invented a process of silver plating dead bodies, so as to convert them into metallic images of the individuals as they were when in life. Gold plate can be used if the relatives can afford it.

Points for the Kitchen

Dish cloths should be washed and boiled regularly.

A pinch of soda added to a berry pie before the upper crust is put on will keep it from running over.

When cream is only slightly sour it may be made delicious to serve with puddings, etc., in the following way: Put it into a basin with the juice of a lemon and a tablespoon of sugar and whip until quite stiff.

For a disinfectant for a sink, pour down a gallon of boiling water mixed with two tablespoonfuls of soda and a teaspoonful of ammonia. This will dissolve all greasy matter in both sink and pipe.

Whole peppers are better for seasoning soups and sauce than ground peppers.

If a little zinc is burned in the stove it will prevent soot from forming in the chimney.

If you have no cream to whip, use a banana with the white of an egg, beat up till stiff and you will have a delicious substitute for whipped cream.

If the lamp smokes or gives a poor light it may be merely dirty. Take the lamp apart, boil the burner in soda water and pour scalding hot water through the tubes and connecting rods.

After peeling onions, rub the hands with parsley or celery if you would counteract the onion odor.

When buying a broom test it by pressing the edge against the floor. If the straws remain in a solid mass, the broom is a good one; if they bristle out and bend down, don't buy it.

When making a cup of cocoa put into it (when mixed) a pinch of salt, and you will find a great improvement in the flavor. This also takes the watery taste away.

When the oven becomes greasy, you can remove all dirt and grease by putting a thick layer of powdered lime on each shelf and let the oven get thoroughly hot. When it is cold, sweep it out well.

To keep the light of oil lamps clear, the burners should be boiled every month in water with a lump of soda in it.

Before frying bacon, if you soak it in cold water for three or four minutes you will find that it prevents the grease from running, and the bacon will have a much finer flavor.

When boiling potatoes put a teaspoonful of sugar as well as salt in the water. This does not give a sweet taste, but makes them dry and floury.

An economical way of frying onions is to place sufficient water in the bottom of the pan to cover it, then slice the onions and put them into the pan with a piece of dripping the size of a walnut. Fried in this way they will not burn.

The objectionable sputtering and flying of hot fat when eggs are dropped into it may be prevented if a little flour is sifted into the fat just before they are added.

"WAR IS HELL."

What of the Many Deaths Caused by Strong Drink?

To the Editor:—

The Liberal Advocate of Columbus, the state organ of the liquor interests, objects to the statement of Congressman Hobson that "hundreds of thousands of deaths are caused by liquor every year," in the United States. But it speaks with approval of the scientific study of the subject made by E. B. Phelps and endorsed by the Medical Record. His study based on the census of 1910 "arrives at the conclusion" says the Liberal Advocate, "that alcohol caused 66,000 deaths," in the United States in one year. And the editor states that the Brewers Journal endorses these figures.

Very well, leave out all the deaths really due to alcohol, but not reported as such by the doctors. Leave out the murders, drownings, accidents, suicides, apoplexies, heart failures and cases of weakened vitality so that other diseases cannot be thrown off. Take only the figures that are endorsed by the liquor dealers publications and you have 66,000 a year killed by alcohol in the United States alone every year. That is more than were actually killed in the Boer war and in the war between the United States and Spain put together—more than have probably been killed in the present terrible slaughter in Europe. Gladstone, who was noted for the reliability of his statements, said that drink killed more than war, famine and you can see he was right.

A recent writer asks "if war is hell, what shall we say of the liquor traffic."

A little boy, on returning from Sunday School one day, when asked by his mother what the golden text was, instantly replied, "Hold a grater to Solomon's ear." For a moment the mother was puzzled, until she recalled the true text, "Behold a greater than Solomon is here."

CHURCH ON A WARSHIP.

Sunday Service In North Sea These Days Is an Impressive Affair.

On the North Sea a cruiser is stripped for action—the guns loaded, torpedoes fitted and trained, range finders at work measuring off the varying distances of sighted vessels; a word, a touch, and that mighty fabric of potentiality will flame as if the mouth of hell had opened and vomited its contents.

Meanwhile, the foremast flies the peaceful flag of Divine service, with its white cross, the symbol of supreme self-sacrifice and courage. Not many hours ago, from that same mast, was signalled messages fraught with battle and destruction, which opened the Book of Life and Death with an orchestra of lyddite shell and shrieking shrapnel.

The cruiser's decks are swept of everything which is not a weapon or some instrument auxiliary to death. No bulwark or rail; the ship is stripped, and in her naked strength—three hundred and odd feet of shod death.

We are on the ground where over a hundred years ago Nelson kept his ceaseless watch on the North Sea. The men hurry up out of all kinds of unsuspected places, mustering beneath the once-burnished, now dull, muzzles of iron-throated monsters. An officer sniffs the wind, consults with another, and decides to hold the service 'tween decks. The chaplain already robed, is in the captain's cabin settling the final details of the order of service.

The master-at-arms appears and reports everyone aft. The choir, augumented by a small string band, is grouped round the wind-jam, a harmonium, with a slight cold due to exposure. Between decks the whole ship's company is mustered, men are wedged into all kinds of uncomfortable places, chairs are placed for the officers.

The chaplain appears, accompanied by the captain. The latter seats himself facing the ship's company, the chaplain steps to the improvised prayer-desk and gives out a hymn. It might have been an order to open fire so quick is the response, as from lusty lungs there rolls out the soldiers' and sailors' favorite, "Fight the Good Fight."

The service is a shortened form of evensong with the special prayers used daily in His Majesty's navy, to be found in any prayer book.

The men's voices are uplifted in the response, augumented this time by a chorus of seagulls. With the first hymn they started a shrill series of cries, but now they have got into their stride. There is the ground bass of the distant waters, the whispering swish of the caressing waves blending with the voices of some hundreds of men, but softly dominant is the song of the sea. Truly there were visualized and actualized the opening words of the Benedictus, "O all ye works of the Lord, bless ye the Lord, praise Him and magnify Him forever." And around us and upholding us the moving mystery of the sea, fit symbol of God and His protecting arms.

The captain — a fine figure, alert, with a penetrating eye and clear-cut features—reads the lesson reverently, and the faces of the ship's company turn to him. The men listen with keen interest in a story which tells of a nation's struggles and desperate defence.

In those faces one reads the tale of what is known in the navy as "a happy ship."

The chaplain gives a short address on St. Michael, warrior, archangel, champion of the chivalry of heaven.

One more hymn then the blessing. A destroyer looms up out of the creeping mists of evening, slows down, listens for a few minutes, exchanges signals, and then is off again to continue that watch which is first cousin to prayer.

Indian Children Follow War.

European and Indian schools in Bombay have opened subscriptions for the war funds. The Indian children, in particular, have become quite enthusiastic, following the war news and studying the map with the closest attention. Many of the older boys and girls are giving their pocket money to the funds, and are showing their loyalty in a variety of ways. The children are daily instructed in war news, and the causes that led Britain to declare war on Germany are explained to them in several schools.

May Use Parks.

German prisoners are now arriving in London in such numbers that Londoners are beginning to feel uneasy lest they are to be deprived of the use of some of the suburban parks and open spaces to provide concentration camps for them. No complaint has been made where portions of public parks have been utilized as training grounds for recruits.

Toronto In 1850.

Mr. John Ross Robertson has presented to the City of Toronto the ninth of a series of pictures showing the different stages in the development of Toronto and York from 1793 to 1908. This picture gives a view of the city as it appeared in 1850-1, and is taken from a drawing made at the time by Mr. Fred H. Granger, a resident of the city.

Judge Upheld Them.

The firemen and greasers of the steamer Pakehea refused to work until six Germans and one Austrian were dismissed. They were charged at Wellington, New Zealand, with refusing to do duty. The magistrate said that their action was justified, and the charge was withdrawn.

Uganda's King Weds.

The King of Uganda, who paid a prolonged visit to England about two years ago, was married a few days ago to Miss Irene Kizi, the daughter of a native missionary. The youthful monarch and his consort will be crowned in the Anglican cathedral at Uganda by Bishop Willis.

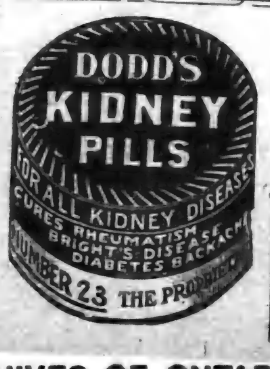
Crippled With Rheumatism

And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cured Him.



When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. Read how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. F. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes:—"I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. Finally he consented to try them, and to his surprise was greatly benefited in the first week, and the pains left his legs until he was so supple he could walk without pain or difficulty. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have worked wonders in this place, and we think there is no medicine like them."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, 5 for $1.00; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

A CLOSE CALL.

John Small, jr., has been seriously ill since Saturday night from the effects of strychnine poisoning. He had gone to Dr. Campbell's office about ten o'clock and shortly after taking a drink felt sick and left to get a drink of water at the mill. In a little while he vomited freely getting rid of the poison, but there was still enough in his system to render him helpless and he lay in the stable till early morning, when he managed to crawl back home, and there received medical attention. The doctor's attendant noticing his peculiar actions notified a druggist, who gave him an antidote, and although he was quite sick that night and part of next day was able to be about on Monday morning. The affair naturally caused quite a ripple of excitement around town, and it is extremely fortunate things turned out as they did.—Star & Vidette.

AN ALABASTER SPHINX.

Historic Discovery on the Ancient Plains of Memphis.

Another sphinx, weighing ninety tons and carved from a single block of alabaster, has been unearthed at a point between the world famed colossi on the water logged plains of Memphis in Egypt. For hundreds of years it has lain in a recumbent position, buried beneath the sands on the road to Sakkarch. Today it is half exposed to view, and next year it is to be raised to a vertical position above the water line.

This newly found sphinx was betrayed in its hiding place by its tail, which Mr. Mackay, one of the students of the British school in Egypt, discovered about a year ago. This year, when the water on the plain subsided, the complete figure was excavated and was found to measure some fourteen feet high and twenty-six feet in length. Alabaster being a rock foreign to the neighborhood, the new sphinx ranks as the largest that has ever been transported. The figure bears no inscription, but is considered by Professor Flinders Petrie, the director of the British school in Egypt, to have been carved about 1,300 B. C.—London Standard.

The Aeroplane Stabilizer.

Elmer A. Sperry, winner of the $50,000 prize offered by the French war department for a stabilizer which makes aeroplane flying safe, is an American, a resident of New York. The test was made at Paris. The inventor first attracted wide attention in this country by a gyroscopic compass, which is now used by the warships of a number of nations. It is asserted that his latest invention makes aeroplanes safe under almost any circumstances.

Our Great Crops.

Cotton is not the king of our crops. The corn crop of the country in 1913 was worth $1,692,002,000, while the cotton crop for the same year was worth $797,841,000. The hay crop ran cotton a pretty close race, selling for $797,077,000. Wheat comes a close third to cotton, $610,124,000, while all the other products are well in the rear. The number of bales of cotton raised in 1913 was 13,677,000—500 pounds to the bale.

The Kit Carson Tree.

The famous old elm tree in Riverside park at Halstead, which is becoming noted as one of the objects of interest along the Santa Fe trail by reason of its connection with the life of the famous old Indian fighter and scout, Kit Carson, has been suitably labeled by the placing of an attractive metal sign on it with this inscription: "The Historic Kit Carson Tree."—Kansas City Journal.

GUELPH FAT STOCK SHOW.

Grand Valley may not be a very large spot on the map, as compared with some places, but as a centre of interest to breeders of heavy draft horses, the results attained at the Fat Stock Show, Guelph, show the district adjacent to it to be unrivalled. Messrs. G. Mournahan, G. Carton, A. [illegible] and John Hillis had a string of heavy drafts at the show, every one of which got a prize. Six of them competed in the special prizes offered by the County of Dufferin, and these same six in competition in the open events, were all within the prize money. This is an exceptionally good record, and we doubt unequalled by any other horse-ring at the fair. Following is the list of prize winners:

George Mournahan—

Dufferin County special for heavy draft gelding, and age, four entries, 1st with High Degree.

Heavy draft gelding on line, open to men engaged in farming, 2nd with High Degree.

Heavy draft team, 3rd with High Degree and Saugeen Pride. Mr. Mournahan's winnings amounted to over $95.

George Clayton—

Dufferin County Special Canadian bred mare, any age, 2 entries. Daisy Moncrieffe, 1st, $10.00; Scottish Queen, 2nd, $5.00.

Canadian bred mare, foaled previous to 1911, 10 entries. Scottish Queen, 5th, $10.00.

Gelding or mare foaled previous to Jan. 1st, 1912, shown on a line, 12 entries. Daisy Moncrieffe, 4th, $15. Alex. Clayton—

John Hillis—

Gelding or mare foaled previous to 1912. Shown on line, 12 entries. Joe Moncrieffe, 5th, $10.00.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child-life of Ontario.

Last year there were 394 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day; the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all these were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees,
Toronto.

"Fruit-a-tives" Keeps Young And Old In Splendid Health

J. W. HAMMOND Esq.

SCOTLAND, ONT., Aug. 25th, 1913

"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pill manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them".

J. W. HAMMOND.

Those who have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives" are proud and happy to tell a sick or ailing friend about these wonderful tablets made from fruit juices.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Address McGUIRE & McKITRICK, Orangeville, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Cook, of Mount Forest, announce the engagement of their daughter, Effie L., to Dr. Harry L. Emmett, of Fonthill, Ont., the marriage to take place in January.

Magistrate B. B. Miller, of Wiarton, sentenced James Hyatt, of Amabel, to ninety days in jail for seducing a girl under 16. On the face of it there would appear to be a miscarriage of justice here.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My boy Frank seemed weak-chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. O. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

INCREASE FARM PRODUCTION

Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture Issues Bulletin to Farmers

Regina, Dec. 19th, 1914.—"Increase the production" is the advice issued by the Saskatchewan department of agriculture in the following bulletin:—"The war has already increased, and will continue to increase, the demand for all farm products of Saskatchewan. It has already brought about increased prices for some products and is practically sure to have the effect of making and maintaining high prices for all farm products that make up the world's food supplies. Farmers know these facts and each in his own way they are planning their work for this fall, for the coming winter and for next summer so as to take advantage of them and thereby raise the Empire and themselves at one and the same time. Farmers perhaps, do not realize, however, that while war stimulates agriculture, it depresses a number of other important and legitimate industries. In consequence there is already some unemployment in our cities and larger towns. It is desirable and it is necessary that this unemployed labor should be helping to produce on farms instead of helping to consume in cities. These are times of sacrifice. Many farmers who are in comfortable circumstances will make their contribution to the Empire's needs next summer by producing at some profit to themselves as much as their fields are in a condition to produce.

A Correspondent Indulges in Severe Criticism of East Garry's Council

Mr. Editor:

The ratepayers of East Garafraxa are a long suffering and very patient people, or they would not tolerate the way the municipal affairs of the Township have been conducted these last years. I have been told that we should be ashamed of ourselves for placing such men at the Council table to conduct the affairs of the municipality, that some of those filling the most important offices in the Township are wholly incapable to do so with credit to themselves or advantage to the Township they represent. If this be the case should we not shake off our lethargy and select our best business men at the coming election and not return men who cannot fail to reflect discredit upon ourselves.

I have looked over the minutes of the County Council meetings and as a result find that our Reeve takes little, if any, part in the business transacted by that body. We should send a live, competent man to the County Council, not one who does little more than second a motion prepared by some one else. While our representative did little at the Council Board, I notice, according to the minutes of the last session, he succeeded in bagging the sum of over $50 for commission services on the cement bridges built adjoining the Township. I do not understand how he could be entitled to so much commission. When these contracts are let they are supposed to be completed in accordance with plans and specifications prepared by the County Engineer—an overseer is appointed to see that the proper amount of cement is used in mixing the concrete. Then there is the Chairman of the Road and Bridge Committee, and the Warden to inspect the job. So it is a conundrum to me how our Reeve could draw more than Fifty Dollars commission for his services. Does it not seem ridiculous to have to pay, besides the Engineer and Contractor, FOUR other men to look after the job?

I am heartily in favor of good permanent work being done, but I do not see the utility of paying a man where his services are absolutely worthless and valueless to the Township.

Yours Sincerely,
A. FARMER.
East Garafraxa, Dec. 21st, 1914.

Jenkins-McFaul

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan. McFaul, 2nd line, west, Caledon, on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 22nd, when their youngest daughter, Ida Beatrice, was united in marriage to Mr. Russell Ambrose Jenkins, also of Caledon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Armstrong, of Alton. Promptly at 2.30 o'clock the bride entered the parlor on the arm of her father, while Mrs. Charles Shore, of Toronto, her cousin, played the wedding march. The bridal party took their places under a beautiful evergreen arch trimmed with white ribbon and carnations from the centre of which hung a large wedding bell. The bride was gowned in cream voile over silk, wore a bridal veil and carnations and carried a bouquet of white carnations and maidenhair fern. She was unattended. After the ceremony and the usual congratulations from the assembled guests, who numbered about sixty, all repaired to the dining room where a dainty wedding repast was served. A toast was proposed to the bride and was responded to by Mr. W. J. Limebeer. A toast to the host and hostess brought a fitting response from Councillor L. K. Johnston, of Orangeville. Friends were present from Toronto, Webbwood, Tara and Orangeville. The bride was the recipient of a large number of handsome and useful presents. The groom's gift was a silver sugar bowl and spoon holder combined. The happy couple will make their home on the Jenkins homestead, 1st line, west, Caledon. The Banner joins their many friends in extending its hearty congratulations.

Rowan-Nodwell

Mr. Andrew Mackinnon Rowan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Rowan, The Maples, and Miss Annie Ebbel Nodwell were quietly married at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Thos. Nodwell, South Ward, at 4.30 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of St. Andrew's Church. The families of the bride and groom were the only guests. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Bertha, and the groom was supported by Mr. Percy Reid. The happy couple left by the evening train on a short honeymoon trip.

Speers-McFadden

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, 956 Queen St., east, Toronto, on Wednesday, Dec. 16th, when Miss Hazel McFadden, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McFadden, was given in marriage to Mr. Nelson W. Speers, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Speers, of Toronto, formerly of Orangeville. Rev. John Bushel, pastor of St. Clement's Church, performed the ceremony. The bride, attired in cream satin, with shadow lace trimmings and carrying a bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley, was attended by her cousin, Miss Mamie Macdonald, attired in reseda green silk, carrying a bouquet of pink roses, while Mr. Gordon McFadden, brother of the bride, acted as best man. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold wish-bone set in pearls, and to the best man gold cuff links. After the wedding dejeuner the happy couple left for a short honeymoon.

Bowes-Patterson.

On Wednesday, Dec. 16, a pretty Christmas wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Patterson, Alton, Ont., when their only daughter, Alma Beatrice, was united in marriage to Rev. Frank Nelles Bowes, B.A., B.D., resident minister of Alton Methodist Church.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Chas. H. Daniard, B.A., of Toronto, assisted by Rev. W. Howey, B.A., of Victoria College, Toronto.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked pretty wearing a gown of ivory duchess satin with overdress and drapery of georgette crepe with trimmings of oriental lace and carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses and valley lilies. Her only attendant was a little flower girl, Miss Mabel Dods, her cousin, who looked dainty in a little dress of shadow lace over white silk, with touches of blue, carrying a basket of white roses.

Miss Hazel Patterson, of Orangeville, cousin of the bride, played, previous to the ceremony, Marche Nuptiale, and while the bridal couple were receiving the congratulations of their friends, Mendelssohn's Wedding March. During the signing of the register, Rev. W. Howey sang "Perfect Day."

The drawing room decorations consisted of a terrace of green aricarius and mums.

In the dining room, where the dejeuner was served, the tables were prettily decorated with ropes of smilax and red carnations,—the color scheme being carried throughout.

Only the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends were present. The bride was the recipient of many useful and beautiful gifts, among which were presents from her Sunday School class, the Epworth League, and the Knottout Club.

The groom's gift to the bride was a Knechtel Kitchen Cabinet, to the flower girl a bar-pin set with pearls and to the pianiste a solid gold pin. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Bowes left on the north bound train, the bride travelling in a suit of negre brown gabardine, black velvet hat trimmed with ospreys and furs.

NEARLY DROWNED

Four Young Men Have Narrow Escape from Death in Owen Sound Bay

Upset from a sail boat into the icy waters of the bay and rescued just in time to save their lives, was the experience of three young men named Bell and a boy named McNab, of Third Ave. E., on Saturday about noon. The boys were rescued from their serious predicament by Messrs. Fred Christian and J. F. Cascadden, of Third Ave., E., and Mr. Wm. Jones, sr., and just in the nick of time, too, for had they been in the water ten minutes longer, they would have undoubtedly perished. As it was they were chilled through and it will be some little time before two of them, at least, recover from the shock.

On Saturday morning, Duncan and Gordon Bell, with their younger brother and a boy named McNab, found a sail boat adrift in the ice near the east shore of the bay. The boys could not find an owner for it but were of the opinion that it had broken away from some of the boathouses on the west side of the bay and had drifted across. They decided to sail the boat across to the other shore and endeavor to locate the owner.

Everything went well enough until they got out in the bay about half way between the Malleable Iron plant and the Union cement works. The wind was pretty stiff and there was a choppy sea and the boys began to find they had about all they could handle. One of them attempted to make some change in the sail, when one of the ropes that was holding the sail broke. The wind immediately blew the sail around and the boat capsized, throwing the occupants into the water. The boys managed to get hold of the upturned boat and Duncan and the two younger boys climbed on and got astride the hull. The other boy, Gordon, was not able to climb up but hung on with his hands, his legs and part of his body being in the chilly water.

The four boys then began to call for help and to wave their hands and after a few minutes, attracted the attention of Mr. Christian, who at once realized the dangerous predicament the boys were in. At any minute, they were liable to become unable to hold on any longer and had they ever once let go of the boat, they would have sunk to the bottom as they were badly chilled and were numb with the cold. Mr. Christian immediately summoned Mr. Cascadden and the two men ran down to Mr. Jones' boathouse and put out in Mr. Jones' sailboat while Mr. Wm. Jones, sr., went out in a rowboat to the scene of the accident.

It did not take long to get the boys into the rescue boats, Duncan Bell and the two younger boys being taken aboard the sail boat, while Mr. Jones got Gordon Bell into his row boat. Gordon was in bad shape with the cold and had cramps in his legs, while the other boys were blue with exposure to the cold and wet. They were taken with all possible haste to the Malleable Iron Works, which was the nearest place where there was a warm fire and the boys remained there until they were thoroughly warmed and their clothes were dried.

Although they have not suffered any serious effects, none of them is anxious for a repetition of their unpleasant experience.—Owen Sound Sun.

Died Intestate

No will was left by Mrs. Florence Montgomery Kyles, of Toronto, who died on July 25th last. She left an estate of $7,849, comprising an equity of $1,662 in her late residence, 200 Robert St.; property on Bathurst St., $1,170; mortgages, $3,547; promissory notes, $493; cash, $1325 and 25 shares of the Shuttleworth Chemical Co. stock, worth $500. The property will be equally shared by a daughter, Florence, and three sons, Lloyd, John and Norman Kyles.

Harry James Dead

Through an oversight we omitted to make any reference in last week's issue to the death in Ottawa on the preceding Friday of Harry James, the onetime widely known lacrosse player. Deceased, who was in his 49th year, passed away after a long illness. He was born near Brampton and was a brother of Mrs. T. R. Blain, Mrs. Nixon and Mr. John James of that town. As a boy he learned to play lacrosse with the Bramptos Excelsiors. He afterwards came to Orangeville and was one of the stalwarts of the old champion Dufferin lacrosse team. Twenty-five years ago he went to Ottawa, where he became known as one of the best players of the famous Capitals. Quiet, unassuming and capable he made warm friends wherever he went. He is survived by his widow and four sons, to whom the sympathy of many old friends is extended.

Hospital Notes

The Lord Dufferin Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire wish to thank thy following for their donations: Trayclothe from Mrs. McKeown. Flannelette blankets from Miss Alice Hewitt. Box of fruit from Mr. Mervin Henry. Fruit from Mrs. W. Island, Erin.

The Imperial Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire has sent copies of the following prayer to be read at the meetings of the local Chapters, but as this prayer is of interest to many who are not members of the Order but who may have relatives or friends in the firing line, and indeed to everyone in this time of stress in which the nation finds itself, the words are given here.

"O God who has taught us in Thy Holy Word, that Thou dost not willingly afflict the children of men, grant that in the present time of warfare and distress of nations our people may know Thy presence and obey Thy will. Save and defend, we pray Thee, our King and Empire. Give wisdom to our Sovereign and our statesmen, skill to our officers, courage to our soldiers and sailors, and if it be Thy holy will, victory to our arms. Look in mercy upon us all who are immediately exposed to peril, conflict, sickness and death, and especially those known or dear to us whom we name in our hearts before Thee. Comfort the prisoners, relieve the sufferings of the wounded, and show mercy to the dying. Give strength to all surgeons and nurses in camp or hospital, and hope to all who throughout the world are in anxiety or sorrow."

"Remove in Thy good providence all causes and occasions of war, and of Thy great goodness restore peace among the nations."

Line Via Orangeville

On Tuesday, Mr. Stocking, a Hydro-Electric engineer, paid Grand Valley a visit to ascertain about what power could be secured for manufacturing and purposes other than lighting. The present plans of the Commission are to extend the line from Brampton to Orangeville, branching off to Grand Valley, while another line will run off lower down to Alliston, Beeton and Tottenham. It is estimated the Commission would require a total of about 5000 h.p. in this area, to warrant the project being carried out. No doubt a very considerable amount of this is counted on from a number of brick yards recently or about to be started near Inglewood. Mr. Stocking was unable to give any information as to the probable cost of current in Grand Valley, nor when the Commission would be prepared to supply it.—Star & Vidette.

HORRORS SEEN ON THE YSER

GERMAN OFFICER TELLS

Diary in Dead Soldier's Pocket Eloquent of Hunger and Cold and Failure to Pierce Allies' Front.

London, December 17.—What the German soldiers endured in the course of their repeated efforts to pierce the allies' front in Belgium is shown vividly in a diary found on the body of a German officer who was slain in one of the assaults upon the position held by the Belgian army on the Yser. Under the title, "Trois Jours sur l'Yser," an extract from the diary was translated and issued from the Belgian army headquarters. Forwarded by the wife of a Belgian officer residing in London, the extract was published in the London Morning Post as follows:

KNOW NOTHING.

"October 24.—The fight continues. We are trying to get to the other side of the Yser. At a quarter to six o'clock a.m. we start. There are works and pontoons to prepare. We set out then quickly across the ground in front of us, across ditches and under a severe fire from the enemy. A spent bullet hits me in the back, below the neck, but I am not wounded. We take up a position near the Vandewoode farm, where we take shelter from the fierce artillery fire. Terrible situation. Seeking cover, we arrive at the fifth trench. There the fusillade increases.

"We know nothing of the general situation. I have no idea where the enemy is nor what his strength is, and there is no means of obtaining information. In the other lines there are also heavy losses which are not at all in proportion to the result that we achieve. The enemy's artillery is too strong and too well sheltered, and as it is not reduced by our weaker artillery an advance of the infantry is without effect and only produces heavy and useless losses.

FOOD SCANTY.

"The rescue of the wounded, too, leaves much to be desired. At Dixmude more than forty wounded remained on the ground without any care. The ambulance companies are kept ineffectively behind the Yser. It is impossible to receive regularly water and provisions. For many days we have not tasted a hot meal. The bread and the other things are scarcely sufficient and the reserve rations are exhausted. The water is bad, quite green, but one drinks it all the same, for we can get no other. Man is reduced to the condition of the beast. As for me, I have nothing more to eat, for I have left everything in the saddle on my horse. There has really been no proper arranging of what we were to do on this side of the Yser, and they have not told us that our horses were to remain on the right bank; that is why we are not provided for. I live on what comrades wish to give me, and the share is small. Change of clothes or linen is out of the question, and I am in an incredible plight. On all sides farms and villages are in flames. What a sad sight, this beautiful district in ruins, strewn with wounded and dead.

NOTHING BUT LOSSES.

"Oct. 25.—A comparatively calm night. The safety of the bridge over the Yser has been secured. The fight continues throughout the whole day. We do not receive definite orders. One would not say it was Sunday. The contest of infantry and artillery continues, but without any result. Nothing but losses. They are going to ask that our right wing should form a connection with the Sixth division of the Third Reserve Army Corps.

"October 26.—The night was terrible. Frightful storm and rain. I was nearly frozen standing with my feet in water. An interrupted fusillade directed against us. They are going to build a fixed bridge over the Yser, for one bridge has again been destroyed by the enemy's artillery. The position is the same as on the preceding day. No progress, in spite of incessant fighting, in spite of the booming of the guns and the cries of human beings uselessly sacrificed. The infantry cannot produce any effect until the artillery has destroyed the opposing guns. The losses must be enormous everywhere...

ALL IN CONFUSION.

"We have not had an opportunity of taking off our boots or of having a wash. The Sixth division is ready, but its help is ineffective. The situation is no longer clear as it was before; we learn nothing. We are going again to occupy the wet trenches. Our regiment is mixed up with other regiments in inextricable fashion. Not a battalion, not a company knows where its other units are. Everything is in confusion under this terrible fire, which enfilades us on all sides. . . Our former regiment is completely dispersed.

"The situation is terrible. To be shot at without ceasing, and to know nothing of the enemy nor of one's own troops. It is to be hoped that the position will become clearer soon. There is no ground for hoping to be able to go into cantonments.

CANNOT GO ON LONG.

"This state of things cannot go on long. I am in despair. The battalion is commanded by Captain May. I have been obliged to undertake the duties of quartermaster, which is not easy in the terrible position in which we are. It is necessary in the dark night to let the soldiers go a distance for provisions for their comrades. They have brought, too, cards and letters from those whom we love. But as we cannot strike a light we have to put them in our pockets until the following morning without having read the consoling words. Again we pass the night on the straw, pressing against oneanother to keep ourselves warm. It is frightfully cold and wet. Suddenly a violent fusillade obliges us to prepare for the fight, and we get ready, shivering and chilled.

"October 27.—At dawn I take advantage of a moment's respite to read the good wishes which come to me from home. What joy! But soon the illusion vanishes. The situation remains obscure. We cannot think of advancing."

Cured of Piles and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Abram Buhr, Herbert, Sask., writes:—"I want to say that I was troubled with eczema and piles and suffered greatly from the itching, burning sensations caused by these annoying ailments. I sent for a free sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I bought three boxes more, and after using same was cured of both eczema and piles."

This is the kind of letters we receive daily from people who have been cured of these distressing skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. No matter how skeptical you might be, you could not read these letters for many days without concluding that Dr. Chase's Ointment is undoubtedly the most prompt relief and certain cure for these ailments.

If you have doubts send for a free sample box and be convnced. It was by use of a free sample that Mr. Buhr was convinced of the merits of this treatment. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

DUFFERIN S. S. ASSOCIATION

Report of the Recent Convention in Shelburne.

The annual convention of the Dufferin S. S. Association was held in Knox Church, Shelburne, on Friday, December 11th, President H. Gilbert, of Mansfield, presiding. The morning session commenced at 11 o'clock, devotional services being conducted by Rev. Dr. Caldwell, of Shelburne. The minutes of last meeting, which was held in December, 1913, in the Shelburne Methodist Church, were read by Miss N. Bremner, secretary, Camilla, and adopted. Delegates were present from Orangeville, Melancthon, Mono, Amaranth and Mulmur. The following appointments were then made: Nominating committee—H. Gilbert, Mansfield; John Prior, Melancthon; Wm. Johnston, Shelburne; Miss N. Bremner, Camilla, Mr. Little, Mono. Auditors—Revs. Stevenson and Westgate, Shelburne. Rev. E. Halpenny, Toronto, Secretary of the Provincial Sabbath School Association, then gave a short address and the meeting was dismissed by Rev. Mr. Stevenson until 1.30 p.m.

The afternoon session opened with devotional services, led by the Rev. H. P. Westgate, rector of St. Paul's Church. The auditors' report was then read, which showed a cash balance for the year of $12.63. This was followed by the report of Rev. J. Dudgeon, of Rosemont, who spoke on the doings of the missionary department of the county during the year. Rev. J. R. Bell, of Laurel, then gave a report on Teacher Training in the Sunday School. Mr. Bell, in a few words, explained that he had corresponded with several of the ministers in the county, with a view to ascertaining to what an extent teacher training was taken up, only to find that three Sabbath Schools in the county were giving instructions along this line.

President H. Gilbert, of Mansfield, gave a short address, followed by the report of the Corresponding Secretary, Geo. Ireland, who outlined the work of the several townships, and presented the financial statement for the years 1913-14.

In the absence of Rev. J. E. Hunter, of Honeywood, the Rev. J. Dudgeon, of Rosemont, spoke on the topic: "Co-operation of Parent and Scholar for Progressive Sunday School Work," and the Rev. R. B. Stevenson took for his subject: "The Possibility and Necessity of the Early Surrender of our Children to Jesus Christ."

The Home Department, Cradle Roll, etc., were the subjects taken by the Rev. E. Halpenny, of Toronto, in closing. The meeting was dismissed until 7 p.m.

The evening session began about 7.15. The devotional exercises were led by Rev. R. B. Stevenson. The President than called for the report of the Nominating Committee, which was given by the secretary, and adopted. The Knox Church male quartette, Messrs. Hall, Richardson, Cooper and McKechnie, then rendered a selection in their usual acceptable manner. Rev. W. M. Morris, of Orangeville, who was to speak on "The Young Man Problem," not being present, Mr. Halpenny took the platform and attempted to diagnose our sad case of failure as an Association during the past year. The cause of the drop, Mr. Halpenny thought, was due to lack of efficient township organization and the failure of some schools to report. After congregational singing, another selection was given by the male quartette, after which Mr. Halpenny again addressed the organization.

The following are the officers for the ensuing year:—Pres., Rev. R. B. Stevenson, Shelburne; vice-pres., R. W. King, Grand Valley; corr.-sec'y, Geo. Ireland, Shelburne; rec.-sec'y, Miss Nina Bremner, Camilla; elementary div., Miss Phemia Lamont, Orangeville; secondary div., Miss Bertha Doherty, Orangeville; adult Bible Class, Garfield Gilbert, Mansfield; teacher training div., Rev. J. R. Bell, Laurel; home dept. div., Miss Bertha Curry, Orangeville; missionary dept., Rev. J. W. Dudgeon, Rosemont; temperance dept., R. C. Thompson, Corbetton.—Free Press.

SUTTON—McDONALD.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. McDonald, Maple Hill farm, 5th line, West Caledon, on Wednesday, Dec. 9th, 1914, when their eldest daughter, Cassie Mae, was united in marriage to Mr. William Anson Sutton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Sutton, Regina, Sask. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. Waddell, B.A., in the presence of about sixty guests. To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by the bride's sister, Miss Elizabeth, the bridal party entered the parlor and took their place in front of the bay window, which was banked with foliage and arched with evergreens. The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in ivory satin with train and trimmed with oriental lace and pearls. She also wore bridal veil in cap effect caught with a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of cream roses and lily of the valley. The only attendant was the bride's cousin, Master Dannie McDonald, acting as ring bearer, dressed in black velvet, trimmed with white satin. After congratulations and during the signing of the register, Mr. Garnet Dickie, of Victoria, B.C., sang, "O Promise Me." The bride and groom then led the way to the dining room, which was decorated with red and white, the tables also holding vases of red and white carnations, where a sumptuous dinner was served by Mrs. and Miss Arkell, caterers, from Orangeville, assisted by four young ladies, Misses McBride, McDougal, McMillan and McDonald, friends and sister of the bride. The groom's gift to the bride was a purse of gold, to the pianist a cameo ring, to the ringbearer a signet ring, and to the soloist a pearl tie pin. The other gifts were numerous and costly. The happy couple then left on the evening train for Detroit and Port Huron amid showers of good wishes and confetti. The bride travelled in a tailored suit of brass colored cheviot with hat to match and mink furs. Friends were present from Detroit, Port Huron, Orangeville, Brampton and Toronto. Previous to the marriage the bride was tendered a miscellaneous shower by her many young friends at the home of Miss Mamie Campbell.—Peel Banner.

DEATH OF WM. HATCH.

On Tuesday morning of last week William W. Hatch, a very highly respected pioneer, passed away in his 78th year at his late residence, Queen St., Mount Forest. Death came after an illness of one year which he bore with great patience, and through which he was faithfully nursed and cared for by his wife and youngest son, Walter. The late Mr. Hatch was born in Manchester, Eng., on August 12th, 1837. He came to Canada with his parents when a boy 12 years of age and settled in Oxford county near the town of Woodstock. He was very instrumental as a boy in helping his parents clear the bush. He then went to Woodstock where he served his apprenticeship as a shoemaker. On March 9th, 1857, he married Elizabeth Pearson, of the county of Oxford. To this union six children were born:—Mrs. Jos. Russell and Mrs. John Amos, Mt. Forest; Wesley, and Mrs. James McFadyen, of Dryden; George, of Drayton; Sidney, of Guelph. In 1875 his wife died and a few years later he married Mary Smith, of Puslinch, who survives him. To this marriage one son, Walter S. Hatch, remains. Deceased moved to Arthur twp. in 1877, where he farmed a number of years. Later he moved to town where he was engaged in the milling business under the firm name of Hatch & Sons. He moved to Dryden in 1904 where he lived a number of years. The last four years of his life were spent in Mt. Forest. He was an active, life-long member of the Methodist church and was a Liberal in politics. He possessed a remarkably bright disposition which, together with an energetic, enterprising spirit, made him a useful man in the communities where he resided at various times in his life. The largely attended funeral on Friday included many old neighbors from a distance who, as well as those of town, will greatly miss Mr. Hatch. Service at the home and Mt. Forest cemetery was conducted by deceased's pastor, Rev. A. C. Ellis, assisted at the residence by Rev. W. Cooper. The pallbearers were deceased's four sons named above, and two sons-in-law, Messrs. Russell and Amos. Other relatives in attendance from out of town were:—Messrs. Ralph Pearson and James Davidson, nephews, of Woodstock; Miss Margaret Russell, granddaughter, of Guelph; Mr. A. E. Annis, a friend of the deceased, from Orangeville—Mt. Forest Representative.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS.

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Mr. Cave, editor of the Midland Argus, is a convert to Local Option, and says: "For several years Midland has been under Local Option, and while we opposed the measure, when it was submitted to the ratepayers at that time, for reasons which we thought good and sufficient we would not now support its repeal."

There being no other door the daughters broke a window and dragged their father through it on a quilt, where he lay until Miss Hall ran nearly half a mile to F. White's for assistance. In the meantime, the boy who was sleeping in the attic, was unable to escape and was burned to death.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, DEC. 31st, 1914.

Improve the Market

On January 4th the electors of Owen Sound will vote on the question of authorizing the expenditure of a few thousand dollars to improve the town hall and the market building. This impresses on The Banner the necessity there exists for an improvement in the market accommodation in Orangeville. While the Town Hall has been, perhaps, sufficiently well looked after, that there is great room for improvement in our market is a fact that is indisputable. Lines similar to those proposed in Owen Sound could be followed here with great advantage to both buyers and sellers. The proposition is that a board walk of 10 feet wide and 100 feet long be built and that over this a 30 foot roof be placed, which would give a covered 10-foot space on each side under which farmers' rigs could be placed. This would enable the sellers to stay with their goods until they were disposed of, and would certainly be an attraction to producers to visit the town and personally see that they get the highest prices offered. As things are now a great deal of unnecessary carrying and crowding is unavoidable, and any steps that may be taken to improve on this would more than repay any outlay that would be required.

A Day of Intercession.

In harmony with the proclamation of His Majesty, King George, an Order-in-Council has been issued setting apart Sunday, Jan. 3rd, as a day of prayer and intercession throughout Canada in behalf of the cause supported by the armies of the Allies. The Order-in-Council is in the following terms :—

"Whereas, our Empire has been forced to take up arms in defence of rights and liberties unjustly attacked and to fulfil pledges solemnly given;

We, therefore, believing it to be fitting that our people should be enabled to make a public and solemn avowal of duty to Almighty God, and of need of guidance, have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Privy Council for Canada, to appoint, and we do hereby appoint Sunday, the third day of January next, to be throughout our Dominion of Canada a day of humble prayer and intercession to Almighty God on behalf of the cause undertaken by our Empire and our Allies and of those who are offering their lives for it, and for a speedy and favorable peace that shall be founded on understanding and not hatred, to the end that peace shall endure, and we do invite all our loving subjects throughout Canada to set apart this appointed day as a day of humble prayer and intercession."

In compliance with the expressed wish of this proclamation the Session of St. Andrew's Church has arranged the following service for Sunday night, Jan. 3rd :—

Votes for Women

Members of the W.C.T.U. of Creemore believe that married women who have property should have the privilege of voting at municipal elections, and if a vote of any kind is taken on election day the ratepayers will express their opinion on the granting of the franchise to all such. In Orangeville neither the W.C.T.U. nor any other society has exhibited any signs of a desire to vote, but it does not follow that the ladies here do not take any interest in municipal matters. On the contrary, it is claimed by several prominent people that if the ladies had the doing of it there would be a distinct change made in the personnel of the Council, that men would be elected who, while not restricting expenditure, would see that value was received for every dollar laid out and that when three or four thousand dollars are expended on improvements overseers would be appointed who would see that improvements were worth the money. It is just possible that votes for married women is what is needed to liven up the bunch that is posing as town councillors these days.

South Discharged

The trial of Wesley South, a local carpenter, on a charge of theft preferred at the instance of ex-Constable Wm. Marshall, took place before Judge Fisher on Thursday. The Judge acquitted the defendant, taking the ground that the irregularities which the defence admitted did not come within the statutory definition of theft. In giving his decision, Judge Fisher said that while irregularities had undoubtedly occurred there was not any evidence of any intention to defraud the municipality. The charge was based on the fact that South had put in accounts for lumber that was really supplied by Jas. A. Matthews, one of the members of the Town Council. Mr. H. G. Tucker, of Owen Sound, appeared for the Crown and Mr. A. A. Hughson conducted the defence.

ORANGEVILLE NOMINATIONS

Large Crowd Heard Speaking in Opera House on Monday Night.

Mayor Campbell and Reeve Fairbairn Returned by Acclamation—Holmes and Henderson for Deputy-Reeve —Only Three Men Qualify for Councillors

Orangeville's nomination meeting was held in the Opera House on Monday night and attracted what was practically a "capacity house" of the ratepayers. There were very few empty seats while the speaking was in progress. Some of the speakers showed considerable ill-feeling and personalities were indulged in to a greater extent than usual. Some of the "nice things" that a few of the speakers had to say about their fellows were undoubtedly uttered on the spur of the moment and had they been considered beforehand would probably have gone unsaid. While it was not slow to show its sympathies, the audience was good-natured although inclined at times to grow somewhat boisterous and seemed to thoroughly enjoy the thrusting and parrying of the candidates as they sparred for points—or sometimes wind. Despite the bantering, good-humored spirit so strikingly in evidence, the big crowd was keenly interested in the proceedings and it was eleven o'clock or later before any considerable number left the hall. About that time the audience suddenly concluded that it had heard all the oratory it wanted just then and a general exodus commenced. Chairman Hughson called for order and a hearing for the nominees who had not yet spoken, but his appeal fell on unheeding ears and in a few minutes the hall had emptied itself and the meeting was at an end.

The formal nomination meeting lasted from 7.30 until 8.30 o'clock. The following candidates were proposed :—

Mayor—J. L. Island, G. H. Campbell, H. L. Atkinson, T. S. Hewson, J. J. White, W. Fairbairn, R. Irvine.

Reeve—W. Fairbairn, T. S. Hewson, L. K. Johnston.

Deputy-Reeve—T. Henderson, L. K. Johnston, A. B. Holmes, Thos. Arnott, B. McGuire, T. S. Hewson, H. L. Atkinson.

Councillors—J. E. Thompson, S. Trimble, J. D. Torrie, J. R. Lathwell, J. Morrison, J. M. Rowan, W. C. McMillan, Dr. Carson, T. S. Hewson, John Patterson, O. Hayward, Arch. Irwin, B. McGuire, T. Hepton, John Park, J. A. Matthews, A. B. Holmes, L. K. Johnston, J. Creary, Jos. Darraugh, Thos. Wright, Wm. Robbins, J. Bennett.

The Returning Officer, Mr. A. A. Hughson, was appointed Chairman of the public meeting into which the gathering resolved itself immediately after the close of the formal proceedings. Considerable difference of opinion developed as to the order in which the candidates ought to be called and the time they should be allowed. After some discussion and several motions and amendments, it was arranged to allow each speaker ten minutes and to hear the members of the old council before calling upon the other nominees.

Mayor Campbell, who received a hearty reception, said that when he was nominated for Mayor at the by-election early in July he had advocated an honest, straightforward administration of the town's affairs. This, he claimed, he had endeavored to give, supporting his claim by a reference to the financial statement, which was not "cooked" as it had been in some former years, but gave an accurate statement of the financial standing of the town. He admitted that this year's Council had raised the taxes, but maintained that this was because the preceding council had "played the devil with the finances." The 1913 council had kept down the rate, but did so by carrying over current liabilities that it should have paid. Furthermore, it had taken $2987, owing the Public School Board and dumped it into the receipts without taking it into account at all as a liability. Altogether, this year's Council had over $6000 more of expenditure to meet than had the 1913 council. True, the statement showed a bank overdraft, but it was an honest statement and the speaker believed that the ratepayers would rather learn just how matters stood than be lulled into a sense of false security by a statement that glossed matters over and did not correctly represent the facts. The Mayor pointed out that the Council had under its control only a fraction over 7 mills of the total tax rate. The net debenture debt of the town was about $100,000. While this might seem large, it was really very small when compared with the debenture debts of other municipalities about the size of Orangeville. With reference to Councillor Matthews, the Mayor stated that he had advised Mr. Matthews to stand for the Council two years ago. The latter asked him then what he would do if the municipality wanted to buy lumber, as he had the only lumber yard in the town. The speaker suggested to Mr. Matthews that he could get over the difficulty by putting in the account in some other person's name. While Mr. Matthews might have been guilty of a technical wrong, the Mayor expressed his conviction that the Councillor did not collect one cent from the town to which he was not legitimately entitled. Little things were often done by municipal councils that could not be done if the letter of the law was strictly adhered to. The 1915 Council would have to be economical and it would have to be resoureful, if the financial affairs of the town were going to be kept in good shape. In the matter of roadmaking, the town was about 50 years behind the times. The Mayor thought the town should put down some permanent roadway each year and said he had made arrangements with the Provincial Good Roads Department for the loan next spring of a complete set of roadmaking machinery.

Reeve Fairbairn stated that since his election he had looked after the business of the town to the best of his ability. Mr. Fairbairn criticised the expenditures of the R. & B. Committee under the chairmanship of his predecessor, Mr. J. J. White. The Committee spent $2500 in 1913, some of it, in his opinion, none too wisely. At the first meeting of the 1914 Council accounts were presented amounting to $800. Of this about $600 was for expenditures authorized by Mr. White's committee in 1913. The speaker found fault with the high cost of the Wellington St. bridge built under Mr. White's supervision. The steel and covering of the bridge cost $625, while the two bridges which the County Council built on West Broadway were completed throughout for $1003.42, or about $500 each. The East Broadway bridge was built for practically the same money as the top of Wellington St. bridge cost. In closing Mr. Fairbairn intimated that he was in the field for reeve and if elected would do the best he could to serve the interests of the people.

Referring to his defeat at the polls last July, J. J. White stated that while he had been defeated once he was glad to be able to say that he had been elected eight times. He had something to show for the time he had served the town. He had some share in remodelling the town hall, securing the Dods Knitting Mill, the building of the first cement walks in town and the construction of the waterworks system. There were too many men offering for the council who do not intend to give the office the time that it deserves. Mr. White championed the elevated tank as against the electric pump, claiming that the latter was much more expensive and not as satisfactory. He also condemned the recent roadwork on Main St. charging that Reeve Fairbairn and the other members of the R. & B. Committee had piled on gravel and sand, making the roadway two feet higher than the sidewalk. Mr. White announced that he would donate $100 to the Orangeville hospital if Mr. Fairbairn could prove his false statement that he had carried a bottle of whiskey and treated voters while out canvassing. The speaker referred to Coun. Henderson as "the biggest failure in last year's Council" and went hot foot after Engineer King. The latter, he said, was not fit for the job he held, adding that he hardly knew a hydrant from a tie post. If there was an investigation needed anywhere it was at the fire hall.

Deputy-Reeve Arnott thanked the ratepayers for their hearty support during the last six years. The taxes, he admitted, were high, but Orangeville was a nice well-kept town and its affairs were run as cheaply as in most places of this size. Much of the expenditure was uncontrollable and it was impossible for the Council to keep down the tax rate. Mr. Arnott advocated crushed stone for roadmaking and referred at some length to the street lighting system, which he thought furnished a satisfactory service at a very reasonable cost.

At this stage Mayor Campbell spoke briefly from his seat in the hall, furnishing figures to refute Mr. White's assertion that the electric pump was costing the town more money than the elevated tank. He was convinced that the electric pump furnished the best fire protection that the town had ever enjoyed.

Coun. Henderson thanked Mr. White for the certificate of character the latter had given him and then reciprocated by charging that Mr. White had tried to have the town pay for fixing the cement tile moulds for the purpose of making tile for his private use. Mr. Henderson gave reasons for the deficit shown by the financial statement and stated that at the Council meeting held before Mayor Island resigned thirty-four accounts were presented and taken as read despite his protest. It subsequently transpired that these were nearly all for Road & Bridge expenditures. Mr. Henderson stated that he had always served the town diligently, had never used his position to further his own ends and added that much of the bitter opposition he had invariably encountered was due to his stand on the questions of temperance and law reform.

Mr. A. B. Holmes, who got a rousing reception, stated that everything the 1914 Council had done was first-rate until Mr. Marshall had been asked to resign. Council had paid Mr. King $15 for drawing the plan of the Opera improvements. If the plan had been procured in Toronto it would have cost $50. Mr. King designed and erected the arch for the stage for $60. This work would have cost $200 laid down if it had been done in Toronto. Mr. Holmes went into details of the expenditure for the Town Hall improvements and said that the painting had been done for 30 per cent. less than the prices charged by the Master Painters Association. He had been in the Council three years and had decided to retire for a man could not serve in the Council without sacrificing his own interests, but at 3.30 o'clock that afternoon he had been served with a letter written at the instance of Wm. Marshall threatening him with legal proceedings for disqualification in the event of his election. His answer to Mr. Marshall's letter was that he was in the field until the finish. "Marshall has thrown down the gauntlet," declared Mr. Holmes amid ringing cheers, "and I take it up."

Coun. Darraugh made a neat and graceful speech and concluded by announcing his withdrawal in favor of a younger man. He had entered the Council two years ago as a stranger and had nothing but thanks for the kindly way in which he had been used. Mr. Darraugh made a plea to the electors to choose strong, courageous men as their representatives and deprecated the too frequent use of personalities by municipal candidates.

Coun. B. McGuire pointed out that the Council had very little control over the tax rate. The debenture payments this year accounted for upwards of one-third of the total tax rate. There was a steady increase in the Public School and other uncontrollable expenditure and this of course made it more difficult for the Council to keep down the rate. In connection with the charges of boodling and favoritism, Mr. McGuire declared emphatically that he had not received a single cent in any way and pointed out that this was the first time in six or seven years that his newspaper had not received any share of the town printing. The speaker paid his respects to ex-Chief Marshall and P. M. Pattullo, referred to his work in remedying assessment injustices and took credit for his share in the settlement of the Deagle lawsuit in 1912. This settlement he thought had satisfied everybody except the lawyers.

Coun. Johnston felt that he owed an apology to the taxpayers as ill-health had prevented him from attending the Council as regularly as he would otherwise have done. The ratepayers should elect men who would do the business of the town fairly and above board without quarrelling and bickering. Mr. Johnston thought the School Boards were spending too much money and thought they should be required to give a closer account of their expenditure. He would decide later whether he would be a candidate or not.

Coun. Matthews stated that in the two years he had sat at the Council Board he had got along very nicely although there had been instances where there was friction and some feeling. The speaker touched on recent extensions to the waterworks system and pointed out that the maintenance of the system had cost less than for several years previously. If there had been another lumber yard in town he would not have thought of supplying the municipality with lumber. The town had not paid any more—perhaps not as much—for the lumber as it would have cost outside.

H. L. Atkinson spoke in characteristic vein, making a slashing attack on the Town Council and later transferring his attention to the High School Board.

Thos. S. Howson, the last speaker of the night, discussed the high taxes, lax law enforcement and the referendum on the subject of extending the franchise to married women who own property.

At nine o'clock Tuesday night Mayor Campbell and Reeve Fairbairn were the only candidates who had qualified for those offices and they were accordingly elected without opposition. A. B. Holmes and Thos. Henderson are in the field for the deputy-reeveship, which is the only contested office. Of the dozen nominees for councillors Messrs J. E. Thompson, John Patterson and William Robbins were the only men who qualified. This leaves three vacant seats in the Council. A by-election will be necessary to fill these.

Public School Trustees were elected by acclamation as follows :—North Ward—Dr. T. A. Carson and J. E. Smith, the latter for the unexpired portion of F. W. Ritchie's term; East Ward—Geo. H. McLean; South Ward—S. A. McCartney; West Ward—T. J. Robinson. All were members of the 1914 Board except Mr. Smith.

PRIMROSE.

Intended for last week.

Owing to the bad roads the mail has not been making fre[quent] trips.

Mr. John Wilson, sr., who has been ill for several weeks is able to be out again.

The concert held under the auspices of the Women's Guild, of St. James' Church, was a grand success.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. Lindsay, who has been ill, is recovering.

Quite a number of young people from around here attended the party at Camilla last Friday night and report a good time.

GRANGER.

On Wednesday evening, Dec. 2nd, the members of Primrose Methodist Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Fines in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Aberdeen (nee Miss Gertie Fines), who has, for several years filled the position of organist in the Church. During the evening the following address was read by Mr. Small, and at the proper time Messrs. O. Scott and J. Lindsay entered the room bearing a beautiful green plush couch.

The following was the address read by Mr. Small:—

Primrose, Dec. 23, 1914.

To Mrs. John Aberdeen.

Dear Associate and Co-laborer in Church Work,—

We, the members and adherents of Primrose, Methodist Church, with your many friends in extend to you our best congratulations on assuming new responsibilities in the changed relationship in life. In the years you have loyally supported in our church work, your presence from week to week was an evident of the very warm interest you had in church work, the charm you gave as an active worker was ever assurance of pleasure and success; example you have set is well worthy of imitation.

It is with pleasure and delight that we desire that you should receive this gift from our hands accept it in the spirit in which it is given. We sincerely hope the cup of your joy may constantly be filled.

Signed on behalf of the congregation.

Morris Small
O. Scott.

Mr. Aberdeen then said a few words in response, after which addresses were given by Messrs. Scott, F. Therault and G. McKenzie. Music was furnished by Miss Elma Halbert and B. Yool and L. Halbert. The remainder of the evening was spent in games and music.

MELVILLE CROSS.

Miss McCartney and her pupils gave a delightful concert in the schoolhouse on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 22nd. The school was nicely and prettily decorated for the occasion. The pupils furnished quite an enjoyable programme. There was great excitement among the little folk when Station Agent Nicholl walked in with a telegram from Santa Claus, who announced that he was about to pay the school a visit with candies and other Christmas gifts for the children. The eager look for visitor arrived in due time and made a generous distribution of the good things that delighted the boys and girls. During the afternoon prizes were awarded several of the pupils for attendance and proficiency in their work. The prize for the best record in spelling was awarded to Master Clifford Delaney and the prize for regular attendance and good conduct went to Miss Lorna Corbitt. Miss McCartney is given excellent satisfaction as teacher and we hope that our section will be continue to enjoy the benefit of her services.

CALEDON.

The Caledon Dramatic Club presented their new Irish melodrama "Shaun Aroon" in the Town Hall here on Christmas night, and notwithstanding that the mercury registered 14 degrees below zero the hall was taxed to its capacity. The actors all took their parts in a manner which showed talent and training and brought credit to themselves and also brought out the various humor and pathos for which the play is justly famous. We wish the boys success in their future appearances.

Owing to the illness of one of the members of the Boustelle Dramatic Club and other unfortunate circumstances they were unable to fulfil their engagement at Erin on Tuesday night, but we understand that the sick are improving and everything will be "o.k." here on New Year's night. The Erin engagement has been postponed till Jan. 15th.

Rev. A. Wilson, of Lisle, conducted anniversary services here last Sunday and was highly appreciated by the large congregations at both services. Mr. Wilson was pastor here about 20 years ago and was warmly greeted by many old friends.

There was an unusually large crowd gathered here at the nomination meeting on Monday and was the scene of some very exciting debate. However, the members of last year's council all gave a good account of themselves and have been returned by acclamation.

Miss Jennie Morrison, of Lucknow, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Geo. Hazard, at present. Miss Morrison is on her way to visit her other sister, Mrs. (Rev.) E. R. Black, of Miami, Florida.

Do not miss J. D. Torrie's sale of Suits and Overcoats.

A handsome gift that never fails to . . . gratify.

A useful gift that's always sure to satisfy.

Primrose, Dec. 23, 1914.

To Mrs. John Aberdeen. LLL LL

To Mrs. John Aberdeen.

Dear Associate and Co-laborer in Church Work

We, the members and adherents of Primrose Methodist Church, join with your many friends in extending to you our best congratulations in assuming new responsibilities in a changed relationship in life. In past years you have loyally supported us in our church work, your presence from week to week was an evidence of the very warm interest you had in church work, the charm you gave us as an active worker was ever the assurance of pleasure and success; the example you have set is well worthy of imitation.

It is with pleasure and delight that we desire that you should receive this gift from our hands and accept it in the spirit in which it is given. We sincerely hope that the cup of your joy may constantly be filled.

Signed on behalf of the congregation

Morris Small
O. Scott.

Mr Aberdeen then said a few words in response, after which short addresses were given by Messrs. J. Scott, F. Theriault and G. McKenzie. Music was furnished by Misses Elma Halbert and B. Vool and Mr. L. Halbert. The remainder of the evening was spent in games and music.

MELVILLE CROSS.

Miss McCartney and her pupils gave a delightful concert in the schoolhouse on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 22nd. The school was neatly and prettily decorated for the occasion. The pupils furnished quite an enjoyable programme. There was great excitement among the little folk when Station Agent Nichols walked in with a telegram from Santa Claus, who announced that he was about to pay the school a visit with candies and other Christmas gifts for the children. The eagerly looked for visitor arrived in due time and made a generous distribution of the good things that delight the boys and girls. During the afternoon prizes were awarded several of the pupils for attendance and proficiency in their work. The prize for the best record in spelling was awarded to Master Clifford Delaney and the prize for regular attendance and good conduct went to Miss Lorna Corbitt. Miss McCartney is giving excellent satisfaction as teacher and we hope that our section will long continue to enjoy the benefit of her services.

CALEDON.

The Caledon Dramatic Club presented their new Irish melodrama "Shaun Aroon" in the Town Hall here on Christmas night, and notwithstanding that the mercury registered 11 degrees below zero the hall was taxed to its capacity. The actors all took their parts in a manner which showed talent and training and brought credit to themselves and also brought out the wit, humor and pathos for which this play is justly famous. We wish them success in their future appearances.

Owing to the illness of one of the members of the Bonstelle Dramatic Club and other unfortunate circumstances they were unable to fulfil their engagement at Erin on Tuesday night, but we understand that the sick are improving and everything will be "O.K." here on New Year's night. The Erin engagement has been postponed till Jan. 15th.

Rev. A. Wilson of Lisle, conducted anniversary services here last Sunday and was highly appreciated by the large congregations at both services. Mr. Wilson was pastor here about 20 years ago and was warmly greeted by many old friends.

There was an unusually large crowd gathered here at the nomination meeting on Monday and was the scene of some very exciting incidents. However, the members of last year's council all gave a good account of themselves and have been returned by acclamation.

Miss Jennie Morrison, of Lucknow, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Geo. Hillyard, at present. Miss Morrison is on her way to visit her other sister, Mrs. (Rev.) E. R. Black, of Miami, Florida.

Do not miss J. D. Torrie's special of Suits and Overcoats.

Germany in the Wrong

(New York Times)

To the Editor of New York Times —I have waited in vain till now for a real German to speak to the world. There have been a great number of missives from so-called representatives of my people who have been befogging the issue with all kinds of bigoted rot. I am a German by birth and have lived many years in the Fatherland, and know the spirit of the German people. The great majority of them are peace-loving. They despise militarism and imperialism. The war party does not represent them. It represents only a large number of fat politicians and military supply contractors. The present war was "Made in Germany" by the Kaiser, aided by the war party.

We Germans who have thought deeply about the European holocaust know and feel that we are in the wrong. We shudder at the crimes committed in the name of the German people by the war clique. We shudder to think of the odium our people must live down—of the explanation they will have to give shamefacedly to posterity. Why don't German Americans admit that they are wrong in the war? They know it, Germany knows it, the world knows it, and yet no German has had the courage to rise up and tell the world the truth.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS.

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

THE BACHELOR TAX.

I loved a girl that time shall no'er
From my fond memory blot her,
But should I pay out cash because
The other fellow got her?
—New York Times.

He's got the mash, you've got the cash,
Kick all you like, dod rot it!
They're going to make you pay the tax
Because he hasn't got it.
—Cleveland News.

Of all the things the Lord detests,
The worst one is a quitter.
It's up to you to pay the tax
Because you let him git her.
—Springfield Union.

Be calm, old bach, get not so warm.
Don't sputter sparks and lava;
If you should ask that fellow now
Perhaps he'd let you have her.
—Yonkers Statesman.

Handicapped.

Mother (severely)—Bobbie, why didn't you take off your cap when Mrs. Jones called?

Bobby—Aw, how could I? I had a piece of custard pie in it.—Chicago News.

A Fleeting Observation.

He was a college professor, greatly beloved because of his kind heart, but with the common scholastic failing of being very absentminded. He visited his married niece and listened to her praise of her first born. When she paused for breath the professor felt that he must say something.

"Can the little fellow walk?" he asked, with every appearance of interest.

"Walk!" cried the mother indignantly. "Why, he's been walking now for five months."

"Dear me!" exclaimed the professor, again relapsing into abstraction. "What a long way he must have gone!"—New York Globe.

How It Happened.

"How did the accident happen?" asked the sympathetic friend.

"Well, I'll tell you," replied the man on crutches. "The automobile was going pretty fast, and all of a sudden we struck a wet place on the asphalt and there was a noise, and the doctor said, 'He'll be able to be around in about four weeks.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Family Traits.

"If there's anything I enjoy," said Mr. Biggins, "it's roaming around in outing clothes like a boy scout in the afternoon and learning the new dances in the evening."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "isn't it remarkable how many parents nowadays take after their children!"—Washington Star.

Farming Literature.

"The agricultural department issues some very interesting and helpful bulletins."

"Anything about handling summer boarders?" inquired Farmer Whiffletree. "Mine gimme a lot of trouble last year."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

What Ails Jones.

Knicker—What is the matter with Jones?

Bocker—If he takes a vacation they wonder how he can afford to, and if he doesn't they wonder if his accounts are straight.—Judge.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Hardening of the Arteries.

"Arteriosclerosis no longer holds any terrors," said Dr. Julius Pick of Germany. "This 'premature old age' is easily treated. The method I have followed with success—and I have cured thousands—is to have the patient inhale air containing emanations of radium and to drink water containing similar emanations. I prepare this air by passing oxygen over a preparation of radium. By inhalation the radium emanation enters the lungs and thence the arterial system, whence it finally reaches the blood in the veins. Through the means of the drinking water the radium emanation gets into the stomach and the intestines, being thence absorbed by the venous system. That is the main feature of the treatment.

"While arteriosclerosis is the disease of the day in most countries, I believe it is more prevalent in the United States than elsewhere because of the speed with which everything is done over here and the consequent neglect of certain precautions. There is little reason to apprehend hardening of the arteries prematurely if one practices this rule: Be moderate in eating and drinking, rest after daily work to prevent injuring the nervous system and be careful of gout, whether inherited or acquired. Do not forget to breathe accurately, for proper breathing is as essential to health as proper feeding."

"DON'TS" FOR "TOMMIES."

Rules On Active Service Are Many and Very Strict.

On active service the British soldier finds himself surrounded by many pitfalls. Discipline in the army is necessarily strict in time of peace, but when the war bugles begin to blare it becomes ten times more strict, and what appear to the ordinary man as perfectly innocent actions become very grave offences against military law. For instance, one would think that a soldier suffering from the "blues" or afflicted with the "hump" would be at liberty to disseminate his gloom among his mates; but that is not so. Should he do so he is liable to prompt court-martial and long imprisonment for creating unnecessary despondency in the ranks. "Keep smiling" must ever be the watchword of the soldier on active service.

It seems a noble thing indeed for a soldier to rush from the ranks under fire and pick up a wounded comrade who has fallen by the way, and in such cases the average citizen would think a Victoria Cross well earned. Military law takes a different view of the matter, and instead of the V. C. awards the dreaded "D. C." (drumhead court-martial), for no soldier must leave the ranks without permission of his officers, and "attending to wounded" is one of the excuses specially mentioned in the War Office manual as being inadmissible in cases of this kind.

The lot of the soldier taken prisoner by the enemy is not a happy one, but his capture is only the beginning of his troubles. In due course he will have to account to his own side for his misfortune, and if he cannot show that his capture was in no way due to carelessness on his part he will have to suffer a heavy penalty.

Nor is that all. It may be that in the course of his captivity an excellent chance of escape presents itself. Should he fail to make use of it, court-martial and punishment awaits him if the officers of his regiment get to know of his omission. There are still soldiers in the army, called up with the reserves, who have unpleasant recollections of punishment for these offences in South Africa, though they plead that they were not really careless and did not know of the way of escape at hand.

"Sleeping on his post" is one of the most serious offences against military law, and in aggravated cases death is a penalty that may be awarded. In the South African War sentenced ranged from two to seven years' imprisonment. Yet this is an offence for which many men in the stress of war cannot morally be held responsible. It may happen that after long days of forced marching, followed by sleepless nights, a soldier succumbs to sheer exhaustion when at a post of danger. No matter what his physical state may have been, there is no palliation of his offence, because the knowledge that the safety of his comrades depends on his wakefulness is held to be sufficient to drive slumber from the eyes of the most weary soldier who ever paced at his post.

"Hoist With His Own Petard."

The one sort of metaphor that ought not to get mixed in a history of the war is a military metaphor. However, when histories of the war begin to appear a fortnight after the war begins either the writer or the printer has to set down much in haste. That no doubt explains why we read in one of these headlong histories that Germany at a certain point of her diplomatic career "found herself hoisted on her own petard." The writer (or printer) must have thought that a petard was a sort of elevator. Shakespeare, who coined the immortal phrase, was amused by the idea of the military engineer, "hoist with his own petard"—that is, blown up with his own bomb. A petard was a sort of bomb used for such work as blowing in gates or doors.

Neuralgia of the Heart

Mr. James G. Clark, Fosterville, York County, N.B., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from what the doctors said was neuralgia of the heart. The pain started in the back of the neck and worked down into the region of the heart. Though I had taken a lot of medicine of one kind and another, I could not get anything to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"When I began this treatment I could not rest in bed, except by sitting upright, on account of the dreadful pains about the heart and the quick, loud beating. The change which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has made in my condition is wonderful. It has entirely overcome these symptoms, and is making me strong and well. If this statement will help to relieve the suffering of others, you are at liberty to use it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a true tonic and the greatest of nerve restoratives. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

COULD KNOT THE EQUATOR.

Unexpected Reply From Small Boy Upsets Dignified School Inspector.

The class was at the moment engaged in geography. That is to say, about thirty small boys sat in a state of utter boredom while a little man stood up in front of a map and made thin remarks through a ragged mustache about unimportant facts.

In these circumstances the unexpected entrance of the inspector was almost in the nature of a relief to the weary youngsters.

"Now, my little man," said the inspector in that patronizing tone really learned people always adopt when speaking to children, "can you tell me what the equator is?"

"Yes, sir," said Tommy Stiles, seeing that he was being addressed. "It is an imaginary line drawn round the world."

"Quite right, my little fellow. Now, let us see whether you really understand what that means. Could you, do you think, tie a knot in the equator?"

"Yes, I could, sir!"

"Could you, indeed?" answered the learned one in fine scorn. "And what sort of a knot, now?"

"An imaginary knot, sir."—London Answers.

Theoretical Activity.

"Lady," said Plodding Pete, "have you any wood you want chopped?"

"Yes, indeed!"

"How much?"

"There's about half a cord that you can start on."

"Thanky, ma'am. Could you lend me a lead pencil and a piece of paper?"

"Don't you want an ax?"

"No. I'm representin' the Association of Industrious Inspectors. The secretary wants me to turn in a report on how much woodchoppin' there is to be done in this township. It'll make a right interestin' paper to read at our next meetin', an' mebbe we can think up some way o' gettin' it chopped."—Washington Star.

Gone, but Not Forgotten.

William had not been in the other world long when George wooed and won the promise of his widow.

"Do you love me, sweetheart?" asked George.

"Yes, dear," cooed the widow.

"Better than anybody on earth?" persisted he, after the foolish manner of lovers.

"Yes," she answered, "better than any one on earth; but, George, don't ask me about heaven."—Judge.

The First Farewell.

"So you are going to make another tour?"

"Yes," replied the actor.

"But you advertised your previous engagement as a farewell occasion."

"It was one. We said goodby to nearly a thousand dollars."—Washington Star.

Paw Knows Everything.

Willie—Paw, why are there no marriages in heaven?

Paw—So the bachelors won't be able to give the other fellows the laugh, my son.

Maw—Willie, you go to bed.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Her Way.

"Did you see where a judge in New Jersey decided that a wife cannot sue for wages?"

"Any fool knows that who has a wife. She doesn't sue for wages. She just takes 'em."—Baltimore American.

Devoted, but Cautious.

"Billson yonder tells me he trusts his wife implicitly and absolutely, but"—

"Well?"

"Well, I notice he carries his change and his fishhooks loose in the same pocket."—Judge.

Extract From the Minutes.

All were in favor of the motion.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Distinguished Affliction.

"The doctor says I have incipient malaria."

"Dear me! What kind of malaria is that?"

"My good woman, it's the worst kind going."—Baltimore American.

First Aid.

"And what have you done to keep the chicken cool, Katie?" asked the lady of the house.

"Taken all the feathers off it, ma'am," was the surprising reply.—Yonkers Statesman.

Resented.

"What are your political convictions?" said the inquisitive person.

"There's no good getting personal," replied the boss. "I have never even been tried, much less convicted."—Washington Star.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Tess—I thought you told me you didn't take any interest in the yacht races?

Jess—But that was before I thought I would have a yachting costume.—Judge.

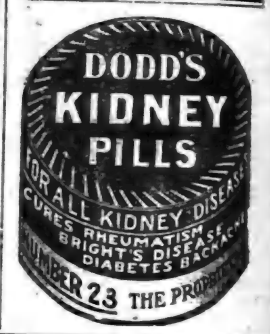
JOHN A. McCULLOCH.



The death of John A. McCulloch, hardware merchant, on Sunday morning, was not unexpected and came as a happy relief to one who has borne the affliction of poor health most patiently for a long time. About 4 years ago Mr. McCulloch suffered a severe attack of pneumonia, which left him a physical wreck. Although he was able to be at his place of business up to three weeks ago, his frailty was only too well known. For the last week or so he has been confined to his room, and early Sunday morning death peacefully and calmly ended all suffering. Mr. McCulloch was born in Chincousy township 58 years ago and after getting a teacher's certificate taught school for a number of years. About 30 years ago he took a position in a hardware store which he held until his removal to Grand Valley about fourteen years ago. His interests centred solely in his personal affairs and in Knox church of which he was a member of the Session and an active officer of the Sabbath School for a long time. He lived a life consistent with his profession, quiet, modest, honourable and faithful. His widow, and one daughter, Miss Edna; two brothers, William B., of Brampton, and Robert, on the homestead; and two sisters, Mrs. James Lyons, of Brampton, and Mrs. R. S. Fleming, of Oxford County, survive. His aged mother died three weeks previously. The funeral service was held at the family residence Monday night, the remains being taken to Brampton on Tuesday's morning train for interment in the family plot.—Star & Vidette.

She afterwards married the late William Noble, a former school teacher in Caledon, who predeceased her about ten years and who lived in Brampton for a time. Of three sons by the first marriage, Miles and William Bacon are living in the Canadian West and the youngest son, Ben, died in the West some years ago.—Peel Conservator.

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, JAN. 27th. 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

MADAME M. CHARBONNEAU

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest stomach tonic in the world and will always cure Indigestion, Sour Stomach, "Heartburn", Dyspepsia and other Stomach Troubles.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Cured of Piles and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Abram Buhr, Herbert, Bask., writes:—"I want to say that I was troubled with eczema and piles and suffered greatly from the itching, burning sensations caused by these annoying ailments. I sent for a free sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I bought three boxes more, and after using same was cured of both eczema and piles."

This is the kind of letters we receive daily from people who have been cured of these distressing skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. No matter how skeptical you might be, you could not read these letters for many days without concluding that Dr. Chase's Ointment is undoubtedly the most prompt relief and certain cure for these ailments.

If you have doubts send for a free sample box and be convinced. It was by use of a free sample that Mr. Buhr was convinced of the merits of this treatment. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Burning Feet.

Burning in the soles of the feet is a very unpleasant sensation, often very painful, sometimes real agony. To allay the sensation bathe the feet (soak them) in cold water for a few minutes several times a day, wipe dry and bathe with a mixture of alcohol and spirits of camphor (equal portions of each). Wear white cotton stockings, fresh ones every day. The round thread in lisle stockings frets the skin and keeps the feet heated and uncomfortable. Silk hose will keep the feet overheated almost as much as lisle does.

COLOR OF ARMY HORSES.

A Move to Have All White or Gray Mounts Discarded.

The color line is being drawn by the army in the purchase of horses. It has not been drawn in favor of white or light horses, but against them, and in favor of sorrels, browns, bays and even blacks. Because of their visibility white and gray horses are not considered desirable for mounts. In the field they are a mark for sharpshooters, and on this account the quartermaster corps has stopped purchasing light colored horses. Officers are permitted to purchase gray horses if they care to take the chances of being shot in the event that they are on the firing line, but the inspector general's department has condemned the general use of gray horses in the army.

This, however, does not prevent many of the officers of the army from riding gray horses, and they have refused to draw the color line. Some of the members of the general staff are advocating the issuance of a general order prohibiting the use of gray or light colored horses in the army, as they claim that with even a few officers on light colored mounts the enemy will be able to locate a regiment or a company which might be on scout duty. The question whether a gray horse is officially regarded as a suitable mount for an officer has been the subject of lively controversy at at least one army post.—Army and Navy Journal.

HYDRO RATES ARE CUT.

The Saving Thereby to Customers of Municipalities is Estimated at $200,000.

Further reductions in Hydro-Electric rates throughout Ontario will save the customers of the municipalities, it is estimated, $200,000 per annum.

In one of the most important statements yet issued, the Ontario Commission shows that the municipalities on an investment of $11,000,000, after providing for interest on sinking funds, debentures, operating cost, maintenance of plant, administration, etc., have a surplus of more than $1,000,000.

Toronto is left out of the list of reductions, "because they did not carry out the Board's order before, and there is no use giving them new ones," stated Sir Adam Beck. "Conditions warrant a further reduction this year," he said.

The total power consumption under the Hydro-Electric scheme is 79,000 horsepower, of which Toronto use 27,000.

Last year when previous reductions were made 40 municipalities were using the power, three months ago 72 were operating, and before January 1st, 90 will be doing business.

By this year's decision 55 municipalities receive a reduction of from 10 to 20 per cent., and 14 municipalities receive a 10 per cent. reduction.

Port Arthur's reduction in rates is 25 per cent., Georgetown and New Hamburg, 20 per cent. each; Ottawa, London, Port Arthur and St. Thomas obtain the lowest rates. The principal reduction has been made in the floor space charge, which has been reduced from 1 to 3 cents per 100 square feet, with a minimum of 1,000 and a maximum of 3,000 square feet.

A second rate has been added for domestic consumers to permit of the general use of cooking and other electrical applicances in the homes. This rate is 50 per cent. of the initial rate.

Another important feature is that the reduction for other than lighting purposes will be 50 per cent. in the case of the small house on the current in excess of 40 kilowatt, and the large house where the current is in excess of 100 kilowatts.

The recommended lighting rates were:—For incorporated villages, police villages, and rural municipalities, 3 cents per 100 square feet of floor area per month; minimum floor area charge for 1,200 square feet; maximum floor area charge for 3,000 square feet. For urban districts outside the municipalities, 3 cents per 100 square feet of floor area; minimum floor area charges per month for 1,500 square feet; maximum floor area charge for 3,000 square feet. For cities and towns, 3 cents per 100 square feet of floor area per month; minimum floor area charge for 1,000 square feet; maximum floor area charge for 3,000 sq. feet.

HORSLEY—LUDLOW.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Luke's church, Rosemont, at 11 o'clock a.m. on Dec. 16th, when Mary A. F. E. I. Ludlow, eldest daighter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ludlow, was united in marriage to Edgar Ross Horsley, of Shelburne, Rev. G. L. Gray, pastor of the church, performing the ceremony. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father and was daintily gowned in ivory silk, trimmed with pearls and overlace, and wore a gold watch and chain, the gift of her uncle, Mr. J. Stephens. Her veil was arranged in cap effect with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of orchids, carnations and roses. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Pearl Ludlow, and the groom by his brother, Albert Horsley. Franklin Crosbie, of Everett, cousin of the bride, played Lohengrin's wedding march. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, Pleasant Valley, where a dainty breakfast was served. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of mink furs. The happy couple left for Brampton and Toronto, amid showers of confetti and good wishes. The bride's travelling suit was of seal brown velvet with a plush hat and white plume. On their return they will reside near Shelburne.—Free Press.

THE SCHOOLS RESPONSIBLE

For Increase in Taxes in Mono Township

Councillor Morton Discusses Municipal Affairs in an Open Letter

Glencross, Dec. 29, 1914.

Editor of The Banner.

Dear Sir,—

Will you please give me space in the columns of your paper to say a few words to the ratepayers of the township of Mono, who had not the opportunity of hearing the business of the township discussed on Monday last.

Some ratepayers are dissatisfied because of the gradual increase in their taxes. To these I wish to say that there is more money required for school purposes each year. To prove the truth of this statement I will refer to the balance sheet for 1907, which shows that the expenditure for schools at that time was $8342.43. The statement for 1914 shows an expenditure on schools of $13,087.73, which means an increase of $4745.30 in the last seven years. This should be conclusive proof as to the reason why the taxes are going up. Then why blame the Council? The increase in school taxes, I might add, is due largely to the increase in the salaries of teachers and should not be blamed on anybody.

I wish to also refer to our bridge work. This year's council built an arch bridge of stone and cement on the Centre Road, which is a permanent structure and well worth the money it cost. I might also say that at the beginning of 1913 there was a debenture debt of $17,534.66 against the township to be paid off in annual instalments of $1252.44. This, I claim, along with the constant increase in the school taxes will keep the wisest council you can select busy guessing to keep your taxes from increasing still further. I may also say that in my opinion the railways are not paying one-half enough taxes. This is a matter that should receive the attention of the people. I might also say that the money that is collected in license fees from auto owners should be expended on the roads in the district where the autoists live, and should not be expended in roads into the big cities as is the case at present. I contend that we should not have to build roads in other places nor for foreign traffic. This, to my mind, is what we are doing under existing conditions.

To show the ratepayers just how careful and economical the 1914 Council has been, it might not be amiss to compare the expenditures by the Commissioners last and this year. The figures are as follows:—

Marshall	$393.32
Moffitt	317.10
Bowers	281.38
Little	299.53
Henry	415.05
	$1706.40

1914.
Marshall	$216.05
Parks	258.65
Bowers	226.10
Thompson	203.29
Morton	203.39
	$1137.38

A saving of $519.02 is pretty good evidence that the council has done what it could to keep the taxes from increasing.

I will now conclude by stating that I am in the field again and asking the ratepayers for their votes and influence in the event of an election. I would respectfully ask one and all to accept this instead of a personal canvass, as it will be impossible for me to call on all the ratepayers of the township in the short time at my disposal.

Thanking every person for the hearty support I received in past elections and wishing all a happy and prosperous New Year and many returns of the season, I am

Your Obedient Servant,
JAS. A. MORTON.

GOT SIX MONTHS

George Wellar Got Stiff Sentence for Writing Threatening Letter

Last week Judge McGibbon, of Brampton, sentenced George Wellar, a Toronto carpenter, to six months imprisonment in Kingston penitentiary on a charge of attempting to extort money by means of threatening letters. Wellar was arrested at Caledon East some weeks ago on a charge of sending Black Hand letters to Postmaster W. A. Cranston, of that village. For some weeks Cranston had been receiving threatening letters. The first one demanded that a sum of $500 be placed in a tin box in a wood pile on a certain date. When no attention was paid to this a second letter was sent, in which Wellar demanded an additional sum of $250.

False Loyalty

To the Editor:

It has been said that every man should be as brick in a wall of defense for his country. That is true loyalty and every one owes that much to the country that nurtures and protects him. But is a man really loyal who weakens that wall of defense by poisoning himself with intoxicants so that at best he can be only a rotten brick and probably he leaves behind him a race of rotten bricks, a burden instead of a help in time of need. Yet that is what thousands have done and what thousands are doing.

What is my authority for such a statement? I answer Government Commissions in almost every civilized country, and reports of eminent scientists who have collected the histories of thousands of families. Besides that any one with eyes can see for himself that it is correct.

The present war has been called a teetotal war. Russia and Norway have completely abolished the use of intoxicating beverages and England, France and Germany have partly done so. That should convince any one that alcohol in any form is a danger to the safety of the nation.

We talk of the destruction of life by war but there are literally hundreds killed by drink for every one killed in war. The "Committee of Fifty" computed that in the United States there are as many killed every four years by drink as were killed during the four years of the Spanish war. Two liquor journals admit the correctness of the conclusions of Mr. Phelps who says that intoxicating liquors cause the death of 66,000 every year in the United States. No wonder that the German Emperor taught his soldiers that the sober nations would have the advantage in future battles both of peace and war. Every man who does not do all he can to destroy this greatest enemy of our country may talk loyalty but he is not loyal.

Mrs. Catherine Graham

An old resident of Caledon passed away on Wednesday, December 23rd, at her home, lot 10, concession 5, east, Caledon, in the person of Mrs. Catherine Graham, widow of the late John Graham, who died about 65 years ago. The deceased had been ailing some months but was called away rather suddenly at the last. The late Mrs. Graham, who was a daughter of the late Peter Ferguson, was born near Caledon East on the farm on which her brother, Arch. Ferguson, now lives. She was in her 71st year and had resided on the farm where she died, since her marriage agout 50 years ago. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved family, namely Peter and Annie at home, and Mrs. Murdock, near Caledon East, also for her granddaughter, Rita Heard, who has lived with her since the death of her mother some years ago. She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. R. Graham, Caulfield, and two brothers, Arch. and Duncan Ferguson, of Caledon. The deceased was a member of St. Andrew's Church, the remains were conveyed there and services conducted by Rev. W. E. Wallace, assisted by Rev. Hugh Matheson, a former pastor. The pallbearers were, John Baxter, Ben. Graham, Rody Graham, John Wilson, James Graham and Thomas Graham. Deep sympathy is felt for the sorrowing friends, who did all that was in their power to comfort her. Her cheerfulness and resignation bore testimony to her trust in God's will, and will make an impress on the minds of the many friends who visited her in her last illness.

Playgoers, who hark back to the days of comic opera at its best, and the younger generation, who have heard so much about them but have never seen them, will welcome the announcement that De Wolf Hopper and the Gilbert Sullivan Festival Company are to play an engagement for an entire week at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, starting next Monday night.

Among the well known singers who participate in these revivals are De Wolf Hopper, Idelle Patterson, Arthur Cunningham, Arthur Aldridge, Gladys Caldwell, Herbert Waterous, John Willard, Herbert Cripps, Jayne Herbert, Maude Mordaunt, Alice McCombs and Anabel Jourdan.

The success which came to William A. Brady when he revived "The Mikado" was so pronounced that he determined the time was ripe for other Gilbert and Sullivan revivals, and to that end he added to the repertoire the chief productions of Gilbert and Sullivan. In each and every case not only was managerial judgment upheld, but the public answered with such patronage that completely overshadowed the success made when the same operas were originally produced a little over a third of a century ago.

In making these revivals, it has been the aim of the producer to adhere strictly to all stage traditions which surrounded the management of the Savoy Theatre, London, where these operas were originally produced, and to that end all the business found in the original prompt books, from which the present revivals were rehearsed, have been carried out.

The repertoire for the week will be as follows:—Monday and Saturday evening and Thursday matinee, "The Mikado"; Tuesday evening and Saturday matinee, a grand double bill consisting of "Trial by Jury" and "The Sorcerer"; Wednesday and Friday evenings, "Iolanthe" and Thursday evening only, "Pirates of Penzance."

Daughters of the Empire

Lord Dufferin Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire wish to thank the following for their donations, which were both acceptable and serviceable:—Mrs. C. R. McKeown, a goose; Mr. John McKim, bag of onions; W. C.T.U., a back rest, bedside table and tray for use in their Ward; Mrs. Hulse, Christmas cake; Mrs. Alex. Johnston, a tablecloth; Mrs. W. G. Hyland, one dozen table napkins; Messrs. Ingram & Bell, Toronto, white enamel stool for operating room.

A meeting of the Daughters of the Empire will be held at the residence of Mrs. Dahl on Friday afternoon, Jan. 5th, at 3 o'clock. It is important that as many of the members as possible be present at this meeting, as the election of the officers for the ensuing year will take place.

Fleming-Black

A very pretty event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Fleming, Orton, on Wednesday, December 23rd, when their daughter, Ethel Victoria, was united in marriage to Mr. Ernest Black, of Orton, by Rev. W. M. Morris, of Orangeville. Promptly at 3 o'clock the bridal couple entered the parlor to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Ben. Robinson, sister of the bride, and took their places under a beautiful evergreen arch trimmed with white ribbon, flowers and three wedding bells. The bride was given away by her father and was gowned in peach colored satin de chene trimmed with pearls and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and smilax. Little Cora Robinson, niece of the bride, made a charming flower girl and carried a basket of pink carnations, smilax and maidenhair fern. During the signing of the register, Cora and Edna Robinson, nieces of the bride, sang "Just One Sweetheart for Me." After the ceremony and the usual congratulations from the guests, all repaired to the dining room where a dainty wedding repast was served. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of black Persian lamb furs, to the organist a pearl brooch and to the flower girl a signet ring. Mr. and Mrs. Black took the evening train for Toronto and other points, the bride travelling in navy blue brocbe silk with black hat and white ospreys. The display of presents to the bride was exceedingly attractive and costly. Both bride and groom are popular in the community and a host of good wishes are theirs. On their return they will reside on the 11th line, East Garafraxa.

Rodgers-King

A very quiet wedding took place at the Manse in Hillsburg on Wednesday, Dec. 23rd, when Miss Hannah May King, of Laurel, became the bride of Mr. Thomas J. Rodgers, of Hillsburg, the Rev. R. S. Scott officiating. The young couple will reside in Hillsburg and their many friends and acquaintances unite in wishing them much joy and happiness.

Harvey—Durkin

There took place in Regina on Wednesday, Dec. 23rd, the marriage of Miss Evelyn Durkin, daughter of Mr. Francis Durkin, of Bowling Green, and Mr. John Harvey, of the Audit Staff of the Saskatchewan Government. The Rev. Murdock McKinnon was the officiating clergyman. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Harvey left on a trip to Winnipeg, the bride travelling in a Saxon-blue whipcord dress with Hudson seal coat and small black hat with white aigrettes. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Harvey will take up their residence in Regina.

Union Relief Committee

The members of the Union Relief Committee, organized a short time ago for the purpose of looking after local cases of distress, wish to thank the citizens of the town for their hearty and generous response to the appeal for donations to assist them in their work. As a result of the contributions received, the Committee was able to send Christmas baskets to upwards of twenty families. In giving the names of the officers of the Committee in a recent issue, The Banner omitted to state the name of the Vice-President. This office is capably filled by Mrs. Chas. King, Zina St.

Methodist S. S. Entertainment

Orangeville Methodist Sunday School will hold its annual entertainment in the Opera House on Friday evening, Jan. 8th. One of the important features of the program will be a Cantata entitled "A Visit to Grandpa and Grandma." This Cantata is highly spoken of and has been a great success wherever it has been presented.

Wiarton Has Strong Team

Norman Johnston, the net guardian of last year's Orillia junior champions, is now living in Wiarton, and will play with that team this winter. E. Matheson, who last year played with Owen Sound, is also in Wiarton, while Earl Miers has returned to his home town, and will play with the Bruce Peninsula boys this winter. They should have a strong team.

Harry James Relief Fund

Citizens of Ottawa have started a Relief Fund in behalf of the family of the late Harry James, whose death was reported in last week's BANNER. James died from tuberculosis, and as he was unable to work during his lengthy illness his widow and four sons, the oldest of whom is fifteen years, were left unprovided for at the time of his death. James played with the Dufferins in 1887, when the Green Shirts won the intermediate championship of Ontario. A number of the dead athlete's teammates and admirers are still living in Orangeville and they are planning to make a contribution to the Fund. Any persons who wish to contribute are invited to hand their contributions to Dr. T. H. Henry or leave them at THE BANNER Office.

Loves the Chief, so Stole His Picture

Some person in Owen Sound evidently has a very deep and lasting affection for the new chief of police, Mr. Foster, but at the same time is either afraid or too bashful to come out openly and ask for a likeness of the stalwart chief to keep for his own.

As an alternative the would-be possessor of a representation of the handsome features of the first constable simply took one without the trouble of asking for it and some time on Tuesday night removed one, with a very handsome frame along with it, from the show-case in front of the Craig Studio. In the taking the glass of the case was badly smashed where a hand had evidently been punched through it, and the owner of the frame, is wishing that the enraptured friends had taken the trouble to ask for the picture instead of making off with it so unceremoniously.—Owen Sound Sun.

WILLIAM E. O'BRIEN IS DEAD.

Was One of the "Noble Thirteen."

Led Opposition to the Jesuit Estates Act in 1889—Commanded Regiment in North-West Rebellion.

In his 84th year, Lieut.-Col. W. E. O'Brien died at his home, "The Woods," Shanty Bay, last week. He was one of the "Noble Thirteen" who stood up against the influence that was brought to bear in 1889 to prevent the disallowance of Mercier's Jesuit grant in Quebec. In 1896, when representing Muskoka, he opposed the Tupper coercion program.

Col. O'Brien was the eldest son of Co. E. T. O'Brien, a retired naval and military officer, who had been placed in charge of the first settlement at Barrie and Shanty Bay on Lake Simcoe. He was born at Thornhill on March 10, 1831, and lived practically all his life at "The Woods," Shanty Bay. Col. O'Brien was educated at Upper Canada College, and afterwards read law, and was admitted to the Bar in 1864, but never practised his profession. For some years he edited The Colonist, a Toronto newspaper, but for over 40 years he had lived the quiet life of a country gentleman-farmer.

He was largely instrumental in raising the Thirty-fifth Regiment known as the Simcoe Foresters, which he commanded during the North-west rebellion in 1885. Col. O'Brien was out also on active service during the Fenian Raid in 1866.

He married in 1864 Elizabeth, the eldest daughter of the late Col. R. R. Loring, of London, Ontario. Mr. Henry O'Brien, H.C., of Toronto, is a brother, as was also the late Lucius R. O'Brien, a well-known artist.

Lieut. Col. O'Brien on March 26, 1889, introduces in the Dominion House, a resolution for the disallowance of the Jesuit Estates Act, as follows :—

"That an address be presented to the Governor-General setting forth that this house regards the power of disallowing the acts of legislation of the Legislative Assemblies of the Province of Quebec vested in his Excellency in Council as a prerogative essential to the existence of the Dominion, that this great power, while it should never be wantonly exercised, should be fearlessly used for the protection of the fundamental principles of the constitution and for the safeguarding the general interests of the people; that in the opinion of this House the passage by the Legislature of the Province of Quebec of an act entitled 'An act respecting the settlement of the Jesuit estates' is beyond the power of that Legislature: firstly, because it endows from public funds a religious organization, thereby violating the unwritten but undoubted constitutional principle of the complete separation of Church and State, and of absolute equality of all denominations before the law; secondly, because it recognizes the usurpation of right by foreign authority—his Holiness the Pope of Rome—in declaring his consent necessary to empower the Provincial Legislature to dispose of a portion of the public domain, and also because the act is made to depend on his will, and the appropriation of the grant thereby made is subject to the control of the same authority; and, thirdly, because the Society of Jesus is a secret and politico-religious body, the explusion of which from every Christian community wherein it has had a footing was rendered necessary by its intolerant and mischievous inter-meddling with the functions of the civil government.

"Therefore this House prays that his Excellency will be graciously pleased to disallow the act."

CHRISTMAS AT THE FRONT.

Christmas at the front, both east and west, saw no abatement in the fierce struggles that have been going on for weeks between the warring nations for some decisive result which might turn the tide of battle.

The German forces in Russian Poland, under Field Marshall Von Hindenburg, continue their assaults upon the Russian line which blocks their way to Warsaw. Throughout the day and night before Christmas the invaders hammered away in a series of attacks, according to the latest Russian official statement, principally in the districts of Sochaze, 28 miles west of Warsaw, and Bolomow, just south of Sochazaw. All these attacks were replused with great loss to the Germans, it is stated in the Petrograd communication.

In the western theatre both Germans and allies claim to have repulsed attacks at various points, but there is no indication in the reports of any material change in the situation.

HER NAME'S SHADOW

It Melted Away Before the Bright Sun of Love.

By ESTHER SANGBORN.

If she had not been named Beryl perhaps Miss Stanhope would not have thought herself so hopelessly plain, so thoroughly and utterly unattractive. But that name—so beautiful, so poetical, sounding like an utterance in one short burning word of a womanly beauty almost divine—was as a curse to her.

It made her morbid. She shivered lest people learn it and smile at the incongruity.

Superconscious of her angles, her lack of color and dark circled eyes, reflected in every shop window, Beryl wondered why she had been named so incongruously. She almost cried when a wizened old woman with a parchment skin, in charge of a fruit stand, answered to the name of Violet. What would she, Beryl Stanhope, be like twenty-five years hence?

She could not free herself from the tormenting thought. In old age, with ugliness intensified, she must still hear the musical Beryl applied to her, a name designed for a round, milk skinned creature, with hair like corn silk and eyes the color of a calm sea, the cool, restful blue that is more nearly green.

She was reasoning to silence her ever renewed womanly hunger for beauty of person when she tapped at the studio shared by her brother and Lindley Wood. Her brother was out, but Wood was painting feverishly, a seldom seen exultation on his serious face.

"Come in, Miss Stanhope," he called hospitably. "Dick will be back in a jiffy. We are both making hay while the sun shines this week. Miss Cuyler is kindly posing for us, and she leaves the city Monday.

Beryl had not glanced at the model throne, but at this she turned quickly and caught her breath with a little gasp. A girl with the sheen of corn silk in her hair and eyes like a lapis laxuli sea was silhouetted against a background of pale green plush.

A sharp pain that Beryl did not know was envy shot to her heart as she drank in the sumptuous coloring of the nonchalant beauty. Recovering her composure with an effort, she returned Miss Cuyler's greeting and stepped forward.

"Are you and Dick working on one theme, Mr. Wood?" she asked. "May I see?"

"Not one theme," answered Wood. "Dick is doing an Andromache, but mine is only a study, an ideal head. I'll be very glad of your criticism, Miss Stanhope. My work fails to satisfy me."

Lindley Wood's pictures usually received praise from his friend's sister, but for once there was no exclamatory remarks. After a long look she drew back a step with heightened color.

"Wherefore the name?" she asked haughtily.

"Beryl?" said Wood unconcernedly, touching up the round white throat on his canvas. "That is just a fancy of mine. Haven't you names to fit your ideal types? I would not think of painting a blond Judith or a dark Rosamond. I've always had a liking for the name of Beryl"—with boyish eagerness—"and Miss Cuyler happens to look my conception of it. Do you like the pose?"

"Very much," she replied, thankful she could say so honestly. But there was a strange inflection in her voice, despite her effort. Lindley Wood's keen ear caught it, and he responded with swift artistic intuition.

"You see something wrong with it!" he exclaimed. "I want to know what it is. Be frank and tell me why you do not like my Beryl."

The living Beryl trembled foolishly as she buttoned her coat. "Seek to please the institute committee, not me," she laughed. "My opinion is not worth that doleful expression, Mr. Wood. Tell Dick I shall expect him early." And, with a nod that included the model, she left the room.

Over the tete-a-tete dinner that night Beryl tried to question her brother about Lindley Wood's interest in Miss Cuyler. But she could not. Her brother had been strangely preoccupied of late, and table conversation was monosyllabic.

"Wood hasn't been here for some time," he remarked suddenly, and Beryl, surprised in her thoughts, was glad that the doorbell spared her a reply. When Dick returned his friend's name was not mentioned.

Beryl sat reading in the little parlor when her brother went out "to pay some calls," he said evasively. When the door closed behind him she dropped her book and assumed ease.

Pacing up and down the rooms, she assured herself that she would go to work at something presently and forget the episode. But, try as she would, her heart was filled, with bitterness that her brother's friend—her friend, too, she had once thought—should have been so heartless, so utterly contemptuous of her, as to paint an ideal Beryl. "He could not have told me my shortcomings more brutally in plain words," whispered she passionately.

Then, seeing something white on the hall rug, she stooped and picked up a card, "Edith Cuyler," she read—her brother's Andromache and Lindley Wood's Beryl! In that moment she felt almost as if she hated both artists and their model.

A chaos of thoughts danced through her brain, but through it all she always saw the pink and white face that had smiled from Wood's canvas above her name.

Unable to stay indoors, she put on her wraps and went out, but even the clear ozone of the night did not arouse her from the strange thrall put upon her by the card.

She turned into the block where some friends, the Stones, lived, but she had no intention of going in, for she knew that Edith Cuyler was staying there. Suddenly a pillar of flame shot from a building ahead. In a moment the street was a confusion of hoarse shouts and screams. Beryl stood still and watched the residents, like a stream of human ants, carrying valuables to safety. Then, as one awakening from a troubled dream recognizes the environment, she realized she was looking at the Stones' house and that it was afire.

Attracted by a shrill scream, she raised her eyes to the third floor. The beautiful Miss Cuyler stood in a window, her blond head silhouetted against a curtain of fire.

Beryl was conscious of a commotion in the crowd. Then a man in evening dress fought his way to the burning structure and went up the ladder with eager steps. At the second floor a tongue of flame lit his features, and Beryl almost swooned with horror as she recognized her brother Dick.

The next five minutes were each a fearful, anguish laden century to the watching girl. At any instant the walls might collapse and engulf them both.

She saw the cameo-like face, pearl white against that red curtain, brighten with hope as she recognized the coming hero. Beryl saw Dick lift her from the narrow ledge and begin the perilous downward journey with her arms around his neck.

They reached the second floor in safety, though the ladder swayed unsteadily. Willing hands held it as well as inexperienced people could, but danger threatened every step. Forgetting that she stood among strangers, Beryl clutched some one near. "I can't look!" she cried despairingly. "Oh, if they should fall!"

"Why, Miss Stanhope," answered an amazed, familiar voice, "why are you here?"

She clung to Lindley Wood with a little sob of relief. "Tell me," she begged pitifully.

By the necromancy of intuition he understood. "They are safe," he said, tucking her hand under his arm. "Let me take you home. You are icy cold. Dick is all right," reassuringly.

"If Dick and Miss Cuyler were not already engaged they will be now," he went on. "How can I manage, I wonder, to make myself appear equally heroic to you, Miss Stanhope?"

"Why?" in a gentle whisper.

"Because I love you," drawing her into the shadow of a building away from the crowd. "I was coming to say it, but it is easier to say it here under the stars than it would be in your lighted rooms. I can better endure your 'No' if you cannot see its effect."

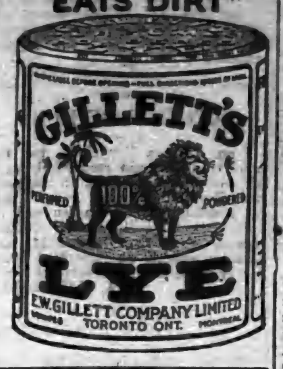
"Your ideal Beryl is a cameo blond," she reminded. "I am plain"—

"What has my ideal Beryl to do with you?" he interrupted, looking his surprise.

"My name is Beryl," she answered. "Didn't you know?"

"No!" he cried emphatically. And instantly the memory of his words in the studio stood before him in letters of flame, and he saw their significance. "Tom always calls you Sis, and—and—I believed your initial represented Barbara. A blond Beryl may be my ideal on canvas, but the woman I love and would call wife has eyes like deep, dark wells. Don't draw away, dear. Miss Cuyler is only a model to me." He paused a moment, as she did not speak. "Perhaps there is some one else," he said sadly. "I dare not hope that you can care for me."

The hand on his arm tightened gently. "There is no one else," she said softly, "none but you. If you are satisfied I will never again complain or envy my—future sister—her beauty."



"Why should you?" cried he, pressing her to his heart. "Beauty of soul shines from your every lineament, my queen and wife, and—don't you know that you are a true type of dark beauty anyway?"

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Headache.

Here is a homemade remedy for headache which may work a cure if taken at the beginning of an attack: Cut a lemon in half and squeeze its juice into a tumbler. Add a few—a very few—grains of sugar and fill up the glass with cold water. Fill it, that is, about three-quarters full. Now stir into this lemon mixture half an eggspoonful of ordinary baking soda. This will fizz up, of course, and the draft must be swallowed while it is still effervescing. If one does fails to arrest the attack, repeat it three hours after. This mixture, taken fasting, the first thing in the morning, will do much to settle the stomach after a sick headache and will prevent recurrence for some time. This kitchen physic has been found to prevail when phenacetin and all other nerve quieters have signally failed.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for the privilege of appealing through your columns on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children. The Hospital takes care of sick and deformed children, not only in Toronto, but in the Province, outside of the city.

This coming year, of all the years in the Hospital's history, has a more serious outlook, as regards funds for maintenance, than any year that has passed its calendar.

So many calls are being made on the purses of the generous people of Toronto and Ontario, to help the soldiers of the Empire, that as I make my daily rounds through the wards of the Hospital, and see the suffering children in our cots and beds, the thought strikes me as to whether the people will as of old, with all the demands made upon them, answer our appeal and help to maintain the institution that is fighting in the never-ending battle with disease and death, in its endeavor to save the stricken little ones in the child-life of Ontario.

Last year there were 294 in-patients from 210 places outside of Toronto, and in the past twenty years there have been 7,000 from places in the Province other than Toronto.

It costs us $2.34 per patient per day for maintenance. The municipalities pay for patients $1 per patient per day; the Government allows 20 cents per patient per day; so, deducting $1.20 from $2.34, it leaves the Hospital with $1.14 to pay out of subscriptions it receives from the people of Toronto and the Province. The shortage last year ran to $18,000.

Since 1880 about 1,000 cases of club feet, bow legs and knock knees have been treated, and of these 900 had perfect correction. Nearly all these were from different parts of the Province outside of the city of Toronto.

Remember that every year is a war year with the Hospital; every day is a day of battle; every minute the Hospital needs money, not for its own sake, but for the children's sake. The Hospital is the battle-ground where the Armies of Life have grappled with the Hosts of Death, and the life or death of thousands of little children is the issue that is settled in that war. Will you let the Hospital be driven from the field of its battle to save the lives of little children for the lack of money you can give and never miss?

Every dollar may prove itself a dreadnought in the battle against death, a flagship in the fleet that fights for the lives of little children.

Remember that the door of the Hospital's mercy is the door of hope, and your dollar, kind reader, may be the key that opens the door for somebody's child.

Will you send a dollar, or more if you can, to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Toronto.

LURE OF THE LIZARD.

Many Ships Sight and Pass the Famous Headland Daily.

If the Lizard (Lizard point, Cornwall, England) could see as one-half believes it can from that one piercing eye, Cyclops-like, in its forehead, what sights it could report—Phoenician and Roman galleys; the ships of Hawkins, Drake, Frobisher and Raleigh; the Mayflower after its final release from detention at Southampton, Dartmouth and Plymouth; the broken winged armada and the Titanic on that first voyage, so confidently and cheerfully begun, which, ending in the unforeseen ice, was also its last.

All the ships of the famous lines between American and English and European ports come within a mile or two of it, eastbound and westbound, those of the North German Lloyd, the Atlantic Transport, the White Star and the Red Star, the Canadian branch of the Cunard, the Holland-America, the Hamburg-American and the American, most of them making their passage so punctually that you know to an hour when to look for them.

Just beyond the light is Lloyd's signal station, and close to that a Marconi station, subsidiary to the most powerful of all, that at Poldhu, to the west, where the swish, sparkle and crackle of the four high latticed towers can be heard at a distance of all but a mile.

Man's ingenuity and benevolence have turned the dreaded headland from a menace into a dispensary of safeguards. During fogs two horns, each with a mouth six feet in diameter, blare across the cloaked channel, and a submarine bell at the foot of the cliffs tolls its number within a range of sixteen miles to every listening vessel provided with a receiver. Both light and sound have vagaries in fogs, however. If we can believe the masters of ships which have come to grief on and near the Lizard there are times when the 15,000,000 candlepower of the lighthouse is invisible, and the bellowing of these enormous trumpets inaudible.—William H. Rideing in Scribner's.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A Plea For Correctly Designating Places and Celebrities.

Frederick Upham Adams objects in his "Conquest of the Tropics" to the name usually given to the discoverer of America.

Speaking of the immortal Columbus, why do we call him by that name? He never bore while living any such name. He was born of the Italian family of "Colombo." When he entered the Spanish service he changed his name to "Cristobal Colon." And we insist on calling him "Columbus."

In Spain, Mexico, Central America and all Spanish speaking countries the natives never heard of the "United States." They translate it into "Estados Unidos," and they have as much right to call it that as we have to call Espana by the title of "Spain" or Roma by the title of "Rome."

I hold that we should call countries and cities and celebrities by their true names, and not stick to the clumsy derivations which have lazily been substituted. There is no such city as "Vienna" unless it happens to be some village in the United States. The great Austrian capital is named "Wien," and only those who speak the English language call it anything else. There is no such city as "Brussels," but the beautiful capital of Belgium is really named "Bruxelles."

It is time that we called the great discoverer by the name under which he achieved immortal fame, Cristobal Colon. We would not like it if the Russians insisted that the father of our country was named "Washeskivich."

Triumph of Mutes.

It was but the other day when the triumph of the deaf and dumb faced me. It was a ship just starting from Southampton to America. You know the unheard shouts during the last hour from the shore. There were two men, deaf and dumb, talking quietly with their fingers to the brother on board, who could reply. They were the only three that could talk freely among the unheard tumult!—London Chronicle.

The Fatal Hours.

From 10,000 deaths which occurred in an asylum during fifteen consecutive years physicians are inclined to doubt the ancient theory that the early morning hours are the most fatal. The observations were made in patients of all ages and under all conditions, and the result shows that the early afternoon hours included most of the deaths. The least fatal hours were from 7 to 12 a. m.—Washington Star.

NEW YORK SPENT A HAPPY CHRISTMAS.

Everybody Was Well Fed—Charity Was Unusually in Evidence.

Charity and good cheer walked abroad in New York on Christmas Day and made the holiday in many ways one of the most memorable in the city's annals.

Scores of thousands of needy persons were fed by charitable organizations, the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America alone, according to estimates of distributions providing 75,000 dinners for the poor. The missions and other institutions gave Christmas meals to many other thousands. Private charity was unusually in evidence.

The day outdoors was ideally Christmas-like; indoors, within institutions and within homes, the Yuletide spirit prevailed to an unwonted degree.

Municipal Christmas tree celebrations, begun on the eve of the holiday, were continued on the day itself; poor children were gathered together in numerous centres and made happy with gifts and feasting that their homes in the crowded sections could not afford them, and home upon home was blessed with benefactions in the shape of needed supplies for the holiday table and presents for the little ones of the family. Hospitals, orphanages, homes for the aged and infirm, correctional and other institutions provided holiday dinners and entertainments for their inmates.

IN SERIOUS PLIGHT.

Forty Families in Distress as Result of Pulp Situation.

New Liskeard.— Settlers in the Kennebec district are having a trying time according to information brought here by F. W. Love, a merchant there. The situation is critical, he says, and immediate help is required.

Mr. Love came here to interview the local member of the Legislature, Thomas Magladery, with a view of securing some form of assistance from the Government. About forty families are in real need. One case is cited of a farmer feeding his team on brush as a last resort, to say nothing about having nothing to eat for his family. A few weeks ago the prospects for a good winter were promising, but the fact that pulp buying companies cancelled practically all their contracts leaves the settlers without any means of livelihood. Many of them spent what little money they had in buying outfits for pulp camps.

American firms are buying rossed pulp, but as this must be peeled by a rosser they are not in a position to accept contracts. In the vicinity of Ossco a machine was purchased on time, but the settlers are handicapped for want of the necessaries of life until they can market and get paid for their pulp.

—Puzzle and Trick Books at The Banner Bookstore.

Periodically since the adoption of local option in different Peel municipalities persons endeavor to discredit the law and incidentally to make profit out of the illicit sale of liquor. There is evidence that some of these individuals have been at work the past two weeks in Brampton. There is a story to the effect that a young Toronto township farmer had been peddling bottles in the Meadowvale district. The guilty parties have not yet been discovered, but, like the German battleships that bombard unfortified cities and murder women and children, they will come to their reward. But these efforts by the hirelings of the trade to discredit the law of the land must remind all loyal men and women that constant vigilance, and, when required, a little sacrifice, is necessary if the positions gained by the temperance people after so many years are to be retained and enlarged.—Brampton Conservator.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, JAN. 7th, 1915.

Good Business in 1915

It has been rough going for the bulls since the beginning of the year.

After the war broke loose the bears never had a chance either, because they put up the shutters on the Stock Exchanges.

But there is a good time coming for the average man and woman in Canada.

Let the man with a little hard-earned money watch his opportunities closely. Houses and land are nearer within his grasp to-day than in the last ten years.

You can't depress human nature eternally.

Every infernal human crab laughs once in a while. This good old God-made world is coming back to sanity and prosperity.

There will be less champagne in 1915 than 1914, but lots of good, sound, honest business will be done.

The New Year will be a great year in the Dominion for men with brains and judgment.—Ottawa Journal.

A Valuable Paper.

The opportunities of the coming year, from a farmer's point of view appear to be many. Owing to the war there will be a shortage of crops in Europe, and therefore an extra demand for all kinds of farm products in Canada. This will afford an opportunity for the farmer who manages his farm in a business-like way to reap a rich harvest. Every farmer who is farming for profits, should be a reader of The Weekly Sun, the Farmers' Business paper. There is no other farm paper in Ontario that supplies the farmer with the same reliable information as The Sun does. By perusing The Sun, you will gain a knowledge of the markets, which will enable you to sell your products to the best advantage. The subscription price will only be a fraction of the additional profits you will make by reading The Sun. When renewing your subscription for your local paper, you will make no mistake if you subscribe for The Sun, the Farmers' Business Paper.

Business Change.

Robert Fairbairn, of Windsor, has bought the drug stock and business belonging to the estate of the late F. S. Pickering and for many years owned by the late Thos. Stevenson. The new owner, who is an experienced druggist, will take over the business right away.

Our Mail Carriers

Our local mail carriers had a very severe time of it this Christmas season, the badly drifted roads and the heavy mail, especially parcels, coming at the same time. The carriers are experienced drivers and made the regular rounds almost every day. The many patrons on the several different routes were very kind and considerate in having the roads open for them when they came along. They also received many suitable presents in mail boxes on Christmas Day for which all are heartily thankful.

The Band's Debut

The Orangeville Citizens' Band turned out practically full strength on Monday night last and gave its initial open air concert at the Bank of Commerce corner on Broadway. Under the leadership of Messrs. Russell Morrow and Fred Faulkner the young players are developing a remarkable gift of tooting the horn. Judging from the earnestness of the musicians Orangeville will, before long, have a band that will do credit to the town. For the first performance the band was not at all stingy with the music and gave the large crowd of listeners a variety of tunes. It is to be hoped that the players will all "stick" this time and, judging by the ability of the band engagements will not be lacking. "Here's success to you, boys."

St. Mark's Church Notes

The new organ will be formally opened on Sunday, Jan. 17th. Mr. Edward Lye, a member of the firm, which is building the organ, will conduct the musical portion of the services both morning and evening. A short Recital will be given at the close of the evening service. On Monday evening following a Sacred Musicale will be given in the church. The proceeds will be devoted to the Organ Fund. Mr. Lye will preside at the Organ on this occasion also.

On Sunday last large congregations were present at the special services of Intercession for the War. The Rector preached in the morning on the theme "The Christian Conception of Peace" and in the evening on "Christ, or Odin, which?" A weekly war service is held every Friday from 5 to 5.30 p.m. Everyone welcome.

Ven. Archdeacon Davidson, of St. George's Church, Guelph, will deliver an Illustrated Lecture on "Old London" under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A. on Monday evening, Jan. 25th.

Into New Residence.

Dr. G. I. Campbell, of Grand Valley, has just moved into the new residence which he erected recently. For comfort, convenience and plain artistic beauty it is a model and reflects great credit on all who had to do with its designing and construction. It contains every convenience found in a city house except gas, but the genial Dr. says he can supply that commodity in sufficient quantities for all purposes."

HOLMES WON

Worsted Henderson by 35 Votes in Deputy-Reeve-Ship Fight

Men of Orangeville are Willing to Allow Women to Vote.

Municipal election day passed off very quietly in Orangeville this year. The only contested office was that of deputy-reeve. There were two good men in the field in the persons of A. B. Holmes and Thos. Henderson. The general feeling was that either man would fill the position creditably and there was a good deal of regret expressed over the fact that they were pitted against each other. Holmes won by 35, getting all but 3 of his majority in the South Ward. A good-sized vote was polled. To the question "Are you in favor of the Municipal Vote for Married Women?" 307 electors answered "Yes" while 126 recorded an equally emphatic "No." The referendum—for such it was—indicates that women may have votes at any time so far as Orangeville is concerned. The details of the voting follow :—

Alex. Burnett, one of last year's Councillors, defeated ex-Warden John A. Cornelius by 43 votes for the East Garafraxa reeveship. Nodwell, who was left at home in the run for Council, was another man who did not canvass. MARSHALL HELD MONO

Last Year's Reeve Had 72 Majority on Monday

Old Councillors were all Re-elected.

Monday's election in Mono township resulted in the re-election of Mr. J. A. Marshall, last year's reeve, by practically the same majority as last year. His opponent was Mr. T. H. Moffitt, whom he defeated for the office in 1914. There was very little change in the vote over the township. Moffitt had a big lead in the Hockley Ward, but Marshall more than offset this in the Elba and Rosemont divisions. Thompson, Bowers and Morton, last year's Councillors, were re-elected, running in the order named. Parks, last year's deputy-reeve, was elected by acclamation, so that there is no change in the composition of the Council. The statement of the voting follows :—

SHOT HIMSELF.

Tragic Ending of Career of Former Orangeville Boy.

A Penticton, B.C. despatch dated Jan. 4th tells of the tragic death of Elgin C. Myers, formerly Secretary of the Kettle Valley Railway Company at that place, who shot himself in his room above the C.P.R. depot on Sunday night. Myers, according to the despatch, had faced a preliminary trial some weeks ago on a charge of firing into the Aquatic Club Building and wounding two men. It was alleged that he had shot at his room-mate, J. H. McCoy, formerly Manager of the Bank of Hamilton at Penticton, and a member of the second contingent. For some months anonymous letters reflecting on the character of McCoy had been sent to prominent residents, and placards were posted up throughout the district. Suspicion pointed to Myers as the person responsible. The preliminary trial on the shooting bound him over for trial to be held on January 13th.

The unfortunate young man was the older son of the late Elgin Myers K.C., at one time County Crown Attorney of Dufferin. His younger brother, Garfield, was drowned in Caledon Lake during the summer of 1913. Elgin gained considerable prominence at the time of the Stratton-Gamey sensation about ten years ago owing to the fact that he was at that time acting as private secretary to Hon. Jas. R. Stratton.

CHARLESTON.

We are sorry to hear of the action taken regarding the boys who enlivened the annual School concert on the evening of nomination day. As some of our most prominent young men are connected with the affair we trust that nothing more than a small fine will be considered necessary.

The Bonstelle Players in their New Year's presentation of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," scored a complete success. The audience, which was limited only by the size of the hall, was enthusiastic in its appreciation of the realistic delineation of the principal characters. The play is a terrible indictment of the bar room and ought to powerfully help the cause of temperance.

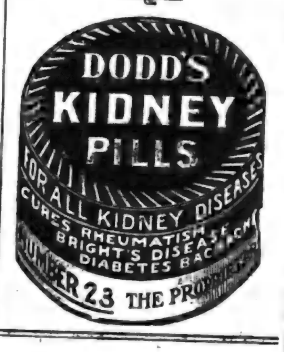
WEST—TAYLOR.

A very pleasant event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Taylor, East Garafraxa, on Wednesday, December 16th, when their second daughter, Laura Emily, was united in marriage to Mr. Fred S. West, of Amaranth, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John H. Taylor, uncle of the bride.

The bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, to the strains of Bridal Chorus Wedding March, rendered by Miss Gladys McConachie and took her place under a beautiful evergreen arch.

The bride never looked more charming than in her gown of pink brocaded satin trimmed with pearls and lace and wore the usual bridal wreath and veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a beautiful bouquet of white carnations, lily of the valley and maidenhair fern.

The only attendant was Sadie M. Taylor, sister of the bride, who acted as flower girl and wore a dainty frock of cream silk trimmed with lace and ribbon and carried in the basket the wedding ring.



The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and fob; to the organist a gold brooch and to the flower girl a handsome bracelet.

After the ceremony and usual congratulations the guests numbering about one hundred and fifty repaired to the dining room, which was artistically decorated for the occasion and there partook of a sumptuous repast, after which a social evening in music and games was spent.

The presents were costly and numerous, showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

The bride's travelling dress was of black satin with a mink marmot coat and black picture hat with princess plume.

SIGNALS OF DEATH

They Give Assurance That Life Is Really Extinct.

TESTS THAT WILL NOT FAIL.

Apart From Rigor Mortis, a Positive Sign of Death, the Artery Opening and Fluorescein Tests Provide a Bar Against Premature Burial.

When the doctor pronounces the patient dead, is he sure? And, if not, what tests can remove all doubt? This question, though not often spoken, is probably present in the minds of friends and relations at every deathbed.

As death is the worst of all disasters and no mistake could be more awful than premature burial, it is not merely interesting, but important, for people to know what tests are conclusive and what are not.

When the breathing stops and no sound of heart beat or pulse can be detected there is little doubt of death. But the little doubt is in itself so dreadful that these common signs are not enough. If the body grows slowly but steadily cool the doubt is lessened, but by no means removed. Nor is it a sign of life if after dropping the temperature it suddenly rises again.

The placing of a mirror in front of the mouth and nostrils is a well known test. The theory is that even the faintest breath will dim the mirror. This test is not only worthless, but likely to cause false hopes. Gases generated in the body very frequently issue from the mouth and form a mist upon the mirror.

Steel needles are sometimes thrust into the muscles for a period of an hour and then examined. If the person is alive the oxygen of the blood should rust the needle, if dead should not. This test in actual practice is unreliable, and no faith can be placed in it.

Another cause of false hopes is the custom of placing a glass of water filled to the edge on the breast. The slightest movement of the lungs will cause a drop to spill. This, too, is valueless; because after death there are invariably certain movements of the muscles known as "cadaveric spasms," which are often energetic enough to spill the water.

Probably one of the most infallible tests is the opening of an artery. In life the arteries are full of blood under pressure. In death the arteries drain into the veins. This is a very fortunate fact, as it prevents the undertaker from making any mistake. The embalming fluid is injected by opening an artery. Should blood flow he knows that life still persists and is warned in time.

Cutting the skin to see if blood will flow from the veins proves nothing, as it often flows as late as three days after death.

The X ray, when it is available, provides an excellent proof of death. A photograph of a live being shows the heart with a blurred outline. This is caused by even the faintest movements of the organ. An X ray exposure of a dead person reveals the heart clear cut and sharp.

There are numberless so called tests of the eye, its shrinkage in size, the dimming and fogging of the transparent part and other signs. These signs are not sufficient proof, nor, is the test of flashing a bright light in the eye to see if the pupil contracts.

Even atropine dropped on the eyeball brings no evidence. It has been proved that the drug will dilate the eye some time after death.

Many persons think electricity applied in the form of shocks is a test. It is of no avail, as the muscles usually respond to the current for three hours or more after death.

Proof beyond question is supplied when the stiffening known as "rigor mortis" sets in. Hysteria, catalepsy and other states often simulate that stiffness. Rigor mortis begins in one part of the body, usually the muscles of the throat, and gradually extends throughout the body, while the various living forms of muscle stiffness come on instantly and belong to all the muscles.

The so called "diaphanous" test is unreliable. If you hold your hand close to a candle or other bright light the fingers show a certain rosy translucency, the bones appearing as dim shadows. After death the fingers usually become as opaque as if made of marble. But exceptions are frequent enough to make the test worthless.

A harmless but very powerful dye called fluorescein will settle all doubts very quickly. If a hypodermic syringe is used to inject a little of this dye under the skin it has no result on a dead person. But if this be done to one in whom there is the slightest trace of circulation there follows at once an unmistakable and startling result. The entire skin becomes a golden yellow and the whites of the eyes turn an emerald green. The effects pass away soon after the pulse and breathing are restored. This and the test of opening an artery are probably the only infallible death tests.—New York Press.

To Prevent Accidents.

"Now, who can tell me three methods of preventing accidents?" asked the teacher, while the school board stroked his beard approvingly.

"Stop, look, an' listen!" shouted the class bonehead, always there in an emergency.—Buffalo Express.

WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY REMEDY

"Fruit-a-tives" Have Proved Their Value In Thousands of Cases

WONDERFUL RECORD OF A WONDERFUL CURE

Only Remedy That Acts On All Three Of The Organs Responsible For The Formation Of Uric Acid In The Blood.

Many people do not realize that the Skin is one of the three great eliminators of waste matter from the body. As a matter of fact, the Skin rids the system of more Urea (or waste matter) than the Kidneys. When there is Kidney Trouble, Pain In The Back and Acrid Urine, it may not be the fault of the kidneys at all, but be due to faulty Skin Action, or Constipation of the bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" cures weak, sore, aching Kidneys, not only because it strengthens these organs but also because "Fruit-a-tives" opens the bowels, sweetens the stomach and stimulates the action of the skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WHAT DOES IT COST YOU?

Agriculturists are fast becoming specialists. They are stockmen, seedsmen, vegetable growers, fruit growers or horticulturists. No two producers can turn out their product at the same cost—what does it cost you? Manufacturers know the cost of each individual part which goes to make up a finished article. It depends upon the price of labor, price of material, cost of equipment, interest, insurance and depreciation, all of which concern the grower of farm products as much as they do the manufacturer of a pipe organ or a manure spreader. It is an admitted fact that the majority of farmers work away without counting the cost, meeting theor obligations, if possible, when they come due and pocketing the small balance at the end of the fiscal year. Where, or in what department the balance might be increased is not given sufficient thought.

Growers in the Burlington District, Ontario, consider that it costs them $1 per barrel to grow their apples on the tree, and another dollar to pick, pack and land each barrel on the car at the shipping point, consequently, any price for the fruit under $2 per barrel is not a profitable deal. We know of one feeder who labored under the impression that he could produce pork for five cents per pound, but was keen enough to discern the fallacy of the belief before he went too far. He established the fact in his own mind that it was as a side line that hogs were most profitable. If it costs at least $45.00 per year to keep a cow and her factory check amounts to only $43.00, how long will that business escape insolvency? Stockmen should figure out their rations for the cattle, for, in doing so, they will discern the unnecessary and ridiculous waste accruing from the absence of legumes in the rotation. When protein-rich feeding stuffs must be purchased there is an outlay of actual money for something that nature offers free if the farmer will but do his part. If he will scatter the seed of clover, alfalfa, or peas, and give it a chance nature will co-operate and store up in them liberal quantities of protein. Compare, for instance, the relative positions of two farmers or stock feeders. One has clover hay, the other has hay from mixed grasses. They both feed ten pounds per day, but in order to make the rations equal the latter must purchase two pounds of bran to augment his mixture of common grasses and other home-grown feeding stuffs. If one feeder used alfalfa hay the other must purchase approximately two pounds of oil-cake meal to make his ten pounds of hay from mixed grasses equal to the ten pounds of alfalfa hay. This is where many a leak is found, and where many farmers might increase their yearly balance. These are apparently small matters, but with a herd of twenty-five cows and the accompanying growing stock it is important enough to mean the difference between profit and loss. It is the little things that count.

As mercantile concerns compute their costs and plug the leaks, so should farmers figure their expenses on the crops they grow or the animals they turn off as finished products from the farm. Conditions nowadays demand prudence. What does it cost you?—Farmers' Advocate.

Cattle of Chile.

In Chile it seems to be the custom to let cattle shift for themselves, with the result that many die and others become so weak that tuberculosis and carbuncle work havoc year after year. It is estimated that 30 per cent of the cattle of the country die of contagious diseases, and there has been no organized effort as yet in Chile to meet these conditions.

THE "HITLESS WONDERS."

Qualities That Made the Old White Sox Club Famous.

Back in 1906 the Chicago White Sox were known as the Hitless Wonders, because of their ability to win games with uniformly poor batting, and though Frank Isbell, the best club swinger on the team, finished a season of 152 games with an average of only .279, this club qualified for a chance to fight for a world's championship. And what is still more to the point, they won the great series from Frank Chance's Cubs when that aggregation was at its best.

But there was a reason for this, and the reason was the wonderful pitching staff, which consisted of Ed Walsh, Doc White, Nick Altrock, Roy Patterson, Frank Owens and Frank Smith, an aggregation of twirling talent seldom equaled. So clever were the members of this sextet that they were able to limit opposing teams to a minimum of runs, and it was only necessary for the batters of the White Sox to collect three or four tallies to win most contests.

But even if the club was shy on heavy hitters such men as Jiggs Donohue, Lee Tannehill, George Robe, George Davis, Billy Sullivan, Fielder Jones, Dougherty and Hahn had plenty of speed, knew their "inside play" like a book and in most pinches could be depended upon to come through with enough good plays to score at the right moments.

In every other instance where a team has won a championship in the majors the batters as a whole have been unusually strong and did not have to depend on the pitchers to keep them in the running more than half of the time. Nevertheless a number of clubs have endeavored to emulate the example of the White Sox, but they always have come to grief.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

MAN AND MICROBES.

Human Beings Might All Be Giants If There Were No Bacteria.

If there were no microbes men would grow to gigantic stature and have intellectual powers far in advance of those which they possess at present. What is more, it is possible, at least, to live without microbes. Anyway, these are the conclusions of no less an authority than Dr. Roux, who heads the Pasteur institute in Paris. They are based upon the result of some experiments carried on by one of his pupils, Dr. Michael Cohendy.

The latter placed some guinea pigs under glass at the moment of their birth. The air which they breathed was thoroughly sterilized, as was all the food administered to them. Unquestionably many germs were able to reach them, but every precaution known to science and possible with the application of one of the completest laboratories in the world was exercised to protect them.

The results rather astounded the doctor. The subjects grew with amazing rapidity, three or four times as fast as guinea pigs of the same age subsisting under normal conditions. In the brief span of twelve days they were for the most part a third larger.

It is a far cry from the guinea pig to the man of course, but Dr. Roux concludes that the latter, if under perfect antiseptic conditions from birth, would develop very far beyond what is possible as things are at present. He even hints that, with advancing knowledge, such conditions, if not attained, will be so approximated as to materially enhance the physical welfare and mental vigor of the race.—Boston Herald.

An Excellent Shampoo.

The following is a recipe for a shampoo that will make the hair fluffy and easy to dress: Take half a cake of white castile soap, shave it up finely and boil in a pint of water until it jellies. Allow it to become cool; then beat up the yolks of three eggs and add them to the soap jelly with a teaspoonful of eau de cologne. Shampoo the hair in the usual way, rubbing the mixture well into the scalp and rinsing out with soft water.

Her Last Word.

"She ought to drop dead for the awful lies she's telling," said the plaintiff excitedly, listening to the witness for the defense.

"Don't say that," admonished the judge.

"She ought," repeated the plaintiff.

"Don't say that again!" warned the judge.

"Well, I won't, but she ought."—Topeka Journal.

Ideal Feminine Form.

The Medicean Venus is five feet five inches in height, and this is held by many sculptors and artists to be the most admirable feminine stature. For a women of five feet five inches 138 pounds is the proper weight, and if she be well formed she can stand another ten pounds without greatly showing it.

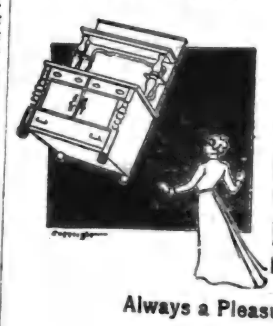
MOTORING IN WINTER TIME

Outdoor sport in winter is only just coming into its own. Certain European countries, particularly Switzerland and the Scandinavian lands, have always indulged in systematized winter sports, but the rest of the world is only now beginning to appreciate the delights of playing in the snow. The winter season of the Swiss mountain resort has of late years assumed an importance equalling that of the traditional summer period of relaxation. Thousands of pleasure seekers from France, England, Italy, and the rest of Europe, to say nothing of America, now gather each winter in the snow-filled valleys, to enjoy the skating, skiing, and tobogganing, as well as hockey in the open air rinks. In mid-Victorian days, all these folks would have been horrified at the idea of ricking colds, pneumonia "declines," and Heaven knows what else by visiting a country where the thermometer systematically undermines the morals of the zero mark. Today we know that pure cold air is not only innocuous but of positive therapeutic value. At the Swiss resorts, hundreds of visitors attend the open-air hockey matches, and sit out in the falling snow, with no worse results than ravenous appetites.

In this country, we have not advanced quite so far as has Europe in the matter of outdoor winter sports. We are still inclined to hug the fireplace, when we are able, and there is still a very large class of motor-car users which puts up its cars for the winter, or uses them only as utility vehicles on the cleared streets of our larger cities. But even at that, the tide is turning, for the motorist of a few years ago was brother to the bear in his hibernating habits. The bear, we are told, on the coming of cold weather, retires to his den and sleeps until a more profitable season. The early motorists, on the approach of winter, retired to their garages, and ceased to exist, as motorists, until revived by the warm sunlight of late spring. To-day there is a large and constantly increasing group of motor-car enthusiasts, who have learned that winter is by no means a closed season for the enjoyment of their favorite sport.



The motorists who declines to motor simply because the calendar tells him that it is winter loses a supremely delightful experience. There is exhilaration in the onward rush through the biting wind. There is health and healing in the pure, clean cold. There is music in the sweep of the crystal air. Keen as a whetted scimitar, and whipped home by the added impetus of flight in a fast moving motor car.

Nature, coy lady, charming in her moods and tenses to the receptive mind is certainly not least so in the one wherein she wraps herself in her mantle of virginal snows. The world clothed in sedorful garment of its summer verdure is frankly alluring, boldly inviting. But to him who passes the truly sympathetic understanding there is an attraction about Nature, wrapped in the austere beauty of her snows, that is far more provocative than the frank allurement of her summer mood.—The Countryside Magazine.

MILITARY FLIERS OF THE WAR-RING NATIONS SET NEW RECORDS FOR DARING AERIAL FEATS.

The one new thing that has been definitely proved by the experience of the European war thus far, is the value of the aeroplane as a military arm. Without the flying machine —the bird-shaped "Taube" craft of the Germans, the high-powered monoplanes of the French, and the slower but steadier and none the less efficient English biplanes—no such tremendous bodies of troops could have been handled, no such extended battle lines have been controlled and directed as has been the case in the great war.

The reports of observers near the battle lines daily tell of daring exploits of airmen of all nations. Ingenious methods of signalling the position of the enemy's troops make it possible for the courageous fliers to locate with accuracy the positions of the enemy's forces and direct the gun fire of their own armies accordingly. The simple method of signaling is for the airman to fly directly over the enemy's position, and when vertically above the point which it is desired to attack to let fall long strips of tinsel, which glitter in the sunlight as they descend and are visible for miles. Observers within the airmen's own lines have their telescopes and range finders turned upon the flying scouts continuously. When the tinsel drops, the range is instantly obtained, and the guns aimed accordingly. In dull or cloudy air, smoke bombs are used by some of the forces instead of the tinsel.

For code signals a glittering disk suspended by a wire a number of feet below the air craft is used. By swinging this disk, the airman can signal as though it were a flag, using the dot-and-dash "Wig-wag" code. The German observation balloons, derisively called "sausages" by the allies because of their peculiar shape, use this "wigwag" code. One of the most thrilling air battles reported from the field centred about one of these sausage balloons. Anchored at a height of 2,000 feet, well within the German lines, the observer in the balloon was watching the French advance and signaling back to his commanding general. Two French airmen were detailed to attack and destroy the "sausage." Flying at a height of a mile above the two armies they pounced down upon the observation balloon from above, bent on puncturing the gas bag and putting it out of commission. Two German aeroplanes rose in the air and flew to the defence of the "sausage." A Krupp aeroplane rifle from within the German ranks took part in the engagement, the gunners attempting to bring down the French machine without injuring either their own aeroplanes or the balloon. Finally so many bullets tore through the envelope of the balloon that it collapsed and, with the aid of daring and skill, the French fliers succeeded in rising high above their German foes and escaped back to their own lines, their work completed.

Such incidents as this are typical of many aerial engagements. Nor does daredevil aerial bravery begin and end with the aeroplane man. The crews of the Zeppelins and of the dirigible baloons of the allies are also called upon for exhibitions of reckless courage. While patrolling the French coast to see that the way was clear for the landing of a British expeditionary force, one of the English dirigibles was disabled by the breaking of a propeller blade. Two members of the crew volunteered to undertake the hazardous feat of putting on a new blade without descending. While the dirigible floated 2,000 feet in air, these men climbed out on the slender framework, unfastened the broken propeller and dropped it into the sea, and put the new one in place without mishap. Not long after came the report from Berlin of the decoration with the Iron Cross of a mechanician of one of the German Zeppelins for performing a similar feat.

Aerials duels between German airmen and those of the allies have been of frequent occurrence. A German airman has told vividly of his own part in one of these battles in the air. With an army officer as observer, he had flown nearly an hour over the enemy's lines, when a a French monoplane was seen approaching. The German tried to ascend into the clouds, but the French machine blocked this move. Suddenly another French machine appeared. "Now it was time to act," says the German pilot. "I darted at the flier before us, then a turn—the major raised a rifle to his cheek. Once, twice, thrice he fired. Then the hostile machine, now beside us and hardly 100 meters away, quivered and fell like a stone. Our other pursuer had meantime reached a position almost over us and was shooting at us with revolvers. One bullet struck in the body close beside the fuel controler. Then impenetrable mist enfolded us. When we came out from the clouds there began to burst before us, roaring shrapnel shells. I found myself still always over hostile positions and exposed to French artillery. A yellow-white burst of flame made the machine bound upward. The motor still booms as before, but the propeller fails. An exploding French grenade had knocked it to pieces, torn one of the wings to shreds and smashed the major's shoulder. Steeply my machine sinks to the ground."

Neither of these airmen was seriously injured, and they landed safely within their own lines.—Popular Mechanics.

THE LARGER VIEWPOINT.

"The larger viewpoint," three words used by a speaker at the Guelph Winter Fair, have a peculiar significance in connection with agricultural organization and management of marketing associations. No man who has not a grasp of what these words mean and what they signify in organization deserves to be a member of a co-operative association. They are the direct opposite of selfishness and selfish motives, such as those of the man who begrudges an efficient manager of a large association, twenty cents per barrel on all apples packed and sold through the association, even though that manager, through good business connections, by good business principles, and by earnest, honest and faithful hard work has built up a growing and selling organization which commands for its members' apples, including those of the grumbler, from $2.50 to $3.25 per barrel, whereas otherwise they would receive from $1.00 to $1.25. Surely it is good business to spend 20 cents if it will make $1.25 or $2 extra for the pocket of the seller. It is only his littleness and his selfishness that would mave him criticise a manager capable of making such changes in the apple situation. He lacks the larger viewpoint, and should be left with the "small fry." Think what the advance in price means to an association packing from 10,000 to 50,000 barrels of apples annually, and then grasp the larger viewpoint.

What is true of the apple branch of the farming industry is equally true of all other lines of agricultural endeavor in which co-operation is feasible or attempted. Jealousy is the enemy of the larger viewpoint, and any man who cannot see the advantage which accrues to himself through advantages to the organization as a whole, and the man who is always looking for something to criticise in the operations is a damage to any co-operative movement. Expert, honest managers are necessary. They must be well paid for their services, and the larger viewpoint is to boost not knock. Do it for the association, not to satisfy your own selfish motives.—Farmers' Advocate.

Baby Eczema Becomes Chronic

Causing Great Suffering and Anxiety —Prompt Relief and Cure by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This is one reason why every mother should know about Dr. Chase's Ointment, since it is an unfailing cure for all itching skin diseases.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad, and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now, and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Mrs. Wallace Mingon, River John Road, Colchester County, N.S., writes: "My little girl took eczema when she was five weeks old. Though we doctored her until she was nearly a year old, she got no better. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this treatment completely cured her."

INSULTING THE FLAG.

One Thing About Which Every Nation is Extremely Sensitive.

There is nothing about which civilized nations are quite so sensitive as the courtesy due to their national flags. A deliberate insult to a flag will bring even the most patient of nations to boiling point. Flag incidents always lead to strained relations and often to war.

How seriously nations take these things is shown by the suddenness with which a war cloud loomed up when Huerta, the Mexican dictator, quibbled about saluting the American flag after his officers had illegally arrested United States marines.

It was a flag incident that renewed the Balkan war after Turkey had been successfully crushed by the three allies. There was strong ill feeling among the allies as to the division of the spoils. A small Servian party crossed the Bulgarian border and was quietly looting a village near Vratza, when the local postmaster hoisted the red, green and white Bulgarian flag over the postoffice. He was shot in the act and the flag riddled with bullets. Next morning Bulgaria declared war.

Flag incidents keep cropping up accidentally, but apologies smooth matters over. It is, for instance, a mortal insult for a ship to fly another national flag below its own, as this implies capture and conquest. It has occasionally been done with flags on gala occasions. A Russian warship did it some years ago during a call at Portsmouth. It was, of course, followed by a complete apology to the local admiral.

This explains why, when the British admiralty issued a universal code of signals some years ago for use by all the nations, there was a good deal of international heartburning over the colored plate of national flags that prefaced it. The union jack, naturally, came first. Diplomatic relations, particularly with Germany, were rather strained for some time, though there was no danger of war. It was realized that alphabetical order was impossible, as many nations spell each other's names differently. Britain, for example, would count Germany among the G's, while Germany calls itself Deutschland, among the D's.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Masked Women.

Upper class Swahili women wear curious masks, which are made of leather and beads in a wooden frame. The mask is derived from the traditional usage of Moslem women, who must keep their faces covered in the presence of men. For several centuries Arab traders have frequented this East African coast, and to their influence are due most of the civilized customs found today among the natives of the district. The clothing worn by these prosperous dames is of silk; their shoes are partly of silver, and they wear much silver jewelry. The Moslems in Zanzibar, by the way, are less fanatically strict about religious usages than their brethren in Morocco and Turkey.—Wide World Magazine.

Peeling or Paring.

Does one peel or pare a potato? There is authority for the contention that raw potatoes are pared, while potatoes boiled with their jackets on may be peeled. It is a fine distinction, but logical. You pare a thing by taking a knife and removing its outer integument, together with some of the substance of the thing itself. But to peel an apple or a potato or a case of sunburn you seize the already loosened integument itself and simply strip it off—it's hard to put it into words, but you see how it is, don't you?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Uses of Silver.

The largest single use for silver, outside of the manufacture of silver plated ware, is estimated to be in the manufacture of photographic plates, films and paper. The manufacture of films for moving picture use has now become an enormous business, and it is probable that in the future this will bring the largest consumption of silver. The silver is used in photography for making the light sensitive emulsion and is principally the bromide of silver.

Photographing Stars.

Star photography is one of the most tedious operations known. In some cases the exposure of the plate must last for several hours. During all this time both the plate and telescope must be moved so that the image of the star will be stationary on the plate. The exposure for a star of the sixteenth magnitude is two hours, and only the image of one at a time can be secured, unless those adjoining happen to be of the same size.

Hans Andersen's Great Fear.

Hans Andersen, the great Danish writer, was an excessively nervous man, and he had a very great fear of being buried alive. So great was this dread that every night when he went to bed he would place by his bedside a large piece of paper on which was written, "I am only apparently dead."

Too Much of It.

Greene—How does it happen that you don't trade at Cleaver's any more? You used to brag about the nice cuts of meat he always sent you. Is it because he wouldn't give you credit? Gray—On the contrary. It is because he did.—Boston Transcript.

Still Worse.

"Every man says things he is sorry for."

"Worse than that!" exclaimed Mr Mushton. "Sometimes he writes 'em."—Washington Star.

JAMES BURT.

The township of Erin lost one of its first-born sons and oldest residents when James Burt died at his home, lot 15, con. 6, last Wednesday, December 23rd. Mr. Burt had suffered much during an illness of about two years, but he had reached the ripe old age of eighty-one. He was a son of the late George and Bertha Burt and was born on lot 17, in 1833. Fifty-seven years ago he married Sarah Ann Smith, daughter of the late Jacob Smith, who survives him, and settled on the farm where he died. Eight sons and daughters survive him, Mrs. H. Dedels, of Breslau; Mrs. John Harper, Mrs. George Griffin, and Mrs. James McKinnon, Erin; W. T., of Acton; D. M. and R. J., Collingwood, and Jacob, at home, all of whom were present at the funeral. Mr. Burt was a man of sterling character, highly esteemed and beloved by all who knew him. He was for forty years Secretary-Treasurer of the Board of Trustees of School Section No. 5, Erin. In religion he was a Methodist and in politics a Reformer. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon, interment being made at Coningsby Cemetery. Rev. Mr. Smith, his pastor, conducted the service. The pall-bearers were his four sons and two sons-in-law, Messrs G. Griffin and John Harper.—Acton Free Press.

DEATH OF MRS. JOHN PARSONS

Mrs. John Parsons died at her home in North Adjala on Thursday, December, 17th, 1914, after an illness of six months' duration. Deceased, who was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Christian, Beeton, was born in the township of Glenelg, near Markdale, 45 years ago, and came with her parents in infancy to the township of Adjala, where she has since resided. In 1892 she was married to Mr. John Parsons, who survives her. She is also survived by four daughters and two sons, all at home. The late Mrs. Parsons was an active member of the Methodist Church at Rosemont. She took special interest in the work of the Women's Auxiliary, of which she was president for a number of years. The funeral took place on Saturday from her late residence to Alliston Union Cemetery, Rev. J.W. Dudgeon officiating.—Alliston Herald.

Historical Sayings.

Teacher—What were Webster's last words? Pupil—I don't remember, ma'am, but they all began with E.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Peru the Source of Cocaine.

There is a shrub in high Peru which does not bring the blessing of the potato—I mean the cocoa tree, whence comes cocaine. The leaf is chewed by young and old. Some doctors say it is very bad for the people of Peru. The infantile death rate is high, and they say few old persons are to be found. Other doctors aver that the cocoa leaf is very good for the peasants. I am inclined to take a view between the two opinions. I met a man in Cuzco who was running a grocery store, and Professor Giessecke told me they had very good proofs in that town that he was a hundred and fifty years old. He sold me chocolate and also cocoa leaves. I chewed the leaves to try to cure an ulcer in my stomach, and they helped me more than all the medicines of civilization that I had tried.—Peter MacQueen in National Magazine.

The Dream Lion.

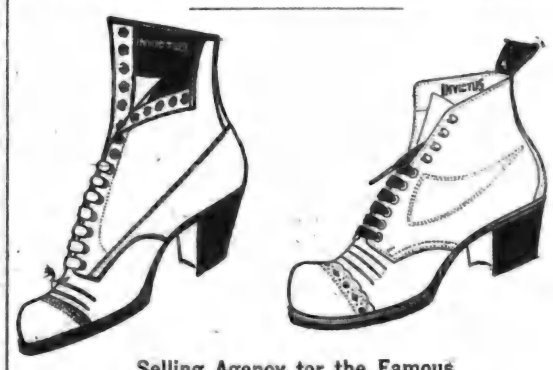
A Vienna professor is credited with saying that dreams are usually wish fulfilments. Maybe so. What about that childish dream in which the ferocious lion comes bounding along behind you, and you run as boy never ran before, and the lion closes the gap little by little, and then, all of a sudden, your legs grow limp and your muscles turn to water and your feet fray out and the lion leaps and you awake with a yell if your voice isn't paralyzed, and everybody in the house wakes with you?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The "Antique" Craze.

Those of us who can afford it steal and borrow and beg the arms, the dress, the emotions of Greece and Rome. Too often we hang their rotting trophies upon our walls, ignorant of their origin, unacquainted with their meaning and not even sympathetic with the emotions that produced them, bent only upon the paltry respectability that their presence argues.—World's Work.

Noah Identified.

"Why do you sign your name Norah?" asked a teacher of one of the Chinese boys in his class. "Don't you know that Norah is a girl's name?"



"Oh, no," was the reply. "Norah is the name of the famous American who built the ark."—Youth's Companion.

A Safe Proposition.

I lay it down as a safe proposition that the fellow who every little while has to break into the baby's bank for car fare isn't going to evolve into a Baron Rothschild.—Philip D. Armour.

ORANGEVILLE — THE HOUSE OF QUALITY

McCluskey-Leader

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Presbyterian Manse, Zina St., by Rev. W. M. Morris, on Wednesday, Dec. 30th, when Miss Alverda Beatrice Leader, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. T. Leader, of Amaranth, became the bride of Watson McCluskey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCluskey, of Mono. The happy couple left on the 6.15 train on a short honeymoon trip. The bride travelled in a smart navy blue military suit and black velvet hat with white wings and wore the groom's gift, Persian lamb furs.

Golden Wedding

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Robins on Sarah St. was the scene of a happy gathering on New Year's Day when the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding was celebrated. They were married in the Village of Mono Mills. Since that time they have resided nearly forty-five years in the township of Adjala and over five years in this town. The wedding was quietly celebrated, the guests consisting of members of the family and Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Robinson. A very pleasant feature of the occasion was the presentation to the bride and groom by the members of the family of a purse containing over $200.

Mr. and Mrs. Robins have seven sons, John, Joseph and Trueman, living in Adjala, Louis and William, of Orangeville, Norman and Albert, of Saskatoon, and seven daughters, Mrs. Robert and Mrs. Emerson Cole, of Adjala, Mrs. Hayes, in the West, Mrs. Roche, of Boston, Mrs. Rathwell, of Moose Jaw, Mrs. Crew, of Detroit, and Miss Aggie, of Winnipeg, Man. The many friends of the happy couple join in wishing them many years of life and joy.

Mrs. Mortimer's Funeral

The funeral of the late Mrs. Richard Mortimer, whose death at the home of her daughter in Toronto was reported in last week's issue, was held from the Baptist Church to Greenwood Cemetery on Saturday afternoon. The remains were brought here from Toronto on Saturday morning and taken from the C. P. R. station to the Baptist Church. The funeral service was held in the church at 3.30 p.m., the pastor, Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas, officiating. The pallbearers were three sons-in-law, Messrs. J. B. McCormick, E. Reeve and S. G. Barton, of Toronto, and Messrs. D. B. Brown, Wesley South and Rich. Robinson, representing Orangeville Lodge I.O.O.F. There were many beautiful floral tributes, including a circle from the family, and sprays from Mr. and Mrs. Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. Jecks, Mr. and Mrs. Shannon, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson, Mrs. McDonald, Miss Thomas, Miss Nichol and the Mission Band of the Baptist Church. During her long residence in Orangeville Mrs. Mortimer was a devoted member of the Baptist Church and a faithful worker in the Mission Band. She was an honest, Godly living woman, who enjoyed the respect and confidence of her friends. The sympathy of the latter goes out to her family in their bereavement.

D. R. Galbraith's Death.

Daniel R. Galbraith, a onetime resident of Orangeville, passed away at his home in Hockley village on Tuesday, Dec. 29th, at the ripe age of 81 years. Deceased was born in Scarboro township, but moved to Mono when quite a young man. He farmed on the Prince of Wales Road for many years, subsequently moving to Orangeville where he engaged in the milling business. He had lived in Hockley for the last twenty years. In his younger days he was energetic and public-spirited and filled various positions of trust in the community. During his long career he made many warm friends, who will deeply regret his death. The late Mr. Galbraith was twice married and he leaves a widow and grown-up family by the first wife. They are Albert E., and George R., of Moosomin, Sask., Daniel E., of Portland, Ore., James R., of Lambeth, Marguretta A., of Regina, Sask., and Mrs. J. Dale, of Caledon. The widow and family have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement. The funeral was held to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Saturday afternoon. Mr. D. B. Langford, student in charge of Mono East Parish, conducted the services at the house and grave.

CALEDON.

On Monday evening, Dec. 28th, a largely attended and successful entertainment was held at the S. S. No. 9 School. Under the leadership of our highly esteemed teacher, Miss Bertha Nesbitt, of Credit Forks, the children of the school gave a most delightful programme. It consisted of patriotic songs, drills and recitations. The older girls and boys of the vicinity also took part in the entertainment. The most important part of the programme was the beautiful Irish play "Pat's Dilemma," which was played by Messrs. Harvey Speers, Murray Speers, John McArthur, Jackson Glassford and the Misses B. Nesbitt, E. Green and E. Speers. Other dialogues by C. Giles, A. Rayburn and others created great laughter. Splendid recitations were given by Miss Margaret Nesbitt, Miss M. Speers and Mr. Meredith McKim. The chairman, Mr. John McCormick, made an excellent speech, congratulating the teacher for being the means of providing such a fine entertainment. Mr. James Hilliard, our genial young Councilman, also made a fine speech. The proceeds amounted to a little less than $25.

A beautiful "Good-night Song" was sung by the school children at the close, after which Santa Claus, who appeared on the scene during the evening, distributed gifts from the beautifully decorated Christmas Tree. The school was also tastefully decorated. The pupils presented their beloved teacher with a fountain pen for a Christmas gift. We shall hope to have another such concert next year.

ALTON.

In Science Hall on New Year's night the children of Alton Public School repeated the programme which they gave at the Patriotic Concert a short time previously. The children repeated their drills and dialogues in excellent style. The audience was large, completely filling the hall. The boys were dressed in khaki uniform and sang the soldiers' songs. "It's a long, long way to Tipperary" and to France and they sang them with an enthusiasm that was infectious and caused the audience to cheer heartily.

We noticed that several of Alton's young people were home on New Year's Day visiting relatives or friends in the village. Among them were Miss M. Lemon, daughter of Mr. L. Lemon, the Misses Culligan and their brother, Mr. Chas. Culligan from Stratford; Miss Laura Young, of Toronto, visiting with her uncle, Mr. W. White; Mr. Robt. Algie jr. from Toronto, and Mr. Arthur Hawkins, of the C.P.R., London, who spent the New Year with his parents.

The township council was elected by acclamation, but the electors of our village are in the throes of an election for police trustees. The candidates nominated were the old trustees, Alex. Patterson, L. Lemon and Wm. Rowcliffe, who are seeking a renewal of the confidence of our ratepayers. They are opposed by George Hall and Owen Finnegan.

The Alton Knitting Mills have started to run day and night. We understand that Mr. J. M. Dods, the hustling proprietor, has landed another big order for underwear for the British soldiers. We learn that the finishing department of the new mill in Orangeville was opened this week and that Mr. Dods expects to have the Orangeville factory running full blast in the course of a few weeks.

Mail Carriers' Complaint

One of the mail route carriers informs us that some of the patrons on his route do not keep the road opened to their mail boxes. This should be done, as it is almost impossible for the carrier to clear a way to the boxes and succeed in delivering the mail on time. We feel sure people served by the mail routes will attend to this matter once they understand that it means earlier delivery of their mails.

Hall-Root.

On Wednesday of last week, Dec. 30th, at five o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Wake, Seymore Farm, Violet Hill, well known and highly respected citizens of that community, was solemnized the marriage of their niece, Miss Evelyn Root, to Mr. C. Leslie Hall, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hall, of Shelburne. As the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, rendered by Miss May Hall, sister of the groom, floated through the rooms the bridal party passed under an overhead arch of evergreens festooned with trimmings and fragrant flowers. Rev. G. Coulter, pastor of the Mulmur Methodist church, spoke the words which united the two hearts for the remainder of life's journey. The ceremony was performed in the presence of about sixty invited guests. The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of white chiffon, trimmed with pearls, with underdress of white satin and carried a bouquet of white carnations and maidenhair fern. She was given away by her uncle, H. S. Wake. The bridesmaid, Miss Ethel Wake, was attired in white ninon, trimmed with roses, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom and groomsman, Mr. Wilfred Hall, brother of the former, wore the usual conventional black. The Simpson twins, of Toronto, Misses Nora and Flora, acted as flower girls and ring bearers and were dressed in white with pink trimmings. Immediately after the ceremony and congratulations and during the signing of the register Miss Winnifred Canning sang a well-rendered solo entitled "Answer." A bounteous and delicious wedding dinner was then served, the table fairly groaning beneath its weight of rich viands. The remainder of the evening was most pleasantly spent in a social manner. The happy couple left Shelburne on the evening train on Thursday for a short wedding trip to Toronto, Brantford and other points, the bride wearing the gift of the groom, a set of coon furs. Upon their return they will take up their residence on the groom's farm, two miles east of Shelburne. A fine array of presents attested to the high esteem in which the young couple are held and will serve as life long mementoes. The gift from the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Wake, was a Mason & Risch piano, and that of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hall, a handsome oak bedroom suit. Their many friends wish them a long, pleasant and prosperous life.

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

Hilliard-Brinkman

A very pleasant event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Brinkman, Erin township, on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 30th, when their eldest daughter, Myrtle Adella, was united in marriage to Mr. William G. Hilliard, of Caledon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Armstrong, of Alton, in the presence of the immediate relatives of both parties. Promptly at 3 o'clock the bridal couple took their places beneath a pretty arch with two wedding bells in the centre. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of white silk with tunic of shadow lace. The room was prettily decorated with pink and white carnations. After receiving the congratulations of the assembled guests, the happy couple led the way to the dining room, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served. The bride was the recipient of a number of pretty and useful presents. The groom's gift was a furlined coat. The young couple start out in life accompanied by the good wishes of a large circle of friends.

Johnston-Menary.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Menary, lot 6, con. 3, Amaranth, on Wednesday, Dec. 30th, when their eldest daughter, Margaret Gertrude, was united in marriage to Mr. James Morrison Johnston, of North Amaranth. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. R. Bell, of Laurel, in the presence of about seventy-five guests. Promptly at 5.30 o'clock the bridal couple entered the parlor to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Hazel Trimble, cousin of the bride, and took their places under a beautifully decorated arch of evergreens and wedding bells. The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in allover shadow lace over white satin with pearl trimmings and carried a large bouquet of bridal roses and lily of the valley. After the ceremony and congratulations from the assembled guests, who were principally near relatives of the bride and groom, all repaired to the dining room where a dainty wedding repast was served. Toasts were proposed and were honored in happy speeches, expressing the felicitations of the friends and the heartiest good wishes for the newly wedded couple. The bride was the recipient of many useful and pretty gifts. The groom's gift was a set of furs and to the pianiste a pearl brooch. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston have gone to Toronto and points west on a short wedding trip. The bride's travelling costume was of navy blue and black velvet hat with large plume to match. The Banner joins the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Johnston in extending its best wishes. Both young people are popular in the community and many good wishes are theirs.

On Monday evening, Dec. 28th, Laurel Presbyterian choir met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Lang and gave the bride a kitchen shower.

Wells-Leader

Mr. Thos. Wells, of Shelburne, and Miss Sarah Leader, of Orangeville, were quietly married at the Methodist parsonage in Shelburne, on Wednesday, Dec. 30th. Rev. Mr. Caldwell was the officiating clergyman.

Lawrie Bros.' Concert

The concert given by Lawrie Bros., the widely-known Scottish entertainers, in the Opera House on Wednesday night of last week under the auspices of St. Andrew's S.S. orchestra was a decided success. Local talent at its best was represented by Miss Clara Hulse, the Misses Hogg and Miss Alberta Kearns and the glowing tribute, which Mayor Campbell, who occupied the chair, paid to the home artists was well deserved. The programme commenced with an excellently rendered selection by St. Andrew's orchestra, one of three numbers given by this organization. Two violin solos by Miss Hulse were enthusiastically received by the audience, which was insistent in its demands for encores. A two piano duet by Misses Alberta Kearns and Vera Hogg and a duet by the Misses Hogg, both creditably rendered, completed the amateur portion of the programme. Miss Marion Lawrie and her two brothers sang exceedingly well and the older boy's acting was very good indeed, the three making a combination of talented children very hard to beat. Master Lawrie's humorous speech at the wedding of Sandy McNab and little Marion's rendering of "Coming thro' the Rye" were excellent. Character songs were not lacking, the brothers singing "Heeland Chinee" and "Constable Jack McGraw" in costume. The hit of the evening was a skit on the now famous "Tipperary" entitled "It's a long way to go to Paris." The boys were dressed in old-fashioned Irish costume and in their green swallow-tail coats, white satin court breeches and lace ruffles made very gallant Paddies. The concert was brought to a close with the National Anthem, after a patriotic song had been given by the children, introducing "The Minstrel Boy," "A Hundred Pipers," "The Maple Leaf," "Rule Britannia" and "Onward Christian Soldiers." St. Andrew's orchestra is entitled to the thanks of our citizens for giving them the opportunity to enjoy such an excellent concert. We understand the proceeds amounted to $70.

WHITTINGTON.

The Whittington Branch of the Dufferin Women's Institute will hold its Social Evening at the home of Mrs. Bennett on Tuesday evening, Jan. 12th. Meeting will begin at 8 o'clock. A good debate is promised. Everybody welcome.

MONO MILLS.

A splendid contribution has again been forwarded by the Treasurer of the local Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society to the head office in Toronto. Although there have been many demands on the people of the village and vicinity this fall, the Collectors for this branch of Mission Work have been very successful in all the districts that have been canvassed. The sincere thanks of the officers are tendered to the Collectors and also to all those who so generously contributed. The following are the Collectors and the amounts collected:— Misses I. M. Potter and Alma Dowling, $13.00; Misses Ethel Allen and Ella Taylor, $12.25; Misses Maggie Hackett and Nina Quigley, $10.15; Misses Annie Atkinson and Ella May Henry, $9.50; Misses B. McCulloch and I. Drummond, $8.20; Misses M. Welwood and Eva Henry, $7.10; Misses Annie Holmes and V. Crombie, $4.75; Misses Bertha Stinson and Myrtle McMullen, $4.50; Collection at annual meeting, $5.03, making a total of $74.48. Two districts, the 1st and 2nd lines of Adjala and the 5th and 6th lines of Adjala, have not reported any collections.

Miss Ethel Mason has been engaged with Miss Annie Harvey as operators at the Telephone Exchange here.

Dr. Hazel Fagan left last week for Edmonton on work of inspection for the Dominion Government.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Moon, of Kelwood, Man., are spending a while with friends here.

Mr. Wm. Jackson, our enterprising miller, has installed a new roller for crushing grain. This system of crushing is meeting with the approval of a large number of successful stockmen, as it adds greatly to the nutritive value of the grain that is fed to all kinds of stock. Needless to say Mr. Jackson's endeavor to supply the needs of his many customers is highly appreciated and is bringing him a generous patronage.

Land deals of considerable importance have been put through here recently. Mr. James Kidd has bought Mr. Robert Arlow's farm and Mr. Arlow has purchased Mr. Geo. S. Jackson's farm property. Good prices were realized in both deals.

The meetings of the Branch of the Epworth League organized recently in connection with the Methodist Church are being well attended. The Society meets every Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock. All are welcome.

IN OLD LONDON

Seeing Wonders of the World's Greatest Metropolis.

Interesting Descriptive Letter from Lieut. H. B. McGuire of First Canadian Contingent.

Mr. and Mrs. B. McGuire, West Broadway, have received the following interesting letter from their son, Lieut. H. B. McGuire, of F. Company, 4th Battalion, of the First Canadian Contingent :—

Bustard Camp, Dec. 16th, 1914.
Dear Mother,—

An application for leave in order to take a trip to the Continent and have a look at the war at closer range was turned down for unknown reasons. However, Bill Bleakley and I made a hurried visit to London. We spent four days there and in order to see the place properly we should have been there for four months.

We made the Grand Hotel at Trafalgar Square our headquarters, as it seemed the most central place. We did not take time to plan a visit around the city, but just took things as they came. It is a very busy place indeed. The principal mode of travel is by the bus lines and there are thousands of these running in all directions. It costs a penny a ride. The taxis are as common as Ford cars in America. How the thousands of cars and cabs and the millions of people travel the streets in all directions with so few accidents is a marvel. Of course the "Bobby" handles the traffic at the corners and does it to perfection. We soon found ourselves safely seated in a carriage of some sort and left it to the driver to do the dodging. Every where we were greeted with the call to arms. Large streamers and recruiting notices are posted up everywhere. Soldiers are drilling in every space available, but amid it all business goes on as usual.

Our visit to the Zoological Gardens proved very interesting. It was on Sunday, our first day in London. We walked through Regent's Park, past Buckingham Palace and then took a bus to the Zoo. We always travelled on top of the bus in order to see the city as we journeyed along. We found the Zoo closed to all except members, but we received a special permit to enter. We were quite lucky in not having to elbow our way through a crowd of people. The Zoo is truly a wonderful place—the largest in the world. There the visitor may see animals, birds, insects, reptiles etc. from all parts of the world placed in their natural environment. Toronto's Zoo would be lost in one corner of this.

We spent most of our time visiting places of historic interest and the museums. One of the most interesting places visited was the Tower of London. It was here that many royal heads came in contact with the excutioner's axe. The Tower was first built by William the Conqueror, but was enlarged considerably in the 12th century. The walls and towers are in the different styles of architecture, which have flourished in England. Each tower is a stronghold in itself, but walls are built around the towers. Surrounding all is a great ditch, or moat, now dry, but at one time filled with water. The moat is now used as a parade ground for the troops stationed there. Tower Hill is where prisoners were beheaded. There are numerous towers each built for a special purpose. The Bell Tower, built in the 13th century is where Henry VIII. had the Bishop of Rochester imprisoned and where Queen Mary had her sister, Princess Elizabeth kept in confinement. It is also where Guy Fawkes and his fellow conspirators were confederned in 1605. The Traitor's Gate was a convenient landing place for prisoners from Westminster, brought along the Thames. Through this gate were taken Anne Boleyn, Katharine Howard, Lady Jane Grey and other notables in history for execution. The Crown jewels are kept in the Wakefield Tower. In a large double case are arranged the English regalia used at coronations and on State occasions. In the White Tower is the Chapel of St. John, and the Armoury. Here we had the pleasure of viewing ancient spears, swords, axes and armour belonging to the fighting kings of centuries ago. The display of ancient armour and arms is wonderfully large.

From the Tower we went to St. Paul's Cathedral. The first stone of the Cathedral was laid in 1675 and the building was completed in 1710. The architecture is most wonderful—only pictures could convey to you an idea of its beauty. At the west end of the south aisle is the Chapel of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. In the south transept are found the tombs of many of England's greatest men. Some of the most interesting tombs and monuments are those of General Gordon, Wellington, Lord Nelson, Lord Wolseley and Lord Roberts.

The United Service Museum, formerly known as Whitehall, has a wonderful collection of arms and armour, trophies of many an English victory. The first German machine gun captured in the present war is already on exhibition here. Whitehall has a very interesting history. There are numerous Whitehalls, but this one was used in many ways. It was for many years the residence of the Archbishop of York. Cardinal Wolsey made many alterations in the building. The palace was erected in 1240 for Henry III. and was sold in 1248 to the Archbishop of York. In 1536 it was made King's Manor. It was here that Charles I. was executed in 1649.

The National Gallery contains paintings representative of English and foreign schools of art. It was here that the suffragettes did such damage to some of the pictures. The paintings are wonderful and many of them are priceless. Some of the most valuable have been placed in vaults for protection in the event of Zeppelin raids. All the famous painters for centuries past are represented.

The British Museum is a tremendously large place and it would take the visitor many days to see everything. It is mostly a reference museum. Students were to be seen throughout the building, busy taking notes on different subjects. The exhibits are principally works of sculpture, works of art and articles in use amongst ancient peoples. Some of the exhibits from Egypt date back to 4000 years before Christ. Ancient Greece, Rome and Babylon are all represented. Especially interesting are the exhibits of manuscripts and books. These include many Bibles, among them the "Wicked Bible" and other early versions. The mummies and sculpture work of the ages preceding the Christian era were very interesting and one could not help wishing that time would permit him to study them in detail. We found altogether too much to look at for the limited time we could afford to spend.

Westminster Abbey held our close interest for the whole of one morning. Its architecture and fittings are the finest in the world. The roof is all carved stone. You will get a faint idea of its beauty from the views I sent you. I was interested in the classes of school children, who were being shown around the Abbey by their teachers, who lectured to them on the many interesting and historical features connected with the Abbey. The children were about the age of Alice and Louise. In the afternoon following these visits, the children are expected to write essays on their visit to the Abbey. I have certainly forgotten all the history I ever knew and lots more that I never knew, but these children would answer all questions asked them right off the reel. Here are to be seen the tombs of many sovereigns and monuments erected to the memory of famous men. The Chapel of St. Edward—Edward the Confessor—is a huge structure of imposing architectural design. Nearby are tombs of Henry III., Henry V., Edward III., Richard II., and their Queens. In Henry VII. Chapel there are many tombs. It is in this Chapel that the Order of the Bath meets. The Duke of Connaught is Grand Master of this Order. Across from the Grand Master's chair is the chair of the King and next to that was Lord Roberts'. Each member's seat is beautifully carved and each of the seventy-five seats differs in design. The banners of the members hang over the seats, each of which is adorned with the coat of arms of the house it represents. The Coronation Chair attracts a great deal of interest. Many of England's poets, painters, sculptors and other great men are buried here and monuments have been erected to their memory.

The last place of interest that we visited was Madame Tussaud's waxworks. This is quite a large building, with a beautifully decorated interior. An orchestra was playing and at first sight the building seemed crowded, but on looking closely we discovered that most of the figures were of wax. The work is very life-like and the figures are placed in natural positions. I approached a desk to purchase a program, but upon addressing myself to the lady in charge I discovered she was a beautiful wax doll. A patriotic setting of the King and the Kings of the allied powers with the fighting generals grouped about them quickly attracts the eye. Kings and Queens of ancient times are grouped along one side of the building. There are figures of famous generals and admirals, poets, and famous men and women of nearly every century are shown, each beautifully dressed in the costume appropriate to their calling and the age in which they lived. Some figures were seated and others standing around in the aisles. One of the pretty settings shows the King and Queen of Spain with their latest born child. The Napoleon Rooms are very interesting as is also the Chamber of Horrors. Here the eye of the visitor is greeted with groups of figures illustrating the six stages of wrong. First there is the Temptation, where a young man is tempted to take part in a game of cards. Then follow the End of the Game, Ruin, Revenge, Guilty or Not Guilty, which shows the man in the dock, the judge and jury, all very natural and lifelike and finally the Last Journey, in which the hangman is shown following the minister and the criminal to the scaffold. Groups of famous prisoners and scenes depicting the cruel deaths of ancient days were also shown.

In the evenings we went to the theatres. The streets are quite dark, with only a few street lights burning and these shaded so as to be less easily discerned from the Zeppelins in the event of an air raid. Once more it was a marvel to me how the numerous motor vehicles and pedestrians got along the streets. In the theatres everything is in full swing and most of the plays put on, especially in the vaudeville theatres, are of a patriotic nature. At the Hippodrome we saw a very fine play, entitled "Business as Usual," which opened with a harvest scene in France. The second act was staged in Whitehall, London, where a lady recruiting sergeant filled the leading role. The Germans rushed into the harvesters in all directions. A cavalry charge was both realistic and exciting, quite a number of cavalry horses participating right on the stage. Some of the patriotic songs which have made a hit are "Come on You Boys of London Town," "Are We Downhearted," "Fall In," and "Your King and Country Need You." There are about 500 theatres in London, but we only had time to visit three.

We returned to camp Thursday afternoon rather dreading the thought of living in the rain again. We had quite an experience reaching camp. We were delayed until after dark and it was 10.30 when our motor reached Bustard. We found the camp had been shifted out of the mud to a grassy plot. We were given full directions as to how we should reach our lines. A very dense fog was lying low over the Plain and though we were confident of our whereabouts we had to admit after an hour or two that we were lost. Finally we met a despatch rider who knew the country and he showed us to our lines. We heard the next morning that a lot of the boys were lost on the Plains that night.

I will write you again in a day or so.

Your Loving Son
HARRY.

Herald Angel Concert

The congregation of Herald Angel Church, Cardwell, was responsible for the giving of an excellent concert to a well-filled hall in the Opera House on New Year's night. The talent present was of an unusually high order and it is to be feared that the good people of Herald Angel were too ambitious to make a record in the matter of providing a high-class entertainment and consequently after paying the expenses of the artists they would not be very much to the good. However, be this as it may, the concert itself will rank among the very best ever given before an Orangeville audience. The chief part of the programme was furnished by Mr. Owen A. Smily, of Toronto. As an elocutionist and impressario Orangeville has not often seen Mr. Smily's equal. The finished and cultured manner in which he gave his selections and his faithful portrayal of the characters he sought to present marked him as an entertainer of the first rank and quite sustained the high reputation he has won for himself upon the public platform. Perhaps he excelled in the selection "Music in Three Flats" and in the selections he rendered in the French-Canadian, Scottish and Irish dialects. Miss Davidson, of Inglewood, delighted the audience with several very pretty songs, most tastefully rendered. As usual Miss Clara Hulse pleased every one with her violin solos. Miss Wright accompanied her in her usual accomplished manner. During the evening Miss Edith Anderson rendered a pianoforte solo in finished style. St. Mark's orchestra furnished several new selections and gave excellent service throughout the evening. The programme was quite lengthy and those who braved the inclement weather were certainly amply repaid for their trouble. Those responsible for the programme are to be congratulated on its excellence.

SHAW—MUNDELL.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place on December 30th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Mundell, Brampton, when their only daughter, Agnes Glassford, was united in marriage to Mr. George Shaw. Rev. Mr. Butler, brother-in-law of the groom, officiated. At half past twelve the bride entered the drawing room, escorted by her father to the strains of Meddelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. Capt. Adams, of Orangeville. During the signing of the register "Because" was beautifully rendered by Miss M. Barrett, of Thornbury. The bride was gowned in silk crepe trimmed with shadow lace and charmeuse silk. After partaking of a dainty dejeuner the happy couple left on the afternoon train for New York, Boston and other points, the bride travelling in a suit of green caracul with hat to match. — Brampton Conservator.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE EXPERIMENTAL UNION.

The Annual Meeting of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union will be held at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, on the 12th and 13th of January.

One of the most important features of the Experimental Union is always its co-operative work amongst the farmers. These experiments have become very general throughout th Province, and it is through the medium of this organization that som of the best varieties of farm crops have been introduced, and are now grown extensively, as for instance the O.A.C. No. 21 Barley, the O.A C. No. 72 Oats, etc. The co-operative work of the past year has been carried out along six different lines and the results should be of much interest and value.

Particular attention will be given this year to the increased production of food stuffs. There was never a time in the history of the British Empire when such close attention should be given to increased production of the real necessities of life. The following are some of the subjects which are to be discussed at the annual meeting: "Ontario's Opportunity in Food Production under Present Conditions;" "Bean Growing in Ontario;" "Canada's Chance in Heavy Horse Breeding;" "Some Important Ways in which Farm Life in Ontario Might Be Improved;" "Agricultural Information Gleaned on a Recent Trip to New Zealand, Australia, China and Japan;" etc.

All sessions of the Experimental Union to be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, January 12th and 13th, are open to any person interested in agriculture, and every one is welcome and invited to take part in the Meeting. Cheap rates have been arranged for on the certificate plan. For fuller particulars and a copy of the program apply to the Secretary, C. A. Zavitz, Agricultural College, Guelph, Ontario.

Louis Starkman laid a charge before T. C. Hamilton, P.M., against W. J. Watt and Joseph Greenwood for alleged assault. A dispute arose over an umbrella Starkman borrowed last summer from Watt and which the latter went to get the other day. A few hot words came followed by Watt and Starkman taking hold of each other. Mrs. Starkman attempted to interfere and Greenwood shoved her back. Starkman first laid a common complaint of assault, but has now changed it to a civil action. The magistrate held a hearing on Saturday when he dismissed the case with costs.—Star & Vidette.

MAKES PERFECT BREAD

SALISBURY PLAIN IS HISTORIC GROUND

Description of Where the Canadian Contingent Is Now Encamped

Have Plenty of Room.—Monuments of Druids Add Touch of Romance to the Place.

Rev. E. W. Pickford, Brighton, Ont., Rural Dean of Northumberland and Peterboro, and formerly rector of Mono West Parish, supplies the following description of Salisbury Plain, where the Canadian contingent is encamped:—

R. H. Barham, the author of the Ingoldsby Legends, thus describes the present home of our Canadian soldiers:—

"O Salisbury Plain is bleak and bare,
At least so I've heard many people declare,
Tho' I must confess that I never was there.
Not a shrub nor a bush nor a tree can you see.
No hedges, no ditches, no gates, no stiles,
Much less a house or a cottage for miles.
It's a very bad thing to be caught in the rain
When night's coming on upon Srlisbury Plain."

But the present writer has been there, having been born in the ancient city of Salisbury, still called in its official municipal documents the "Borough of New Sarum." Salisbury has an interesting history, being founded in the early days of King Henry III., the cathedral being the centre from which the city grew. The city of Old Sarum is represented now by gigantic earthworks on the summit of a hill a mile and a half due north of Salisbury. This was a fortress of the ancient Britons. It was successively a Roman fortification and a Saxon town but reached its height of importance in Norman times, the first Earl of Salisbury being created by William the Conqueror. This was no ancestor of the present Marquis of Salisbury, there having been several creations of the title, the present family of Cecil dating from James I. A later creation than that of William I.'s was that of William Longsword, Earl of Salisbury, a natural son of Henry II. It was in his time that quarrels between the clergy and soldiery determined the Bishop (Richard Poore) to build him a new cathedral away from the rival soldiers; and the present beautiful structure was commenced. The old city soon decayed, the civil population following the Church, drawn there (so the old chronicler reports) "by beefe, bread and beere." But the old earthworks still stand, grand and solemn. Mounting up a steep declivity you come to the outer ring a mile in circumference, and look down into a very deep ditch or fosse, above which towers the second ring or bank. Inside of this is the site of the old town once filled with streets and houses, a cathedral, barracks, and, it is said, four parish churches. It is now a cultivated field inside the ring which, on the inner side is some twelve feet high. Crossing the field by the wagon track you come upon another fosse as deep, or nearly so, as the first, and the inner or third ring stands up some twenty feet from the level and about fifty from the bottom of the fosse.

A Former Citadel.

Inside this was the citadel, the remains of the gateway alone remaining, except certain foundations of the old buildings recently excavated. The bank inside this ring is about fifteen feet high, and in this area was the castle, its courtyard, dungeons and offices. But all this is a long way from Salisbury Plain. Two roads go from Salisbury to the plain, one to the north and one to the west, known as the Devizes Road, the edge of the plain being roughly about seven or eight miles from the city. The extent of the plain may thus be imagined calculating the divergence of those two roads. The Devizes Road, after passing miles of farm lands with no villages, comes on the plain at a place where stands a public house called the Druid's Head. The other road passes along lovely valleys, in one of which is a house in which tradition says Charles II. lay hid for some time after the Battle of Worcester. Reaching the plain, which is a high plateau, you see before you miles and miles of undulating country, bleak and barren; as well bears out the description with which this article commences. The Druid's Head is the last house you see. The acreage I never learnt. Branching north from the Devizes Road one takes a mere track towards the great central plain of attraction, Stonehenge. This is an old Druidical temple composed of immense stones, the largest being said to be twenty feet high. They were originally formed of consentive circles of triliths, two upright stones with a third across the top. Some distance to the east is a solitary stone over which the sun rises on the longest day of the year, and in the centre is the flat altar stone on which the Druids offered their human sacrifices. The stones, not all of them quarried anywhere near Salisbury, are embedded in the earth, being cut with a sort of bolster at one side to prevent their falling over. The top stone is secured by a mortise and tennon, the tennon being in the top of the upright stone.

Strange Burying Places.

Something like a mile from this monument is a circle of tumuli or barrows, as they are called, huge mounds of earth now covered with grass, and outside these again is another circle of similar barrows. These are burying places, some of which contain but one skeleton, others again, several laid like the spoking of a wheel with the feet toward the centre and weapons and tools laid between them. Coming towards Stonehenge we cross a long hollow place or shallow valley which is said to have been used as a race course by the Romans, the sloping sides being admirable grand stands for spectators. Here and there across the plain can be seen small circular clumps of hazel bushes, perfectly round, with a little bank at the edge of them. This is all that can be seen in the way of trees, for the rest it is grass, brown grass growing in a poor soil not more than a few inches deep. The military camp lies some miles from Stonehenge in the south-east, near the village of Burford. I do not think it can be seen from the stones, but the group of aeroplane sheds some miles eastward are visible. Here and there can now be seen the artillery ranges, and possibly in Summer the white tents of some temporary camp. Here somewhere in this vast area are housed our Canadian boys finishing their preparation for the field of honor and glory in the fight for Old England and freedom. The soil, as I pointed out, is very poor and only a few inches deep. The subsoil is chalk. The grass is short, crisp and brown and on it are pastured large flocks of sheep, the famous South Down muttons, with black faces and black legs, the wool of which is no doubt clothing some of our soldiers at the front. From this picture perhaps we may try to gather some idea of the home of our soldiers and their daily life of drill, skirmishing and rifle and artillery practice in the days before they are ordered off to the war.

When the Liver Gets Torpid

Mrs. C. L. Cook, 243 Tenth street, Brandon, Man., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last four years for liver trouble, and can say that I have had great satisfaction and help from them. I find that I do not need any doctor if I use them when the liver gets torpid, and believe that they are exactly suited for my case. My husband has used them for kidney trouble with good results, and my daughter in Winnipeg has been helped a great deal by the use of these pills. We say we can't keep house without them, and have cheated the doctors here out of a good many visits. I think Dr. Chase's medicines are just the thing, and have recommended them to many people who have used them with good results."

By keeping the liver active and the bowels regular Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills prevent and cure such disorders as biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and headache. One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SOME NEW YEAR'S ADVICE.

Don't grieve over spilt milk while there's one cow left in the pasture.

New Year greetings are greetings of good will. How they soften hard hearts, purify base desires, sweeten bitter thoughts, and make every deed purer and tenderer. Let hearts expand, sympathies enlarge, and good will reign. Let benedictions drop from lips, and substantial gifts fall from overflowing hands. Make cheerless homes radiant, homeless hearts to thrill with unspeakable gladness. Forgive your enemies. Bury the past. Rise above the mean and petty resentments which you have harbored against those who have used you well. Be generous.

An Orange Concert.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, JAN. 21st, 1915.

A Government Audit.

Shelburne Council has decided to employ a Government Auditor for the purpose of making a special audit of the books of the municipality. The audit, which will be made as early as possible, will cover the years 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914.

The Council Vacancies.

Nominations took place on Tuesday for the purpose of filling the three vacant seats in the Orangeville Council. Over a dozen candidates were nominated, but up to the time of going to press John Bennett, landlord of the Hotel Alexandra, J. Morrison, of the Dufferin House, ex-Postmaster John Park, Thos. Henderson and James Irwin are the only men who have taken the trouble to qualify.

Peel County Council

The following members compose Peel County Council for 1915 :—Anson McCabe, Albion; F. N. Leavens, Bolton; A. H. Milner and W. Beatty, Brampton; Reuben Lightheart, Guy Bell and Hamilton Lyons, Chinguacousy; Chas. Elliott, Port Credit; Chas. H. Falconer, Streetsville; John Porter, Toronto Gore; Wm. Rutledge, D. H. McCaugherty and L. H. Pallett, Toronto Township; Thos. Quinn and David Armstrong, Caledon.

Shelburne's Post Office.

Last week's Free Press contained an excellent cut of Shelburne's new post office. The building is an imposing stone structure, erected at a cost of about $30,000. The stone was supplied from quarries close to Shelburne and the Free Press states that the government architects have pronounced it of superior quality and pleasing color. In fact they stated that they did not know as good building stone elsewhere in Canada. Our cotem adds that it understands that the only stone which will compete with the Shelburne product comes from Indiana and is therefore subject to a heavy duty in addition to extra freight charges, which make it cost about $140 a car more to lay down in Toronto.

Caledon Officials

Caledon township council reappointed nearly all of the 1914 officials for this year. E. H. Delaney was appointed assessor of the west side at a salary of $85, and M. C. Hillock for the east side at a salary of $70; Spence McDonald, collector of the west side, at a salary of $90, and George Giles of the east side at a salary of $70. S. Kearns and J. McHugh were appointed auditors at $12.50 each. The Board of Health is composed of the reeve, the clerk, John Nesbitt and Dr. McKinnon, the latter being paid $25 as Medical Health Officer. W. G. Morris, of Charleston, was made sanitary inspector.

BOY STOLE $79.50.—GOT SIX MONTHS.

Employed as a Farm Hand with Mr. Thomas Williamson, Chinguacousy

Few people are mean enough to commit a theft of so contemptible a nature as that committed by a young man named Harry Wilson, who has been employed as hired man with Mr. Thomas. Williamson, Chinguacousy. Mr. Williamson is one of the collectors who were appointed to collect contributions for the Belgian Relief Fund in his section of the township. Last Sunday night he and his family went to church. Mr. Williamson had $73 in bills and a cheque for $6.50 as the fruit of his collections and left the money in his trousers pocket in the bedroom, but took the precaution to lock the door of the room before leaving for church. On Monday morning he found that the money had been taken from his pocket. He questioned Wilson, who knew that Mr. Williamson had the money, but he denied having taken it. Mr. Williamson kept an eye on the young man and when he left for Brampton on Tuesday on the pretext of taking his washing to the laundry, he notified the police, who watched the railway stations. Wilson was caught while purchasing a ticket for Georgetown. He still denied having taken the money, but it was found concealed in the lining of his overcoat. He then confessed and when brought before the county judge after being committed for trial by the magistrate, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to six months in Central Prison with hard labor. He is about twenty-four years of age, claims to be a native of Cobalt and a member of the Presbyterian Church, and stated that he had never before been convicted of any crime. A revolver, which was not loaded, was on him when he was searched. The money stolen was returned to Mr. Williamson. The worst feature of the case was the fact that the man knew the money was intended for the relief of the Belgians.

THE SUNNY SOUTH

Summer Temperature in Florida in Month of January.

An Interesting Letter from Former Resident of Adjala.

The Banner is in receipt of the following interesting letter from Mr. John T. Goodeve, of Miami, Fla., a son of Mr. Robt. Goodeve, of this town :—

Miami, Fla., Jan. 12th, 1915.

Dear Editor:—

Will you allow me a few lines to my friends and your readers through the columns of my old home paper.

For the past eight years I have been living in a northern Minnesota city, namely Two Harbors, where I worked in a large departmental store until Nov. 18th, 1914. Times having become very dull, I decided to make a change and accordingly started for the Sunny South. We had a rather enjoyable trip. I have considered the writing of this letter for some time, thinking that possibly some of our friends would be interested to hear from us in the south.

My little son, Galbraith, and I have enjoyed a very pleasant winter so far. In fact it is just as warm at the time of writing as any June day in Ontario, with the temperature ranging from 75 to 85 in the shade. There has been quite a heavy rainfall during the past three weeks, but the natives say it is exceptional for this time of year. No doubt it is hard to imagine such a temperature as this unless one has experienced it. Just now is the great harvest time of the south, shipping out all kinds of fruits and vegetables, such as grape fruit, oranges, pineapples, lemons, strawberries, limefruit, ripe tomatoes, green onions, cucumbers, radish, etc. All the vegetables that folk raise in Ontario in May and June are to be seen on the Florida markets to-day. Sometimes I have to stop to consider, myself, before I can decide whether it is July 12th or January 12th. The temperature here would not decide the question, although I suppose the Ontario readers of your paper can determine this matter without a moment's consideration. It is simply grand to go through some of the parks and groves and get the sweet odors from the different varieties of roses and shrubs and to see fruits of all kinds in their natural state. It affords much pleasure to one who has never had such an experience. My boy can run and play barefooted and I enjoy a good, old-fashioned swim on the shore of the briny ocean quite frequently. These are some of the pleasures of life in this latitude that we find very invigorating.

I have a position here in a cash grocery department, which is doing a large business, notwithstanding the fact of war and hard times in general. Miami is a great winter resort city. Times are good here, but not as good, I am told, as in former years. People come from all over the universe to spend the winter here. I had a short conversation with a Mrs. Miller from Newberry, Muskoka. She has been living in the Western States and is spending the winter months in the south. Here are some of our figures illustrative of the prices and high cost of living here :— Flour, per cwt., $8 ; sugar, per cwt. $8 ; potatoes, per bus., $1.40 ; new potatoes, per peck, 35c ; butter per lb., 50c ; eggs, per doz., 60c ; grape fruit, per doz., 25c ; large oranges, per doz., 25c. Other fruits and vegetables are all reasonably cheap.

Now I will conclude with the hope that I have not taken too much of your space and that your readers will be interested in the few items that I have written. I might say that we are both well. Kind remembrances to all and best wishes for a prosperous New Year.

From an old friend and reader of The Banner.

SOLDIERS' CHRISTMAS.

Feasting and Merrymaking on Salisbury Plain.

Canadians Had a Happy and Jolly Day.

Mr. and Mrs. B. McGuire have received the following letter from their son, Lieut. Harry B. McGuire, who is at Salisbury Plain with the first Canadian Contingent. In his letter, Lieut. McGuire describes in interesting manner how the Canadians spent Christmas Day. His letter reads :—

The first Christmas I spent in England was truly a merry one. Of course I thought longingly of the folks at home and wished to be with them, but as we happened to be on this expedition at Christmas time we simply had to make the best of it. The day before Christmas I rode with the transport officer to Salisbury. My Company was all on various duties which did not require my presence. The day was cold, frosty and bright. We rode across the Plains to Salisbury. We had six waggons in which to load up Christmas supplies for the men. I had a fine horse and enjoyed the trip very much. We made our purchases in Salisbury and proceeded from there to Amesbury, where we had tea and dinner with friends. The English are wonderful entertainers and we are constantly receiving invitations for week-end visits or for the day, which we often accept. We arrived in camp about 11 p.m. feeling fine after our 35 mile ride. I have been doing a lot of riding lately, otherwise I should have been very much fatigued after the day's outing.

A large mail arrived in camp in the evening and a great many Canadian Christmas boxes, principally eatables, were received, so that there were a great many parties throughout the battalion until the wee sma' hours of Christmas morning. "Lights Out" had not been observed in the least. For myself it was quite 2 a. m. when I retired after a pleasant party in Lieut. Dyas' tent. Christmas morning broke quite clear. No snow of course, but we were thankful that there was no rain. Festivities started early. I spent an hour or two with my men, wishing them good cheer and they were cheery. Right here I might say that we have the dandiest bunch of men, and "F" Company has made a name for itself for efficiency. The officers entertained the men Christmas day and we certainly did not hesitate at anything. We had erected a large marquee with tables and benches to seat 500 men. We made two dinners of it to get over the battalion at 1 p. m. Our Company dined with the left half of the battalion and it was a great dinner—chicken soup, roast mutton, chicken (500 lbs. of it), brussels sprouts and other vegetables and genuine English plum pudding (500 lbs.). The tables were laden with apples, oranges, nuts, pickles, etc., as well as smokes for all who wished to smoke. The Y.M.C.A. and The Daily Telegraph supplied cigarettes. The officers and sergeants carved the meats and waited on the men and kept refilling their plates until they could not eat any more. The Duchess of Connaught sent a handsome gift to every Canadian—a box of Canadian maple sugar. We had speeches and Christmas greetings from many generals, Canada's Premier and Governor General, and other high officials. Three cheers rang out from the companies every few minutes for commanding officers and company officers, sergeants and themselves until everyone was in great spirits. We had a piano in the tent which did great service. The dinner lasted from 12 until 3 p.m. The officers had another big dinner at 7 p.m. Between dinners and parties everyone had a high old feed on Christmas. At 7 p.m. a concert was given in the Y.M.C.A. tent by a London Concert Troupe of the best professionals, who are touring among the soldiers, giving free concerts. With a few fancy dress parades in the evening headed by the bugle band the day was brought to a brilliant close with everyone tired out. I should add that there were Christmas services in the church tent on Christmas morning. I think every Canadian soldier enjoyed the Christmas in England. Perhaps the next one will be in Berlin.

The 4th Battalion is lucky in having a commanding officer who can command like Lt. Col. Labatt. He will not stand for any fooling and everyone must do his part. In every respect he has, with the help of his officers and the co-operation of all the men, made the 4th Battalion the best in the 1st Brigade. Many times has the Battalion been complimented upon its work along different lines. The 4th Battalion is in the 1st Brigade, which is considered the best in the Division. We expect the 1st will be the first Brigade that will move up to the front and everyone is working for that honor. Our Brigade is not the kind that will stay behind, but must get up where the bullets are thickest.

I received in to-day's mail the first copy of Orangeville's new paper, the Orangeville Scout. It is published by the Boy Scouts there and has four pages of the local happenings of special interest to Dufferin County soldiers. I showed it all round our Officers' Mess and they thought it was great. It is all hand made and shows the energy and painstaking qualities of the scouts. I appreciated the copy greatly and have passed it on to some of the home boys, but will get it back to keep.

OAT STEALING.

Is Charge Against Peter and Harry Cooper.

Accused Arrested this Week and Lodged in Orangeville Gaol.

Late on Wednesday night or early on Thursday morning about 150 bushels of oats, some buckwheat and chop feed were stolen from the barn on Mr. John Harshaw's farm, lot 8, Prince of Wales Road, Mono. The theft was discovered Thursday morning by John M. Harshaw, who lives on the farm, when he went to the barn to chore up. Mr. Harshaw lost no time in placing the matter in the hands of the local authorities. Armed with a search warrant High Constable Marshall spent Friday and Saturday driving in Mono running down what proved to be fruitless clues. On Monday Marshall got a clue, which caused him to visit Peter Cooper's place at Mono Centre. Here he discovered about 70 bushels of the missing oats, a bag of buckwheat and two bags of chop, also taken from Harshaw's place. The officer took Cooper into custody and lodged him in the county gaol here for safe keeping. Tuesday morning Marshall took the train for Alliston and shortly after his arrival learned that Harry Cooper, of Angus, a son of the man he had arrested, had driven into town from the Mono side on Saturday with a load of oats, which he had sold to Enos Brett, an Alliston grain dealer. Brett paid for the load of 68 bushels by cheque and as it was after bank hours Cooper was obliged to go home without cashing his cheque. After visiting the Bank Marshall hired a rig and set out for Cooper's home. Meantime Cooper came to Alliston, made an unsuccessful attempt to cash his cheque and then left the town very suddenly. When Marshall learned this upon his return, he suspected that Cooper had gone to his father's, telephoned Mr. Harshaw here to that effect and also communicated with Mr. J. A. McFadden, general merchant, at Mono Centre. McFadden and a young man named Ernest Bradshaw started for Cooper's upon receipt of the Constable's message and almost surprised the younger Cooper in the act of unharnessing his horses. He made his escape and started across the fields in a westerly direction with the two young men in hot pursuit. They followed him to Camilla where he eluded them temporarily. In a short time they learned that a stranger had gone to James Hand's barn just west of the village and securing a lantern set out to make a search of the building. In a few minutes they located Cooper hiding in a hay mow, completely covered up in the hay. McFadden seized him and his captors escorted him to Mann's store, where they held him prisoner until an officer arrived from Orangeville. Cooper, who is about 35 years of age and married, was placed in the jail here Tuesday night. The two men were brought before P. M. Pattullo at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and remanded until Friday, Jan. 22nd, at 2 p.m.

The theft and arrests have caused a great deal of excitement in Mono. It is alleged that the Coopers have been making a regular business of stealing grain, fowl, etc., and startling developments are expected before their trial is over. High Constable Marshall is being warmly praised for his skill and activity in bringing the culprits to task. McFadden and Bradshaw are also warmly commended on all hands for their courage and the invaluable aid they rendered the officers of the law.

Mr. George Gamble, our enterprising stock man, loaded 8 carloads of cattle, hogs and lambs last week and has already loaded 5 carloads this week. Waldemar is setting the pace in the stock line and is proving itself the most central market in Dufferin. The prices paid here are somewhat better than they are in most places. This is very encouraging for the farmers and speaks well for the enterprise of our dealers. We hope to see the business still increase.

Mr. Wesley Gamble is home from the West after an absence of ten years. Owing to indifferent health he does not intend to return until the beginning of April. The chair was taken by the pastor, Rev. Mr. McDonald, precisely at 8 o'clock and a well-rendered entertainment was given by the children of the school, interspersed with spicy speeches by local talent and music by the Waldemar orchestra.

Profit from Potatoes

During the summer of 1914, the Dufferin County Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with the Department in Toronto, conducted an "Acre Profit Competition" among the students of the various Classes held by the local Department. This Competition was to determine the profit from an acre of potatoes. The following is the statement presented by Jas. Crombie, Blount, the winner of the first prize in this Competition. This crop was grown on a field which had been in sod the previous year, and the potatoes were dropped in the furrows of the sod as ploughed.

These amounts were obtained by using the following figures:— Rent of land, $5.00 per acre; labor 15 cents per hour; horse labor 10 cents per hour; seed at 60 cents per bushel; spray materials at cost; manure at 50 cents per ton.

Rent of land	$5.00
Hoeing	3.00
Seed and paris green	6.55
Planting	2.50
Cultivating (man and horse)	1.75
Manure	6.00
Digging and storing	8.00
	$32.80

Value of Crop— 323 bus. 38 lbs., @ 40c. per bus.	$129.45
Profit	$96.65

The above statement gives an excellent idea of the cost of production of potatoes and affords excellent material for comparison with those on the average farm.

R. R. Oliver, who won second prize in the Competition, presented the following statement.

Rent of land	$5.00
Cultivating and spraying	7.60
Planting	2.09
Cultivating	3.22½
Digging and storing	4.62½
Manure	5.50
	$28.49

Value of Crop— 288 bus. @ 40 cents	$115.20
5½ bus. @ 20 cents	1.06
	$116.26
Profit	$87.77

Things You'll Want to Know

Clean glass with ammonia.
Clean piano keys with alcohol.
Clean wall paper with stale bread.
Paint can be removed by rubbing with spirits of turpentine.
Unvarnished furniture can be polished with beeswax and turpentine.
Scratches on furniture can be taken from varnish by rubbing it with kerosene.
Remove white spots from furniture by rubbing with camphene.
Wash linoleum with warm water and soap, then apply equal parts of linseed oil and vinegar mixed.
A thin coat of varnish applied to straw matting will make it more durable and improve its appearance.
Hair cloth on furniture can be wiped with a clean, wet cloth.
Willow furniture should be cleaned with soap and water. Scrub it well with a clean brush. Use fuller's earth to rub out grease spots.
One of the best furniture polishes is one-third turpentine, one-third linseed oil and one-third vinegar.
Lemon juice or Javelle water will clean marble.
Bathtubs and wash bowls can be cleaned with kerosene oil.
If china or porcelain is discolored, muriatic acid will clean it. Then rinse off with water.
Mica in stoves may be made as good as new by cleaning it in vinegar and salt.
A more general use of carbolic acid water as a disinfectant would be a great aid to most housekeepers. A 5 per cent. solution is strong enough for the purpose. Wash all closets and other floors that are not waxed or varnished and rinse them off with the carbolic acid water. This is fine to use on floors to be covered with carpets.

The National Business

Stirred up by the recent articles running in The Financial Post showing how impractical were the efforts and how inefficient were the methods of the Departments of Trade, Agriculture and Labor in meeting the present emergency, the Government is responsible for the following despatch which has been sent out from Ottawa:—

"The Government is planning an active campaign to stimulate agricultural production of all kinds in 1915. Hon. Martin Burrell is arranging for a series of conferences throughout the Dominion in January and February, at which the farmers of the various districts will be called together and given full information as to conditions in Europe, and the great demand for food supplies by the allies while the war is on. The best means of meeting those demands will be fully discussed by the farmers and those who address them."

The Post's article on this subject has not been intended as criticism of the Government, but rather of the system under which the Cabinet Ministers are selected. As a rule, the selection does not fall upon the best men available for the vacant posts, men with successful experience in the fields which they are called upon to administer: On the contrary, the appointments are generally awarded in return for party services or with an eye to the political influence the new Minister may wield in his section of Canada. The result is that, under the system, party interests are frequently considered before public advantage. The Financial Post has been urging that in this, the greatest opportunity for extending Canadian trade which has ever occurred, the Ministers referred to above have not risen to the emergency. Though no doubt directed with the best of intentions, their efforts have been quite inefficient.

This will be seen by referring to the despatch above quoted. Mr. Burrell proposes to tell the farmers throughout Canada of the great demand which has arisen for foodstuffs on account of the war. Thanks to their local newspapers, however, every farmer in Canada already knows about this, and further thanks to the urgent suggestion of a brainy railway man who started a campaign early last autumn, in which he was supported by these papers, there are few farmers who have not already prepared for the greatest crop on record next year.

That part of the campaign is, therefore, wasted effort, and consequently inefficient.

Suppose Mr. Burrell's scheme were, as he seems to think, the one thing needful, where is he to find his corps of lecturers? The Provincial Governments are now at their wits' end to find such men. He will be compelled to appoint, in most cases, incompetent party workers—a class of men who seldom show much capability. More than that, what will the cost be? Good men cannot be got under $30 to $40 a week, and another $25, perhaps $50, will have to be added for expenses, travelling supervision etc., say $75 a week. Most of them will not be worth their salt, and the attendance at their meetings is likely to be small.

The Financial Post makes this suggestion to the well-intentioned Minister: There are in his department, in the agricultural departments of the provinces, in the agricultural colleges, and on the farms, a number of very able, enthusiastic, public-spirited men whose practical experience if followed out would enable the average farmer to double the average income from his farm.

A committee of the best of these men could concentrate on a series of the most practical and telling suggestions. This is the work now being done by the splendidly-edited agricultural newspapers—which, by the way, Hon. Mr. Burrell in his capacity as a party man proposed to suppress. The best of these agricultural papers are not read by the mass of farmers, but only by the more enterprising class. There are, however, few farmers who do not read and swear by their local weekly. The Government should, therefore, arrange to present this series of practical and timely suggestions in the form of well-displayed announcements in these local weekly papers, regardless of whether they are Liberal or Conservative. It is a business, not a party, proposition. In this way all the farmers of Canada would have an opportunity of profiting by the advice of the best agricultural experts, and the cost should be much less than the totally inefficient plan proposed by the Minister of Agriculture.

If this suggestion were intelligently carried out it would give a tremendous impetus to the increase in quality and quantity of farm products to be sold and turned into money. The farmers are the most generous spenders when money is plentiful, and the investors, merchants, manufacturers, financiers, and other business interests for which The Financial Post is the mouthpiece would all also greatly benefit.—Reprinted from The Financial Post, Dec. 19, 1914.

SUCCESSFUL JELLY MAKING

Use good fruit which is a little under-ripe.

Use the best granulated sugar.

Heat the sugar in the oven before adding it to the fruit juice.

If the juice must be boiled down, always do so before the sugar is added.

The jelly will be clearer and finer if the fruit is simmered gently and not stirred during cooking.

Always make jelly on a bright, clear day.

Wash the jelly glasses in hot water and set them on a folded cloth wrung out of hot water.

Set the jelly in a sunny window for twenty-four hours, then cover with melted paraffin wax, and set in a dry, cool place.

THE WOMEN OF RUSSIA

How They Minimise the Ravaging Effects of War

By Princess Sasha Kropotkin.

During war more than at any other time the general efficiency of the women plays an important part in the success of their country. This is especially so where there is conscription, for it is inevitable that life should become dislocated when all or most of the men are withdrawn from it. In Russia women fill so many posts which in other countries are the privilege of men, that they are still there to carry on the work when the men are gone—and in any case they are willing to take up a variety of occupations from which they are barred at ordinary times. It is true that they are welcomed and given all kinds of jobs. Women act as clerks in banks and they occupy every kind of position in the municipal organisations even in times of peace. In certain villages they are occasionally elected as "dessiatki"—that is a kind of policeman amongst whose duties is that of collecting the young men whose time has come to serve in the army. During the Napoleonic wars there was even a woman "starosta" (elder of a village). Nastasia—that was her name—led her villagers, armed with scythes and pitchforks, against the French invaders and took a great number of prisoners.

The Cossack women for many years fought side by side with their men, going into battle armed with anything they would lay hands on. This tradition, for it became a tradition that the women should take an active part in any battle, seems to have originated in 1774 when the Cossack town of Naaur was being besieged by the Tartars. The Cossack women helped by pouring not only boiling water and tar on the besiegers, but also the soup which they were cooking. Finally they became so bellicose that they sallied forth from the town dressed in their best red sarafans, armed and angry, and attacked the Tartars with great success.

And the Russian peasant women of today seem capable of living up to these traditions. Only a few days ago when a German aeroplane fell in a village near the frontier, the women who were bringing in the harvest rushed to the spot and smashed the machine, belabouring the two aviators with their fists and hay forks. They overcame them, although the Germans endeavored to defend themselves with revolvers, and held them until some soldiers arrived and rescued the prisoners.

The women are ready, however, to show their energy in more peaceful ways as well, and we hear that they are conducting almost the entire tram and postal service in both the capitals.

In the villages their work is more varied and strenuous. At all times the peasant women work side by side with their men in almost all the field work—especially at harvest time. But when the men are gone the entire work of the village has to be carried on by the women, with the help of only the very old or the very young male population. Once the harvest is brought in—and for that they work from before dawn till after sunset—the peasant women have to turn their hands to threshing the corn, to felling trees, shoeing the horses and, later, ploughing; and all this besides their own work, which includes spinning and weaving.

There are several villages in Central Russia where shoeing horses is an every day task for the women, for the whole village is engaged permanently in blacksmithing and the women do exactly the same work as the men.

It is a tragedy for every agricultural country to lose its men, but, where the women are capable of carrying on the work, the tragedy is lessened. And in such countries when there is war the success of the war is to a great extent ensured by the minimized possibilities of famine.

Though Russian women have, as yet, no vote, still in almost all classes they enjoy absolutely the same rights and privileges as the men. And in the struggle for greater political rights the sexes work together demanding them for both.

It is greatly to be regretted that at such a time as the present English women are not more freely admitted to work which under ordinary circumstances is discharged by men. They would most undoubtedly acquit themselves creditably, and prove their powers of adaptability not less than their Russian sisters.—The Ladies' Realm.

Care of Furniture

Ugly cracks and splits in furniture can sometimes be filled with beeswax so that they will hardly show.

For wiping off a varnished paper use warm water and paraffin—half a cupful of paraffin to a pailful of water.

To remove old varnish from furniture, take three tablespoonfuls of baking soda and put it in a quart of water and apply it with a rough cloth.

Before washing any piece of willow furniture, brush it thoroughly so as to remove every particle of dust. Otherwise no amount of washing will get the furniture clean.

To clean deeply-carved furniture use a soft, medium-sized sponge. Squeeze as dry as possible out of tepid water and go over the carving. It will take up all the dust. Rub dry with a soft cloth and you will be delighted with the result.

When a haze, caused by a dampness, appears on mahogany furniture, rub it with a soft linen cloth moistened with olive oil. The rubbing must be kept up until the surface is dry.

The care of the piano is not understood, as a rule, and so a valuable instrument often suffers. Always close down the piano at night and in damp weather. Open it on bright days and, if possible, let the sun shine on the keys, for the light prevents the ivory from turning yellow.

To apply varnish to dining room or bed room chairs that have many rungs or slender back supports that splatter the varnish when it is applied with a brush, use a soft, lintless cloth, not too large. Pour the varnish into a small vessel, adding turpentine to make it rather thin. This method is quicker than using a brush, and the effect is better, for the varnish does not run.

MALT VINEGAR.

Method of Manufacturing Important Article of Commerce.

That vinegar made of malt and barley is not a stranger to commerce is evidenced by the fact that one large English concern making it has an annual output of 1,000,000 gallons.

A visitor to the brewery of this concern is first shown through the granary, where, in hundreds of bags piled one upon the other, is stored the malt and barley used in the brewing process. This grain is rough and unclean, and before being used has to be screened carefully. It is then ground to a fine flour between flat, round stones. The ground grain is then mixed with hot water by means of mechanical stirrers, and the mixture is allowed to stand until it is possible to draw off a sweet, clear liquid known as "wort."

This liquid is cooled by a refrigerating system, and is then transferred to large fermenting pots, where with brewers' yeast added, it is allowed to remain until fermentation has ceased and it has become known technically as "gyle." The following step is the acetification of the "gyle," the success of which operation is entirely dependent on oxygen. The absorption of this element from the atmosphere in greatest measure is insured by passing the "gyle" through revolving sprinklers situated at the top of big vats over layers of specially prepared and selected birch twigs, through which it trickles to the bottom of the vat, thus exposing to the air an enormous surface. The sides of the vat are perforated to admit a plentiful supply of pure air.

From the bottom of the vat the liquid is continuously pumped to the sprinkler for redistribution over the twigs for a period of three weeks. It is now vinegar, but it is not yet refined enough for consumption. It has now to be clarified by being filtered through three or four feet of birch chips, lying on the bottoms of other vats; after this it is transferred to huge storage vats, one of which is reputed to be the largest in Great Britain, with a capacity of 115,000 gallons. In these it is allowed to mature for four or six months before it is fit to bottle and cask for use.

A Challenge and the Answer.

France is laughing over the reply of a young diplomat to a challenge given by an ex-governor of the annexed provinces, Alsace-Lorraine. The two were neighbors at an official banquet recently, and the young Frenchman was talking of the skill of the French workman.

"However ugly a thing may be, he seems able to turn it into a pretty object," he said. The old Prussian, with an impatient gesture, pulled a gray hair from his beard.

"Let him make something pretty out of that," he said, gruffly, handing it to his companion. The Frenchman smiled, and carefully placed the hair in his pocketbook.

A week later the German received a small box. In it was a gold tiepin, the head representing the Prussian eagle on a rock. The eagle held in its claws the gray hair, to each end of which a small gold ball was fixed, and on one ball was the word "Alsace," on the other "Lorraine." And inscribed in tiny letters on the rock was the legend: "You only hold them by a hair."

Greatest Fleet of History.

The largest mobilization of warships in all history was certainly that accomplished by Xerxes before the battle of Salamis. According to the detailed figures given by Herodotus, he mustered 1,207 battleships — triremes, or ships of war, with three banks of oars. Each of these carried a crew of 200 rowers and thirty fighting men. There were also 3,000 smaller vessels of war and transports, averaging eighty men each. A further 120 triremes afterward joined. Herodotus may even have understated the figures, since Aeschylus gives 1,207 triremes as the number present at the battle, and 647 had already been lost or destroyed.—London Opinion.

Ambergris.

Ambergris, which is used as a basis for much standard perfumery, was first found, an unattractive mass, floating on the sea or lodged upon the shore. How so unlikely a substance ever suggested itself as a perfume is not known, but it has been in use for centuries. It is believed by some to be the morbid secretion of the liver of a sperm whale. It is described as a fatty, waxy substance, disagreeable to sight and touch, but even in its crude state exhaling a pleasant odor. The crude substance is subjected to chemical action to extract the active principle called amberine.

A Long Shower.

The patriotic Scotchman had induced two Lancashire friends to go to Argyllshire for a week's holiday. On their return he met them.

"Well, how did you enjoy yourselves? Did you have good weather?"

"There was just a shower on our first day," replied one of them.

"Didn't I tell you it was all lies about the Highlands being wet?"

"That shower hadn't ended when we came home," was the severe retort.—Manchester Guardian.

Halcyon.

Halcyon is the Greek for a kingfisher, compounded of "hals," the sea, and "kuo," to brood on. The ancients were of the opinion that the kingfisher laid its eggs and sat on them during the fourteen days just before the summer solstice, throughout which time the waves of the sea were always unruffled; hence the "halcyon days"—the days of happiness and peace.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Edmonton, Alberta, Can. — "I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what your kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"When I wrote to you some time ago I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had organic inflammation and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend your medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills, and think they are fine. I will never be without the medicine in the house."—Mrs. Frank Emsley, 903 Columbia Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta.

The Other Case.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. Child, Beatrice, Neb.

LUTHER CHEYNE.

In the death of Luther Cheyne, which took place at his home in Brampton, on Tuesday, Dec. 29th, one of the oldest and best known continuous residents of the county passed away. Born in the county he passed his long life of eighty-three years within its borders. As a young man he was active in the political and municipal life of Toronto Township, and was for many years a member of the township and county councils before the separation of York and Peel. His death removed the last member of the United Counties Council of York and Peel. He was largely instrumental in the organization of the Peel Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company and for thirty-two years faithfully discharged the duties of secretary. He was prominent in Orange circles in the county, a member of the Methodist Church and a Conservative. He is survived by his widow, three sons and two daughters. The sons are Fred, of Indianapolis, Bert and Wallace, of Old Point Comfort, Virginia. The daughters, Mrs. Anderson, of Hoboken, N.Y., and Miss Cheyne, at home. To the widow and family the sympathy of a wide circle of relatives and friends is extended. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. J. Bruce Hunter, of Grace Church.—Conservator.

HEALTH WRECKED THROUGH LA GRIPPE.

It Generally Leaves the Patient Debilitated and an Easy Victim to Other Diseases.

One of the foremost medical writers says: "It is astonishing the number of people who have been crippled in health for years after an attack of la grippe or influenza." The real danger from this disease, which sweeps over Canada every winter, is during convalescence, when the characteristic symptoms, the fever, the catarrh, the headache and the depression of spirits pass away. Grip leaves behind it weakened vital powers, thin blood, impaired digestion and over-sensitive nerves— a condition that makes the system an easy prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, rheumatism, nervous prostration and even consumption. It is a condition that calls most emphatically for a tonic for the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic especially adapted to meet this need as they purify and enrich the blood. They tone up the nerves and give vigor, strength and health to the debilitated system. Mrs. Howard D. Chaffey, Indian Island, N.B., says: "For several winters in succession I was attacked by la grippe which left me weak and badly run down. In each case I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with the most beneficial results. Last winter when the trouble was again prevalent I took the precaution of fortifying my system with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and escaped the trouble, while many of my neighbors were down with it. In fact I enjoyed the best of health all spring and feel sure this medicine will so fortify the system as to prevent the trouble."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SOME BYGONE JOYS.

Such as Ash Hoppers, Greased Boots and Attic Bedrooms.

Soot and soapmaking! Also ash hoppers! Alas and alack, that venerable institution is no more. The modern prospectus for rural habitations and accessories provides no place in the landscape for that once indispensable adjunct to farm life and its blessedness.

D'ye mind the ash hopper in the back of the house, just around the paling fence? An inverted pyramid it was, into which the debris from the great fireplace was poured, with buckets of water thrown on the latter or else left to the sweet rains from heaven. Then the lye caught in the old iron kettle with the piece broken out of one side—it was once used for making apple butter. After that, the soap boiling—then the soap. Fine stuff, that soap—took the dirt out, all right, and removed the hide, too, if you weren't careful.

But the ash hopper has gone, along with the roller towel, the mackerel kit, hog jowls, red apples and winter turnips. The open fireplace, too, has passed, before which you used to fry on one side, while icicles formed on the other. Nor is there any attic room under the shingles where the boys slept, with pap's old cavalry saddle in one corner and a sickly geranium roosting precariously on the window sill. Nor do we see the old time boots, slicked up with a mixture of mutton tallow and beeswax, which, however, didn't prevent a need for the services of four blacksmiths and a plumber to get 'em off o' nights when the bootjack failed. And the bootjack itself—say, when you come to think of it, a department bulletin has got more real sentiment and "insides" between its covers than can be found in Kipling's "Soldiers Three" or than Rossetti ever dreamed of in his visions of Blessed Damozels and that sort of thing. O, you modern housewives!—Washington Post.

WHEN A MAN LIES.

He Breathes Differently From When He Tells the Truth.

When you are telling a lie you breathe differently from when you are telling the truth. The difference was discovered by means of some tests made upon his students by Professor Benussi of Gras.

He prepared cards bearing letters, figures and diagrams and distributed these among his pupils. These were required to describe the cards correctly, except in certain cases when the cards were marked with a red star and the students receiving them were required to describe them falsely. Each student was watched carefully by his fellows, who, ignorant of the nature of the card, tried to judge from his manner whether he was telling the truth or not. The watchers were unable to judge with any certainty.

But before each man began his test the time occupied in inspiration and expiration was measured, and the measurement was taken again immediately after he finished. It was found that the utterance of a false statement always increased and the utterance of a true statement always diminished, the quotient obtained by dividing the time of inspiration by the time of expiration.

Dr. Anton Rose, commenting in Die Umschau on these results remarks that the discovery furnishes a certain criterion between truth and falsehood. For even a clever liar is likely to fall in an attempt to escape detection by breathing irregularly, Professor Benussi having discovered that men are unable voluntarily to change their respiration so as to affect the result.

Solved the Mystery.

The late Sir Edwin Durning-Lawrence, famous for his theories that Bacon wrote Shakespeare's works, used to tell this story against himself. On one occasion, talking on his favorite subject to an old lady, he impressed on her as final proof the "fact" that Shakespeare could not write his own name, let alone the plays. "Oh, I see!" the old lady said. "I quite agree with you now, Sir Edwin. You mean that he dictated them!"

He Was a Stayer.

Two millionaire business men were lunching in Fifth avenue when an old graybeard stumped by.

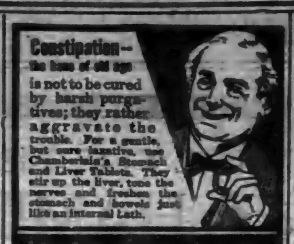
"That's Brown. He works for me," said the first business man.

"He's an honest looking chap. Has he got staying power?" asked the second business man.

"He has that," said the first. "He began at the bottom of the ladder twenty years ago, and he's stayed there ever since."—New York Tribune.

Early Rising.

Bibbs—I believe in early rising, don't you? Gibbs—Well, there's no abstract excellence in early rising. It all depends on what you do after you rise. It would be better for the world if some people never got up!—London Telegraph.



Waste of Life.

The true waste of life consists in the love we have not given, the services we have not rendered, the sacrifice from which we have drawn back.—George Eliot.

An Old Mark.

It is said that the dollar mark can be traced back to the fifteenth century. But at that it isn't near as old as the easy mark.—Birmingham News.

A man without self restraint is like a barrel without hoops, and tumbles to pieces.

Constipation—the base of all ills—is not to be cured by harsh purgatives; they rather aggravate the trouble. For a gentle, but sure laxative, use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They stir up the liver, tone the nerves and freshen the stomach and bowels just like an internal bath.

HOLMES—STONEMAN.

At the home of John Stoneman, Amaranth, there occurred a happy event on December 30th, in the marriage of his only daughter, Annie Ethel, to James Wilbur Holmes, of Mono Centre. Sharp at 2 p.m. the bride, dressed in plane satin and carrying a bouquet of white carnations, entered the drawing room to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. Harry Reid, of Toronto, amid home-like surroundings and decorations of carnations and evergreens. In the presence of immediate friends the impressive ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. B. Stephenson, of Shelburne. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace. After the usual congratulations a sumptuous repast was enjoyed by all. A list of toasts and speeches was participated in, expressing good wishes for future happiness and prosperity of the newly wedded. The happy couple left in the evening for Toronto, the bride travelling in a muskrat coat and muff, the gift of her father, and black hat with blue mount and ornament. After their return they will reside on the groom's farm, 4th line, Mono.—Free Press.

READY FOR A WRECK.

The Careful Man Who Believed in Taking Every Precaution.

Two friends boarded a great transatlantic liner and set sail for Cherbourg. One was a niggardly man. The other was a niggardly man. The first night out they went to their stateroom.

"Say, Bob," said the niggardly man, "I wish you'd step out on deck while I undress."

"That's a remarkable request," objected the good fellow. "Why have you developed this streak of bashfulness at this late day? I never saw any signs of it before."

"Never mind about that," said the niggardly man. "You get out!"

After a long and acrimonious argument the good fellow went out on deck and stayed half an hour. When he returned to the stateroom the niggardly man was stretched out in the upper berth. Moreover, he was dressed up like a Christmas tree in a beribboned nightgown and a woman's boudoir cap.

"Say," exclaimed the good fellow, "what in thunder is the matter? Why have you got that makeup on?"

"Look at me and be wise," said the niggardly man. "Remember the rule 'In case of a wreck women and children first.'"—Popular Magazine.

Had No Power Over the Limbs

It would be easy to tell you how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures locomotor ataxia and derangements of heart and nerves, but it may be more satisfactory to you to read this letter. Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D. 2, Sombra, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and frequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had dizzy spells, had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbors of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

OLD PARIS GONE FOREVER

Gayety Will Return, but Not Old-Time Extravagance

For the first time in decades Paris has foregone her famous Christmas Eve celebration— "le Reveillon," when cafes and restaurants remained open all night, dazzling with lights and the jewels of beautiful women; when pierrots and harlequins danced through the boulevards, followed by huge crowds in all sorts of bizarre attire; when life was so effervescent that such things as home dinners and gift giving had to wait over until New Year's. For the first time has the day ceased to be a fete and the real solemnity of the occasion become manifest.

It proves, almost as much as the manner in which the French went to war, that there is indeed a new France. Walking the silent, almost deserted boulevards to-day with a well-known French journalist, I asked his opinion as to whether Paris would ever again be like the Paris of old. He shook his head decidedly and said:

"Some of its gayety will return with time, for that is the French temperament, but the old Paris of vice, extravagance, and folly is gone forever. It will not be allowed to return."

On reports of Christmas festivities at other war centres there was a faint-hearted effort to persuade the Military Governor, Gen. Gallieni, to allow the restaurants to stay open later than 10 o'clock. His reply was: "It is useless to suggest such a thing while a single German soldier is left in France."

Geo. A. Clare's Death.

The death of Geo. A. Clare, M.P. for South Waterloo, took place at his home in Preston on Saturday, Jan. 9th. Death was due to Bright's disease from which deceased had been suffering for some time. He was in his 61st year, having been born in Preston in June, 1854. He received his early education in the local school and subsequently spent four or five years in business with Randall & Co., Waterloo, and then took a position with his father in the foundry in Preston. His splendid business ability soon became apparent in the extended trade of the firm. He was quite prominent in municipal life until his election to Parliament as a Conservative member for Waterloo. Mr. Clare always had at heart the interests of his town and country and was of great influence in their development. Mr. Clare is survived by his wife, one son and three daughters. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock from his late residence to Preston cemetery.

The late Mr. Clare was a brother of Mrs. Alex. Johnston, Zina St., and visited here quite frequently.

Dr. Nelson McGarvin

The last member of the first Council elected when Acton was incorporated in January, 1873, passed away when Dr. Nelson McGarvin died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. S. White, Berlin, on Christmas Day. The Dr. had reached his eighty-fifth year, and had been ailing for a year or so. He came to Acton back in the fifties, when a young practitioner, just graduated from the Medical College, and succeeded the late Dr. Shook. For many years he had a large practice here. Old residents remember his residence and surgery which stood on the site of Reeve Hynds' residence on Mill Street, and his drug store, the front section of the building occupied by Mr. Harold Wiles. Later the Dr. occupied the residence of Dr. Shook which was on the site of Mr. Wm. Johnstone's residence at the corner of Mill and Frederick Street. This building was destroyed by fire about thirty-five years ago, and the Dr. replaced it with the present brick building. In his younger days he was an active citizen, was a member of the first Council and subsequently a Councillor and Reeve. He was also a member of the School Board and was its Chairman. He indulged in the sports of the day and was an ardent cricketer. He was a member of the building Committee of the Methodist Church, the corner stone of which was laid forty years ago this fall. In politics he was a fervent Conservative and some of our older residents recall to this day the heated discussions day after day between him and the late Charles Symon, then a merchant,—who disposed of his business to Messrs. Christie & Henderson forty-two years ago—after the morning papers arrived from Toronto. After leaving Acton the Dr. spent several years in Listowel, Markham and Georgetown, finally removing to Butte, Montana, where he practised fifteen years or so. His first wife was a sister of the late Dr. Freeman, of Georgetown, and Dr. Freeman of Milton, and his second wife, who survives him, was Miss Sarah A. Hiltz, of Ballinafad. Three children are living, J. Edgar, of Mexico City, Mexico, Mrs. Charles W. Hill, of Monroe, Mich., and George, of New York. The remains were interred at Berlin.—Acton Free Press.

Dr. McGarvin was father-in-law of Mrs. McGarvin, John St.

Death of Mr. Jos. Jeffers

The death occurred at Shelburne on Jan. 7th, 1915, of Mr. Joseph Jeffers, for many years a highly respected and well-to-do resident of Mono. Mr. Jeffers was a man of many sterling qualities, a man whose word was as good as his bond. He was a kind neighbor and never refused assistance to any one in need. He was born in Armagh County, Ireland, nearly 66 years ago and came, when a young man, to Canada, settling first in the neighborhood of Mono Mills, but after some few years removed to Lot 10, con. 4, Mono, where he lived until a few years ago, when he rented his farm and made his home with his daughter, Mrs. J. M. Still. Deceased, although of a very retiring disposition, took a keen interest in municipal affairs and spent some years in Mono Council. He took a strong interest in educational matters, being the chief means of having S. S. No. 22 formed. He was always interested in anything that pertained to the benefit of the community in which he resided. He had been a life long member of the Presbyterian Church and was deeply interested in the welfare of his church. He had also been a member of the Orange Order from his youth and of recent years had been connected with L.O.L. 84. He was also a member of the A.O.U.W. in which Society he carried a policy of $2000. About a year and a half ago Mr. Jeffers became afflicted with hardening of the arteries and consulted several doctors, but without receiving much permanent benefit. Early in June of last year he entered Lord Dufferin Hospital and after spending more than three months there he returned greatly improved. About six weeks ago he went on a visit to his nephews at Shelburne. He seemed to be improving nicely until shortly before Christmas when he suffered a stroke and for a time his life was despaired of, but he rallied and his friends had good hopes of his recovery until he suffered another stroke which caused his death on the above date. Everything that kind and loving hands could do was done for him, but nothing could stay the Grim Reaper. His two sons were with him when the end came. About 38 years ago deceased was married to Miss Carson, daughter of the late Geo. Carson, of Mono, who predeceased him ten years ago. The following family are left to mourn the loss of a loving father, Robert, Wilbert and Lewis, of Gleichen, Alta., Carson, of Orangeville, Fred, Mrs. J. M. Still and Miss Ethel, of Mono. The funeral took place from the home of his nephews, Jeffers Bros., to Shelburne station on Friday afternoon, Jan. 8th. Services were conducted by the Rev. R. B. Stevenson, pastor of Knox Church, Shelburne. The pallbearers, all old acquaintances of deceased, were Messrs. J. Bailey, W. J. Stinson, R. H. Galbraith, J. Arnold, J. Legate and R. McLean. The remains were brought to Orangeville and were then conveyed to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Still. The interment, which toov place in the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Saturday afternoon, was largely attended. Services at the house and grave were in charge of Revs. W. M. Morris, of Orangeville, and A. J. Fowlie, of Camilla. The remains were borne to their last resting place by his two sons, Carson and Fred, his son-in-law, J. M. Still, a brother-in-law, S. Smith, and two nephews, W. J. Jeffers and T. Patterson.

The floral tokens were beautiful and included a wreath with the word "Father" in orchids from the family, a wreath from the Jeffers' family, Shelburne, wreath from L.O.L. No. 84 and a large spray from Miss Hogg and Mr. J. Dawson, Orangeville. The family are assured of the sympathy of a large host of friends in their bereavement.

Among those from a distance in attendance at the funeral were Messrs. S. Smith, R. J. Jeffers, S. T. Still, Chas. Young and T. Patterson, all of Toronto, Mrs. Jas. Armstrong, Mono Mills, Mr. W. J. and Miss Jeffers and Mrs. J. Horner, Shelburne.

Death of Mrs. Whitesides.

Her friends here will regret to learn of the death in Toronto of Mrs. Whitesides, mother of Mrs. Burch, wife of Rev. A. L. Burch, B.A., Bursar of Westminster Hall, Vancouver, B.C., and formerly pastor of St. Andrew's Church here. The remains were taken to Ottawa for interment. Mr. and Mrs. Burch were both east for the funeral. Mrs. Whitesides spent considerable time with Mrs. Burch in Orangeville and was highly esteemed here. Besides her daughter she is survived by one son, Norman.

Almost a Centenarian.

On Saturday, Jan. 9th, there passed away at the home of his son, Mr. James Cooper, Church St., the oldest resident of Orangeville in the person of William Cooper, who had reached the ripe age of 97 years and 9 months. Deceased enjoyed good health and retained full use of his mental faculties until nearly the last. The late Mr. Cooper was born in Etobicoke, but had resided in Dufferin County for many years. The remains were interred in the Union Cemetery, Grand Valley, on Tuesday following his death.

Babe Fatally Burned.

The 16 months old babe of Mr. and Mrs. James Robinson, of Whittington, was burned to death on Sunday morning, Jan. 10th. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson are a young married couple and had a baby girl, Isabel, 16 months old. Mrs. Robinson placed the child in the cradle before the kitchen stove and went on an errand to a nearby neighbor. She was gone only a few minutes, but when she returned she was horrified to find the cradle a mass of flames. A spark from the stove flew out into the cradle and set the coverlet on fire. The frenzied mother rushed to the side of her unfortunate babe and grabbed it out of the cradle and ran as fast as she could to a neighbor's house smothering the fire as she ran. Dr. White, of Shelburne, happened to be on the spot and did everything he could to save the life of the child, but she was so fearfully burned that death took place four hours afterwards. Mr. Robinson is employed by William Rintoul and he is a quiet industrious man. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents.

REV. FRANK HIGGINS DEAD

Lumber Jack's Sky Pilot Answers Eternal Summons

Had Labored in Minnesota Lumber Camps for Twenty Years.

Rev. Frank Higgins, who attended High School in Orangeville about 1888-89, died at his old home at Primrose on Tuesday, Jan. 5th. Higgins' life work, in which he had met with remarkable success, was mainly among the lumbermen of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin. "His death," says the Shelburne Free Press, "at his old home at Primrose, was a great surprise to his many old friends in Shelburne who had not heard of his arrival. He reached Primrose a couple of days before Christmas and was able to go around until the Sunday preceding his death. He had been suffering from cancer in both shoulder blades for a couple of years and at intervals had parts of the bone taken out on both the right and left sides. Deceased was born nearly fifty years ago in an hotel that stood on the present site of the Walker House, Toronto. He came to Primrose with his mother and stepfather, John Castle, when a small boy, and was educated in the public school there and at Shelburne. After leaving school he went to the United States and became connected with the Presbyterian Church. His life work among the lumbermen and camps in Wisconsin and Minnesota, where he was known and respected as the "Sky Pilot," brought him into prominence all over the Union as he was well known from San Francisco to New York. The winter season was always spent in the camps where he held services regularly and in the summer season he could not respond to half the requests from larger cities to give lectures on his work among the lumber jacks. When he arrived home we understand he told Mr. Castle he had come home to die and wished to be buried in the Shelburne cemetery beside his mother. At the time of writing it is not known whether his wish is to be carried out or not as his wife has telegraphed to forward his body to Delano, Wis.

He was well adapted to the pioneer work entrusted to him and his grand work done for the church, with which he was connected, will no doubt be interesting reading when published. He is survived by his widow and one daughter.

Died at Hospital.

On Monday morning, Jan. 11th, Miss Elizabeth Laughlin, of Caledon, passed away at Lord Dufferin Hospital, where she had been brought the preceding evening. Her death was caused by an affection of the throat and neck, which had reached such a serious stage as to preclude the possibility of a successful operation. The deceased was in her 39th year and is survived by three brothers, George, William and David Laughlin, and one sister, Mrs. McClure, of Georgetown. Her sudden death came as a distinct surprise and shock to her many friends. She was a consistent member of Knox Church, Caledon, and was a woman who was highly esteemed in the community. The funeral was held from her late residence, lot 15, 1st line, west, Caledon, to Caledon Cemetery, on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 13th. Rev. Mr. Burkholder officiated at the house and grave and spoke in glowing terms of the virtues of the departed woman.

Mrs. John Moffitt,

Mrs. John Moffitt, a highly respected resident of Mono township, departed this life on Friday, Jan. 8th, after a lingering illness of about a year's duration. Through her long ordeal she bore her suffering and loss of health with patience and cheerful submission to the will of Him who overrules all things. The end came quietly and peacefully. Mrs. Moffitt was 38 years of age and was a daughter of the late Thomas White, of Glencross. She is survived by her husband and three sons, Edmund, Henry and Willie. These and the other relatives have the sympathy of the whole community in their great sorrow. There was a very large turnout to the funeral, which was held from her late home, lot 12, con. 6, east, to St. John's Church cemetery on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 10th. Rev. J. W. Dudgeon, of Rosemont, conducted impressive services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were the three brothers, Hunter, Joseph and William White, an uncle Joseph White sr., and two brothers-in-law, Thos. and Andrew Moffitt.

Hawkins-Greer.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Archy Greer, "Sprucedale Farm," Perm was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, January 6th, when their only daughter, Florence, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Robert L. Hawkins, of Stanton, by Rev. A. Wilson, of Lisle. Promptly at the hour of four o'clock the bride entered the parlor on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus played by Miss Elva E. Dean, cousin of the bride, and took her place amidst palms and roses. The bride looked charming in a gown of white crepe de chene draped with shadow lace and pearls and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations and maidenhair fern and was unattended. The groom's gift to the bride was a sunburst of pearls and to the pianist a pearl crescent. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. After congratulations the guests all repaired to the dining room, which was artistically decorated, and partook of a dainty wedding breakfast. The rest of the evening was spent in vocal and instrumental music. The bride was the recipient of many costly and useful presents, showing the esteem in which the young couple was held. They will reside on the groom's farm near Stanton and have the best wishes of a large circle of friends for happiness and prosperity.—Free Press.

South-Lyons.

A quiet marriage took place at the Manse in Mono Mills on Thursday, Jan. 7th, when Mr. Henry South, of West Mono, was united in wedlock to Miss Emily Lyons, a daughter of the late John Lyons, of Adjala. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. Black.

Liddy-Wright.

Mr. W. R. Liddy, B.A., Public School Inspector for Dufferin, and Miss Caroline C. Wright, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Wright, of this town, were quietly married in Toronto on Thursday last. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. N. Burwash, formerly Chancellor of Victoria University. The newly wedded couple arrived home on Monday night, going direct from the station to their home on First Ave., where friends had everything in readiness for their home coming. The bride is a talented musician and was organist in the Methodist Church here until a short time prior to her marriage. The Banner joins their many friends in wishing Mr. Liddy and his bride every happiness.

Couldn't Name Newspaper

A Walkerton despatch states that "a man who gave the police the name af McDonald, but whose real name is supposed to be Cumberland, is in custody on a charge of securing money from Walkerton people under false pretences. At a hearing before Magistrate Tolton, evidence was given by several people who said McDonald had collected money from them for families of Orangeville soldiers who were on the firing line. He stated that a list of the contributions would be found in an Orangeville paper, but on being questioned was unable to give the name of the paper. A book McDonald carried showed that he had visited many other towns besides Walkerton. His case was adjourned till Orangeville people are communicated with."

The man is not known here and no list of the nature indicated has appeared in any of the local newspapers.

PROPHECY OF MAYENCE

FAMOUS PREDICTION OF 1854 COMES TRUE IN 1914.

Of Eighteen Verses, Nine Were Brought to Pass by the Wars of 1866 and 1870 an. By the French Commune of 1871—The Remaining Nine Foreshadow Events Which Now Seem Certain.

There is in Germany a famous prophecy. It is called "The Prophecy of Mayence," and dates from 1854. It comprises eighteen verses of prediction, of which the first nine have been fulfilled in the most remarkable manner. Here are the verses:

1. When the little people of the Oder shall feel themselves strong enough to shake off the yoke of their protector and when the barley is sprouting from the ears their King William shall march against Austria.

2. They will have victory upon victory up to the gates of Vienna, but a word from the Great Emperor of the West shall make the heroes tremble on the field of victory, and the barley shall not be gathered in until he has signed the peace, shaken off the yoke and returned triumphantly to his country.

3. But at the gathering in of the fourth barley and that of the oats a dreadful sound of war shall call the harvesters to arms. A formidable army, followed by an extraordinary number of engines of war that hell alone could have invented, shall start towards the West.

4. Woe to thee, great nation, woe to you who have abandoned the rights divine and human.

The God of battles has forsaken you; who will succour you?

5. Napoleon III., mocking his adversary at first, shall soon turn back towards the "Chene-Populeux," where he shall disappear never to reappear.

6. In spite of the heroic resistance of France, a multitude of soldiers, blue, yellow, yellow and black, shall scatter themselves over a great part of France.

7. Alsace and Lorraine shall be carried away from France for a period and half a period.

8. The French shall only take courage again as against each other.

9. Woe to thee, great city, woe to thee, city of vice! Fire and sword shall succeed fire and famine.

10. Courage, faithful souls, the reign of the dark shadow shall not have time to execute all its schemes.

11. But the time of mercy approaches. A prince of the nation is in your midst.

12. It is the man of salvation, the wise, the invincible, he shall count his enterprises by his victories.

13. He shall drive out the enemy of France, he shall march to victory on victory until the day of divine justice.

14. That day, he shall command seven kinds of soldiers, against three to the quarter of Bouleaux between Ham, Woerl and Paderborn.

15. Woe to thee, people of the North, thy seventh generation shall answer for all thy crimes. Woe to thee, people of the East, thou shalt spread afar the cries of affliction and innocent blood. Never shall such a army be seen.

16. Three days the sun shall rise upwards on the heads of the combatants without being seen through the clouds of smoke.

17. Then the commander shall get the victory; two of his enemies shall be annihilated, the remainder of the three shall fly towards the extreme East.

18. William, the second of the name, shall be the last King of Prussia. He shall have no other successor save a King of Poland, a King of Hanover, and a King of Saxony.

All the first part of this prophecy up to the ninth verse, inclusive, is verified by the war of '866, then by that of 1870, and then by the Commune of 1871. Here are the last nine verses, paraphrased and with the interpretations of the symbolic terms:

10. Courage, French patriots, Germany cannot carry out its schemes of supremacy.

11. The time of retaliation approaches. The Tsar shall come in the midst of you to seal the alliance.

12. That is the man of salvation.

13. He shall chase the enemy of France, he shall conquer Germany until it is completely destroyed.

14. The last battle on the field of Bouleaux, near to Paderborn, in Westphalia, shall reunite seven allied peoples (French, Belgians, English, Dutch, Russians, Japanese, and Servians) against three (Germans, Austrians and Hungarians).

15. Woe to thee, Prussia, thy seventh generation shall answer for the wars thou hast made upon all the people. (Seven generations make 30 years plus 7—210 years. The realm of Prussia dates from 1713. The seventh generation is, then, living between 1893 and 1923.) Woe to thee, Austria! Never such a battle shall have taken place.

16. It shall last three days in the smoke of the conflagration.

17.—Finally Prussia and Austria shall be annihilated. Hungary shall fly towards the extreme east (of Europe).

18. William II. shall be the last King of Prussia. Germany and Austria shall form three realms: Poland, Hanover and Saxony.

The British army is at present engaged in assisting the Prophecy of Mayence to a triumphal fulfilment.

Can You Keep a Secret?

"Can you keep a secret?" is a very common question, usually put by a person who doesn't want to. Now you will reflect that a man going about his own business with several other people's secrets in his brain pockets is pretty certain to pull one of them out inadvertently. For, of course, other people's secrets are of no great importance. So when the question comes, "Can you keep a secret?" the answer should be: "No. Can you?"—London Chronicle.

IDOLS OF THE ANCIENTS.

These That Gave Their Names to the Days of the Week.

In the museum at Berlin there are representations of the idols from which the names of the days of the week are derived.

From the idol of the sun comes Sunday. This idol is represented with a face like the sun, holding a burning wheel with both hands on his breast, signifying his course round the world.

The idol of the moon, from which comes Monday, is habited in a short coat, like a man, holding the moon in his hands.

Tuisco, from which comes Tuesday, was one of the most ancient and popular gods of the Germans and is represented in his garments of skins, according to their peculiar manner of clothing. The third day of the week was dedicated to his worship.

Woden, from which comes Wednesday, was a valiant prince among the Saxons. His image was prayed to for victory.

Thor, whence comes Thursday, is seated in a bed, with twelve stars over his head, holding a sceptor in his hand.

Friya, whence we have Friday, is represented with a drawn sword in her right hand and a bow in her left.

Saeter, from which comes Saturday, has the appearance of perfect wretchedness; he is thin visaged, long haired, with a long beard. He carries a wither pail in his right hand, wherein are fruits and flowers.

Her Home.

Some years ago, when a part of the Japanese Imperial Palace was burned at Tokio, the Empress was forced to flee to one of the old damio houses near by. It was not at all comfortable, and, as the story goes, her Majesty, appreciating that her subjects would be much concerned at her living in such a mean place, sat down and wrote them a little poem in which she denied that she had changed her residence. The poem, which was in the best Japanese language, stated that her Majesty's home had always been in the hearts of the people and that neither the flames nor the cold could ever drive her from that dear abode.

Never Did Better.

Conspicuous in clean lines and flaming tie, a Toronto newsy found time during the busy rush of an afternoon recently to say that he was coining money at the rate of $12 a day. A pearl crescent clepin further evidenced the newsboy's claim to prosperity. He said that business had never been better than during the last week. Since the outbreak of war he had been making an average of $12 a week, and the rapidity with which he was disposing of "extras" gave the impression that the claim was borne out.

Interesting to Gardeners.

A French chemist attributes to carbonate of manganese, in very minute quantities, the power of rendering fertilizers more readily assimilable without undergoing any change itself. Experiments have tended to show that with the use of an ounce to about seven square yards germination was more free, growth more rapid, and yield better—that is, used with other fertilizers. By itself it is supposed to have no effect whatever. —London Express.

Allowances.

"Of ourse I a'lait your son is extravagant. But you must make allowances; he's young."

"That's all right but the more allowances I make the quicker he blows 'em."

Sharp and Blunt.

Cora—She has such keen perceptions!

Dora—And such a blunt way of conveying them!

All Depends.

Ogden—Going to get a new suit this season?

Owens—If I can find a new tailor.

Fell In a Faint.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

STRUCK BY A LIMB.

James Stubbs, a Prominent Caledon Farmer, Killed While Felling a Tree.

James Stubbs, a widely known Caledon farmer, was almost instantly killed while felling a tree on the road allowance opposite his farm, lot 20, Centre Road, 11 o'clock Saturday forenoon. The unfortunate man and his son, Robert, were engaged cutting down a tree on the road side. When it fell the trunk struck a branch lying on the ground causing it to fly upwards. One end of the limb struck Stubbs on the side of the head just back of the ear, knocking him prostrate. The injured man did not move or speak after he was struck, and when Dr. Thomas reached the scene of the accident about twenty minutes later he was breathing his last.

Mr. Stubbs was 67 years of age and is survived by a widow, two sons, Robert, of Caledon, and William, in the West, and one daughter, Mrs. Dunham, of Wiarton. He was a lifelong resident of Caledon, and was held in high respect in the neighborhood where he had spent his life. The sad affair has cast a deep gloom over the whole community. Profound sympathy is felt for the widow and other relatives. William Stubbs, Port Elgin, John Stubbs, and Mrs. John Dynes, Caledon, are the surviving brothers and sister. There was a very large attendance at the funeral, which was held to Caledon Cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. Rev. F. N. Bowes, of Alton, conducted an impressive service in the stricken home and also officiated at the grave. The pallbearers were the two brothers, William and John Stubbs, and four brothers-in-law, W. J., J. C., Robt. and George Limebeer.

COPPER IS KING

On Island of British Columbia Coast.

Mr. Orange Jull, of Toronto, has forwarded The Banner the following interesting letter. The writer, Mr. Alex. Laidlaw, now quite an old man, is a onetime resident of Mono and Orangeville. He is a millwright by trade and helped to build the old stone flour mill in this town.

Van Anda, B.C., Jan. 2nd, 1915.
Mr. Orange Jull,
Toronto, Ont.
Dear Sir,—

Your Christmas Card came to hand all safe and many thanks for the same.

I am now away 80 miles up the Coast from Vancouver on Tuxedo Island. The island is about 6 or 7 miles wide and 20 miles long and is practically all rock. It is devoted to mining, principally copper and one iron mine. I have been told that there is enough ore in sight to assure an output of 1000 tons a day for 20 years. The owner is an Englishman, who is very wealthy and has no need to work the property. He is willing to sell. Four copper mines have been worked, but only one is in operation now. It is just a short distance from where I am staying and was first started twenty years ago. It is owned by an American company and is said to be very profitable. The main shaft runs down 1200 feet. Then there is a level cut of 300 feet and another perpendicular of 400 feet. They work night and day, Sunday included. About 150 men are employed in and around the mine. The mine is lighted up entirely by candles. It takes almost 12,000 candles a month for this purpose. Eight hours is a day's work. One shift of men go down at 7 a.m. and work until 11 a.m., the next lot from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. and so on for the full 24 hours. The men's pay, I understand, is foreman $5.00 per 8 hours, working miners $4.00 for the same time. They have two large air compressing engines, one at least running continuously. They also have telephone connection throughout the mine.

The island is separated from the mainland by a body of water about 3 to 4 miles wide. The vessels call at the different ports delivering passengers and the mails. There has been no snow or frost in the ground so far this season. Our village is composed of 500 or 600 people. It is not laid out in streets. The houses are placed wherever a suitable location can be found to set them on the rocks. It was necessary to bring water for domestic purposes in from a lake about two miles distant by means of pipes. The lake is so high that there is sufficient pressure to force the water into the houses as it may be required for use. There is a Presbyterian Church, a hospital built by the English Church Mission for the use of miners and others and a sawmill.

I do not know that I can give you much more information about the place as I have only been here for two weeks and may return to Ebume in the near future.

Yours with regards to all,
A. LAIDLAW.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Jean Baptiste Tapp.

Quebec Man who Suffered from Kidney Disease for Years is Again a Robust, Healthy Man.

L'Anse-a-Valleau, Gaspe Co., Que. Jan. 18. (Special)— "I am happy to tell you Dodd's Kidney Pills made me well." So says Jean Baptiste Tapp, a well known and highly respected resident of this place. And so thankful is Mr. Tapp for the benefits he has received from Dodd's Kidney Pills that he wants the whole world to know it. He wants others who suffer as he did to know the cure.

"For many years I suffered from kidney disease," Mr. Tapp says. "It started from a cold, and gradually grew worse. My skin had a harsh, dry feeling, my appetite was fitful and I perspired freely with the slightest exertion. I had flashes of light before my eyes and I was tired and nervous.

"Finally rheumatism was added to my troubles, while attacks of sciatica and neuralgia followed. The doctor who attended me and the medicines I tried, failed to help me till I decided to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took four boxes in all, and to-day I am a robust man in excellent health."

All Mr. Tapp's troubles came from sick kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured them.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Rutherford, Brampton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary R., to Robertson Roy Walker, D.D.S., of Bolton, son of Rev. George Walker, Toronto. The marriage will take place this month.

EARLY INNISFIL AND ESSA

Bear and Deer were Plentiful and Beaver Meadows Abounded—Harry Williams, an Old Timer, Spent Many a Happy Day in Terry Swamp and Had Many a Thrilling Adventure.

Let us go up north for a story of great interest, as it gives many stirring incidents of early days. Innisfil, lying as it does, on the west shore of Lake Simcoe, is romantic and picturesque in the extreme. The lake affords splendid boating, bathing and fishing in the summer season; and when winter's frosts come sweeping down the lake, it affords enjoyment even excelling the summer. The skating, curling, ice-boating and horse racing quite equal those of the warmer season. Again, when we get up in Innisfil, Essa, Vespra, Oro and surrounding townships, we begin to reach the original home of the beaver.

The writer introduces to the readers of the Weekly Sun, Henry Williams, who says, "When I was a young chap, we lived on the townline between Innisfil and Essa. There were plenty of cedar swamps and beaver meadows scattered all round in those early days. As you have asked for early stories of the wild animals I will try and give you some as I saw or participated in them.

"My first bear adventure was when my mother sent me to a country store, kept by Dick Simpson on the townline, to get some articles for the home. The country was new and plenty of woodland abounded, while the road was very uneven. On my homeward journey, about a mile from the store, I saw a bear, big gaunt-looking ; he had just come out of his winter quarters and was warming himself. He stood beside an upturned cedar root and was letting the warm spring sun thaw him out from cold storage. He was very black, and from what I know about a bear's head, judged him to be five years old. One good look at that hungry fellow, and I was off on a run for my life, expecting every moment to be followed by him. I tumbled over a rough knoll, and in turning a somersault, had the misfortune to burst open my sack of pepper. It flew in my face, filling my eyes and nose. I screamed with the burning pain, as the pepper began to burn. I reached home safely, but can never forget what I suffered from the red hot pepper. My father was not a hunter, so did not care to expose himself too much to find out where the bear was moving around."

"A settler whose name was Samuel Reynolds, about sixty years ago, had considerable loss and trouble from the bears, and one old he bear was particularly annoying and venturesome. This fellow appeared to know whenever there was a good fat hog in the pen. Then there was always some mischief going on, and many of the other settlers were losers as well.

"One night Reynolds lost a pig, next day they found part of it in the woods, about a mile away. Of course the other part was eaten. Then we watched for Bruin. He was cunning and in showing up the third night, got away before he could be shot. One fall day Mr. Reynolds went to Barrie with a load of grain, and old Bruin came around.

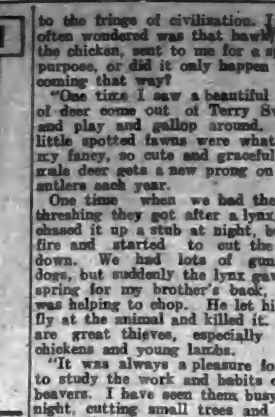
"The women were afraid to drive him away. That night several farmers got after the old bear, and with dogs and guns managed to tree him. But this tree of refuge was too high for any of them to reach him, and the foliage of the big cedar was too dense for them to see Bruin. So a scaffold was built about twenty feet up, and Sam Reynolds and Tom Stewart got on the scaffold and commenced firing away. Finally Bruin was wounded and came half tumbling and half climbing down, growling furiously. In his clumsy descent he struck the scaffold and knocked it down, so men, bear, guns and all tumbled to the ground in confusion. The men were badly shaken, but Bruin escaped in the darkness.

"The whole settlement was aroused over his depredations, so much so that nearly all the men around Thornton turned out the next day and tracking the old bear by his wounds, shot him dead before nightfall. So the old king among bears was dead, and the settler's grain, stock and property generally remained for some time unmolested.

"I have frequently eaten bear meat, and could relish it quite heartily; as far as I can judge it tasted quite like a yearling calf. One winter when I worked in the lumbering camps, we often get bear-meat and venison, which made a nice change from the salt and pork. One man was given the task of hunting ; he got full pay and the skins of the animals shot. It was rather a risky undertaking and was not much sought after. The venison was boiled in big kettles, mixed with bushels of onions, and was eaten with great avidity. There's no meat that will shrink up like venison, one hundred pounds, when cooked, going down to about seventy.

"In passing I would like to tell about some of the other things I have eaten. Porcupines used to make a very nice dish, when properly prepared for the table, and tasted exactly like goose. There was a family of hunters who lived near Thornton, whose names were Terry. Near them was a big swamp, known as Terry's Swamp, and it was full of all kinds of birds and animals. The Terrys used to go north to hunt and trap during the winter season, and often made $800 during the time the furs were in prime condition. There were no restrictions on hunters those days and the Terrys would come home with great bales of bear, lynx, deer, wolf, beaver, mink, muskrat and other skins. They would even have porcupine skins, which were worth about $1 each.

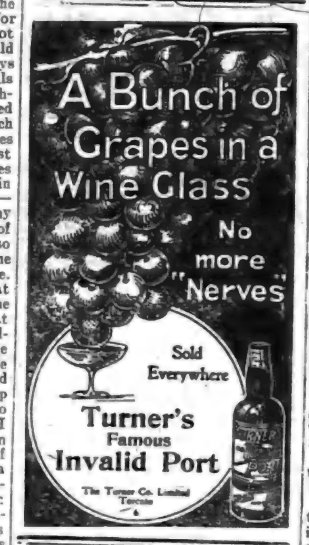
"One of the Terry boys was an expert in preparing porcupines for table use. He would make a fire outside and placing a caldron kettle upon it, would boil the "porcs" for several hours. Then laying them out on a skinning board would pull out the quills, and then skin the carcasses, when they were ready for table use, and were certainly splendid.



"In an old log house near Terry's Swamp, a lot of us boys were playing around and having fun generally, when they played a trick on me. In most of these houses there would be a little cellar under the floor, and a trap door, in this one, the door was in the corner. Before I got there the boys had placed a porce in the cellar just under the trap door, and did not put the door in place again. They also had a string on porce. One of our games was "pussy wants a corner," when one boy says, "Nobody can get my corner." I did not think of mischief but ran at the next call straight for it. We would all squat down a little, somewhat like a baseball player, in readiness to run. When the next call was given just as I got in position properly a boy pulled the string, the porcupine gave a squeal like a pig, and I received a shot of quills where I did not want them. I wore a pair of long kip-boots, and some of the quills pierced even the leather, so you can imagine what a fix I was in. How the boys did laugh, but I watched my chance, and paid them back. All of us, of course, were the best of friends, and all waiting for a trick on each other. One boy got shot with quills one time and could not eat, so one of the Terry boys examined him, and soon found quills in his mouth. So we got the pinchers and holding Jack tightly pulled the quills from his mouth amid much growling and kicking. The porcupines moult in the months of July, August and September. At all other times them are harmless. Up in Essa in years gone by, there was a wedding—nothing unusual to happen in any part of the country. The bride, of course was charming. She was also good hearted, and gave us a fine square cut of her wedding cake. "Harry,, be sure and remember what you dream, for it will all come true," she said. "So I ate it all at one sitting and retired to my bedroom under the roof of our humble log home. I snuggled in the middle of my old-fashioned roped bed, and tired from chopping was soon asleep and dreaming. My dream started to run at first just beautifully. I thought I was out on a big excursion boat on Lake Simcoe, the surface of the water was calm and blue, not a wave to mar the enchanting moonlight scene. Perchance a swell from the ship's motion might intermittently arise, but it swept the boat's sides as sweetly as a mother imprints a kiss on her baby's cheeks. The band began to play, the music rolled with a harmonious rhythm, while elastic feet fell in unity to its every beat. In time this scene changed and I dreamed that up north of Orillia a storm was sweeping through the forest, bending low the giant pines and cedars, snapping some from their rock-bound roots. It shook the budding Orillia as it hastened on southwards and came an with terrific force, churning the surface of Lake Simcoe to foaming white caps and billows. Our boat was struck and I was dashed about in my dreams, turning, whirling, dashing, doubling up, and finally thrown upon Snake Island, at the end of Lake Simcoe. I then found myself awake, by falling on the floor, as I tumbled from my bed. I have learned from experience to eat but lightly of wedding cake when I am about to retire.

"One time I was out in the woods, swamps, and beaver meadows, needless to say where, I used all my skill and woodcraft, of which I think I possess considerable, after being engaged in the woods nearly all my life, in every imaginable manner that I could think about. I did my best to get out to civilization, only to be foiled in every attempt. I studied the moss on the trees, and then lined ahead tree after tree, only again to find myself back at the original tree in six or eight hours. I was travelling in a circle. Men are often lost in the woods, and are there for days before being rescued, or themselves finding a way out. To be short, I was lost for five days, living mostly on squaw berries, slept in trees at night, as the ground was damp and animals abounded. I was so hungry and lonesome and about to give up, when quite near me I espied a hen-hawk sailing so proudly through the air. A bird was hanging from her claws. Instantly I threw a stick I had carried for company, since lost, at it, and being so surprised, dropped the bird, which proved to be a farmer's chicken, quite near me. I grabbed that chicken and could scarcely refrain from eating it raw. I found some matches in my vest pocket, and getting some dry moss leaves soon had a fire going. It was quickly and very roughly prepared and cooked on my fire, and nothing ever tasted so good. It gave me strength and courage and by following a little creek, in time I got to the fringe of civilization. I have often wondered was that hawk with the chicken, sent to me for a special purpose, or did it only happen to be coming that way?

"One time I saw a beautiful herd of deer come out of Terry Swamp and play and gallop around. The little spotted fawns were what took my fancy, so cute and graceful. A male deer gets a new prong on his antlers each year.



One time when we had the men threshing they got after a lynx, and chased it up a stub at night, built a fire and started to cut the stub down. We had lots of guns and dogs, but suddenly the lynx gave a spring for my brother's back, who was helping to chop. He let his axe fly at the animal and killed it. They are great thieves, especially with chickens and young lambs.

"It was always a pleasure for me to study the work and habits of the beavers. I have seen them busy at night, cutting small trees and preparing them for dam building. And the great meadows where they once were was quite a sight to see. One up near Thornton in the spring would be ten feet deep under water, but the summer would afford pasture for hundreds of head of stock. More of this story will follow later on as the writer was unable to get wolves, foxes, rattlesnakes, and one bear story in the space available.—Alliston Herald.

AN ALBION FIRE.

Mr. Harry Matson, who resides on the Matson homestead, 7th line, Albion, suffered a severe loss by fire last week. Shortly after midnight on Friday he was awakened to find his barn in flames. Mr. Matson had time to release his live stock, with the exception of eleven young cattle and thirteen pigs, which with the entire contents of the building, were consumed. The building was a well appointed barn barn, 85x45, and was filled with grain, straw, hay, harness and the hundred and one things a farmer would have about his place. The origin of the fire is a mystery, although indications point to the fact that it was set on fire, perhaps accidentally, by grain thieves, as two bags of grain and some matches were found in the snow on the approach to the barn. We understand that Mr. Matson was insured to the amount of $1,400.—Bolton Enterprise.

Found a Friend in Dr. Chase

Mrs. Chas. Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes:—"I feel it my duty to tell you what a great friend Dr. Chase's medicines have been to myself and family. I cannot praise his medicines too highly, and Dr. Chase's name is a household word in our home. Well, quite a number of years ago I sent to you for a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment for protruding piles, and, having used the sample and found relief, I sent to a neighboring town for four boxes, and I am completely cured.

"I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for constipation, and, after using them, I am completely cured of this dreadful disease. I am the mother of ten children, of whom nine are living, and when seven of my children were all very bad with whooping cough, caught in the middle of a severe winter, I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and they were all cured before the winter was over, and now we are never without Dr. Chase's medicines in our home, and I recommend them to all."

I was helpless—had several doctors and many other remedies but all failed to cure me. Then I tried Gin Pills with the result that I am well to-day. I heartily recommend them to any person suffering from Kidney or Bladder Trouble".

A MOTHER'S ANXIETY

Most mothers are anxious when their little ones are teething, for at this time the baby's stomach gets disordered and there is a grave danger of convulsions. This anxiety can be lessened, however, if the mother keeps a supply of Baby's Own Tablets in the house and gives an occasional dose to her teething baby. The Tablets are the very best medicine in the world during the teething time. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach, promote healthful sleep and make teething painless. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Toronto Township is threatened with another lawsuit. Some time ago in changing the course of a stream near the golf links, east of Dixie, proper provision was not made for drainage with the result that the water which passed through the old course freely is now backed upon the property of Mr. McConnell, who is taking action to recover $1400 alleged damages to his land. The case will probably be heard at the spring assizes next month.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, JAN. 28th, 1915.

TUESDAY'S ELECTION

Henderson, Johnston & Irwin Were Chosen.

Park a Good Fourth in Race for Orangeville Councillors.

The election to fill the three vacant places in the Orangeville Council was held on Tuesday and created considerably more excitement than was generally expected. Some of the candidates worked hard and friends of the two hotelkeepers, Messrs. "Jerry" Morrison and John Bennett, were particularly active. During the afternoon they had several rigs busy hauling out voters, but notwithstanding their good offices their candidates finished at the wrong end of the list. Thos Henderson, of last year's Council, headed the poll with 341 votes. Lou Johnston, who also occupied a seat in the 1914 Council, ran in second place, getting 313 votes. James Irwin, a new man and a retired farmer who has only been in Orangeville about two years, made an excellent run, capturing third place with 298 votes. Ex-Postmaster John Park was only 8 votes behind Irwin. Park was not anxious for office and did very little canvassing. Morrison got 255 votes and Bennett tallied on 188 ballots. Morrison and Bennett fared badly in the North and West Wards, but did much better south of Broadway. The vote by Wards was as follows :—

	West	North	East.	South	Total
Henderson	77	99	64	101	—341
Johnston	43	87	82	101	—313
Irwin	60	83	61	94	—298
Park	64	60	68	98	—290
Morrison	35	49	80	91	—255
Bennett	35	33	58	62	—188

The results were received quietly and with general satisfaction. The election has strengthened this year's Council very materially. Henderson and Johnston are experienced men and their knowledge of municipal affairs will be valuable in the Council. Irwin is a fair-minded and level-headed man with plenty of spare time on his hands. He should make a useful member of the Board.

Bank of Hamilton in Strong Position.

This year, when Bank Statements are being eagerly watched for as indications of the country's welfare, it is encouraging to see the strength shown by one of our local banking institutions — the Bank of Hamilton.

Over 8 million dollars of its assets are in the form of cash on hand, balances in banks, etc., and form 23 per cent. of its total obligations to the public. Such a conservative policy has had the effect of slightly reducing profits, but the wisdom of this action on the part of the Bank of Hamilton must be apparent to depositors, borrowers and shareholders alike.

This Bank, while continuing to exercise caution in its lendings, is able to state that its old customers have received the necessary accommodation for business purposes.

An interesting note in the report referred to is the Statement of independent auditors, which is required by the new Bank Act, and which is operative this year for the first time.

HEAVY IMMIGRATION

Will Likely be Pronounced Movement of U. S. Farmers into Canadian West.

Regina, Jan. 23rd, 1915.—That the large colonization companies are laying plans for a heavier emigration from the United States is evident from the fact that about 30 representatives of the largest companies in the United States and Canada waited on the Saskatchewan Government at Regina recently, when matters affecting colonization in this province were discussed. The representatives met at the King's hotel later in the evening and a Canadian American Colonization Association was organized with the following officers :— President, Howard Everett, of the Luse Land Company, St. Paul ; 1st vice-president, Wm. Pearson, Pearson Land Co.; 2nd vice-president, W. G. Styles, National Trust Company, Regina ; secretary-treasurer, R. R. Nicol, tax commissioner, Canadian Northern Railway, Winnipeg ; executive committee, James Porter, Porter Land Co., Reinbeck, Iowa ; W. W. Evans, Solicitor, Canadian Northern Railway, Winnipeg ; J. H. Haslam, Haslam Land Co., Regina ; E. A. McCallum, McCallum & Hill, Regina ; A. R. Davidson, Davidson & Molten, Regina ; A. H. Hanson, Saskatoon, and E. Brown, vice-president Pearson Land Co., Winnipeg. The government gave the association the assurance that they welcomed the American settlers to Saskatchewan and therefore in sympathy with the work done in the past in this connection and would like to see it continue.

REBURN IS WARDEN.

Won from Hilborn on a Vote of 7 to 6.

New County Council is Holding First Session this Week.

Dufferin County Council is holding its first meeting in the Court House this week. The members, who were all present when the Clerk called the roll at the opening session, are :—
Amaranth—Reeve, A. E. Williams
East Garafraxa—Reeve, Alex. Burnett
East Luther—Reeve, H. H. Hilborn
Melancthon—Reeve, R. J. Cornett
Deputy-Reeve, Jas. R. Clarke.
Mono—Reeve, J. A. Marshall ;
Deputy-Reeve, T. J. Park.
Mulmur—Reeve, John Reburn ;
Deputy-Reeve, E. Kidd.
Grand Valley—Reeve, F. Sargeant ;
Shelburne—Reeve, H. Falconer ;
Orangeville—Reeve, W. Fairbairn ;
Deputy-Reeve, A. B. Holmes.

The fight for the Wardenship developed into a keen although good-natured contest. Four candidates were proposed, namely, Hilborn, Reburn, Marshall and Falconer. Each of the four motions making the nominations was put and declared lost. The Clerk then called for new nominations and the same four were again nominated. Hilborn's nomination was supported by 6 members, namely, Burnett, Holmes, Fairbairn, Sargeant, Williams and Hilborn and was declared lost. When the motion proposing Reburn was put it was supported by Williams, who thereby gave Reburn his seventh supporter and the Wardenship. The Reburn vote was Cornett, Falconer, Kidd, Marshall, Parks, Williams and Reburn. Clarke did not vote for either man. We understand this was because Falconer was his first choice.

The Warden-elect was sworn in by Judge Fisher, after which he entered upon the duties of his new position.

Messrs. Cornett, Burnett, Sargeant, Hilborn, Williams, Fairbairn, Marshall and Falconer were appointed a Special Committee to strike the different Standing Committees.

The Standing Committees were selected as follows :—
Finance—Falconer, Fairbairn, Marshall, Sargeant and Clarke.
Assessment—Cornett, Burnett, Kidd, Parks, Holmes and Williams.
Education—Sargeant, Parks, Falconer, Cornett, Burnett and Kidd.
Legislation—Marshall, Clarke, Holmes, Williams and Falconer.
Printing—Williams, Clarke, Parks, Holmes, Hilborn and Kidd.
Roads & Bridges—Hilborn, Cornett, Falconer, Fairbairn, Williams, Burnett, Sargeant and Marshall.
County Property—Fairbairn, Marshall, Hilborn, Sargeant, Falconer, Williams and Cornett.

Yesterday afternoon Warden Reburn delivered his inaugural address, which was couched in the following terms :—

Gentlemen of the County Council.

Allow me to extend to you my most sincere thanks for the honor you have conferred upon me by electing me to the position of Warden of the County of Dufferin. I can assure you that I appreciate the honor very much and it will be my earnest endeavor, with your valued assistance, to transact all business and attend to all matters that will come under my jurisdiction as Warden, in the very best interests of the County.

I take this opportunity of welcoming to the Board the four new members, who are taking their seats here for the first time, namely, Mr. Burnett, Reeve of East Garafraxa, Mr. Cornett, Reeve of Melancthon, Mr. Sargeant, Reeve of Grand Valley, and Mr. Holmes, Deputy Reeve of Orangeville. I feel sure they are men who will ably look after the interests of the County and shoulder their share of the Council's work.

I congratulate you on the prosperous state of the financial affairs of the County which reflects great credit on last year's Council, under the regime of Warden Dryden. Notwithstanding the heavy expenditure on Roads and Bridges, which amounted last year to over $13,000.00, we had on hand to commence the year 1915, $5,804.20, over and above all indebtedness, which is $2,200 more than the year previous.

I congratulate you also on the continued prosperous state of the County at large. Although in many parts of the world the pinch of hard times is felt at the present time, I am pleased to say that it has been felt very little in this County especially amongst the farmers.

It is a source of deep regret that the battles being fought by the British Empire and the allied nations in the cause of the world's freedom, although resulting in many great victories, both on land and sea, have not yet brought the war to a successful conclusion. Canada is proud to have the privilege of taking a part in this great conflict and as long as it continues the Lion's biggest whelp will stay in the fight with ever increasing vigor.

In conclusion I would say that a number of important matters will come before you at this Session and I feel sure they will receive your careful consideration and that the business of the County will be efficiently and economically transacted.

JOHN REBURN,
Warden.

Orangeville, January, 27th, 1915.

A special committee, composed of Messrs. Falconer, Williams, Fairbairn, Sargeant and Holmes, will report on the address.

A deputation addressed the Council yesterday afternoon in support of an appeal from Thos. Davis and other ratepayers of S. S. Nos. 7, 9 and 11, Amaranth, requesting the Council to appoint arbitrators to alter the boundaries of the section. It appears that the Amaranth Council has refused to act in the matter. The appeal was turned over to the Education Committee for report.

Judge Fisher and Mr. Gordon, of Toronto, addressed the Council regarding the care and protection of Neglected and Dependent Children. Mr. H. A. Dorrance, District Representative of the Department of Agriculture, was heard on the subject of Public School Fairs and Mesdames McKeown, Hyland and Dahl were given an opportunity to present the work and claims of Lord Dufferin Hospital. The Finance Committee will report on the matters introduced by the several deputations.

Judge Fisher was appointed to the High School Board as successor to the late Robert Mann. Ex-Warden John Bryan, Reeve Falconer and Judge Fisher were constituted the Board of Criminal Audit, and A. B. Cooper, B.A., of Shelburne, was appointed to the Board of County Examiners.

SCHOOL FAIRS

Of the many lines of work being carried on by the District Representative of the Department of Agriculture, possibly the one that gives promise of being the most far reaching and important is the Rural School Fair movement. This movement has for its object the idea of having the pupils of our rural schools take a deeper interest in agriculture and awakening them to the possibilities of farm life.

The plan of the work is to allow the pupils a selection of a number of various crops suitable for the district. The material is taken home and grown there under the care of the pupil following certain general instruction. This list of material consists of grains, corn, roots and eggs and the material secured is the best that money can buy and, in every case, is secured from satisfactory sources.

During the summer these various crops, etc., are inspected by an officer of the Department and notes made and prizes awarded for the best kept plots and in the fall fairs are held at which prizes are offered for the products of these plots in addition to other branches of agriculture and domestic science.

The results being obtained have been very satisfactory and encouraging. Pupils are able to grow crops with greater yields than their parents and take a decided interest in many things that could not be done in any other way. Parents and others generally speak in the highest terms of the value of the work.

In Dufferin County the work is being followed very carefully and quite extensively. In 1915, under the direction of the District Representative, four Fairs were held and some six hundred and eighty children had material and the attendance at these Fairs amounted to some two thousand five hundred.

For the coming season, six Fairs are being arranged to be held at Laurel, Horning's Mills, Mono Centre, Marsville, Corbetton and a centre in East Luther Township, comprising some seventy five schools.

In this work all expenses are borne by the Department of Agriculture, with the exception of the Prize List, and this has to be secured locally, and the extent of the Prize List will depend upon the amount of local assistance given. This movement is worthy of all the assistance that can be given and of the co-operation of parents, trustee boards and the public, generally, to make it of the greatest value possible. The young are being reached at an age when more impression can be made than at any other, and they should be encouraged and directed along these lines.

Build Up the Home Town

If you want to live in the kind of a town,
Like the kind of a town you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip,
And start on a long, long hike.
You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new.
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town.
It isn't your town—it's you!

Real towns are not made by men afraid,
Lest somebody else gets ahead.
When everyone works and nobody shirks
You can raise a town from the dead.
And if, while you make your personal stake,
Your neighbor can make one, too,
Your town will be what you want to see.
It isn't your town—it's you!

BE LOYAL TO YOUR OWN COMMUNITY.

BUSY DAYS AT OTTAWA.

Military Officials In the Capital Are Working Day and Night.

Military offices in Ottawa, present the appearance of the proverbial beehive so busy are they in preparing equipment for the Canadian soldiers. Everywhere is the spirit of duty. Possibly the busiest offices are those having charge of the inspection of all materials which must be forwarded to the front. Saddles, field glasses, tent pegs, transports of all kinds, blankets, ropes, gun carriages and guns, ammunition of all kinds—these and countless other little details occupy the sole attention of scores of officers and men who are responsible to the Militia Department for every particle of war material that goes from Canada.

When a special article is needed it is invariably called for, for immediate delivery. That entails long hours, but those in charge are working day and night in the knowledge that they are performing their duty and they disregard the number of hours they put in.

Lt.-Col. W. G. Hurdman arrived in Ottawa the other day after a motoring test, to find his desk piled high with correspondence and work which had accumulated during his absence. In his department all materials connected with artillery and transport and supplies for both are inspected. Special machinery is installed for the purpose of testing steel. In a few cases piled in one corner there was $20,000 worth of field glasses waiting to be gone through.

One day not long ago an order arrived for a certain field gun. Plans had to be gotten out (there were over 200 for this particular piece), and forwarded to a factory. This alone kept the staff busy until into the night. Then such things as mess tins, tarpaulins, wheels, bolts; whiffletrees and a hundred and one other details are constantly calling for attention.

In another building such things as blankets and clothing are tested. Here every article is stamped with the Government stamp before being reshipped to the front. The staff in this case works day and night. On an average from 2,500 to 3,200 blankets are inspected a day.

The clothing is put through a severe test for both weight and strength. When the conditions are complied with reshipping commences. If, however, the goods will not stand the test they are not used.

There is a constant stream of teams arriving and departing from these offices all day long. "I have often waited three hours to get my load off," said a teamster the other day. Thousands of cases have been received, inspected and sent along their way since the opening of the war. Preparations are now being made for the handling of many thousands more.

The military offices are now putting to actual use the many contrivances which have come into play only under camp conditions. Plans of the latest war machinery are being gotten out and in some cases new ones made. Any who believe the equipping of an army is a small job need only visit these military headquarters to see the amount of work that is entailed when a Canadian division is sent to war.

An Indian Caribou Hunt.

A little herd was sighted feeding on a beaver meadow surrounded by woods. After a little consultation a young man and his wife stepped out cautiously from the woods, each one holding a red shawl fastened flagwise to a pole. Taking their stand about a dozen yards from the trees where their friends lay hidden, they stood motionless, resting their flag staffs on the ground.

After over an hour's waiting, four of the boldest of the caribou which had separated themselves from their companions approached the flags. With their noses outstretched in curiosity, they cautiously walked close up to the statuesque decoys, so close indeed that, like lightning, a knife was plunged right into the jugular vein of the one near to the man, and the squaw at the same moment dug her weapon, an old-fashioned bayonet, into the fore-quarter of the animal nearest to her.

The others fired at short range, the net result of the whole onset being three of the deer left dying on the snow. One escaped apparently uninjured and trotted away some 100 yards or so, when his companions met him, and there, within easy rifle range, the ten animals stood or lay placidly looking on until the work of skinning and quartering the victims was done and the hunters moved on.

Centenarian Knits For Boys.

Mrs. John Hughan, one of the oldest residents of Walkerton, Ont., has just knitted two pairs of socks for boys at the front. The old lady attached a cord to each pair with the following text written in her own hand: "Be of good cheer. Be not afraid. It is I," and on the reverse side of the card, "From Mrs. John Hughan, 90 years of age, Walkerton, Ont., Canada."

The parcel has been sent to Miss McNab for the McNab Red Cross League, and will be sent to the front with the next consignment.

Consideration for Prisoners.

Prisoners at Kingston Penitentiary will no longer suffer from being gazed at by the public. Warden Creighton has received orders from the Department of Justice that sightseers will in future be barred. Only people on business will be admitted.

Half as Much Again.

January, thus far, has been, in point of business turn-over, the biggest and most satisfactory we have ever experienced. That is saying a great deal, because it is generally known and quite freely admitted, that this business never knows a slow season. We are now getting all our Departments into shape for spring business. That means that all winter stocks must go. We do not believe in carrying goods from one season to another, and we might add that, as applying particularly to WOOLLENS, it will be many years before you will be able to buy for so little money as now.

CALEDON

The Caledon Dramatic Club journeyed to Orangeville on Friday night and presented their bright, witty, new Irish drama "Shaun Aroon" to a large and appreciative audience. After the entertainment the club was invited to St. Mark's Church where a sumptuous repast was served them and short speeches of a congratulatory nature were made by the rector, Mr. Tebbs, and other members of the A.Y.P.A. and replied to by some members of the Dramatic Club. After being shown the new pipe organ and singing the national anthem our young people departed for home well pleased with their first appearance in Orangeville and with the kindliest feelings toward St. Mark's A.Y.P.A. for the kind hospitality which was shown them.

Mrs. Geo. Langhlin spent the week-end with Queen City friends.

Mr. Homer Hillyard, who has been taking a short course at the O.A.C, Guelph, has returned home again.

At the annual meeting of the Consolidated Telephone Co., on Tuesday, all the former directors were re-elected, but Mr. McClellan, who resigned. Mr. Geo. Cameron, was elected to take Mr. McClellan's place.

Mr. John G. Harris, C. P. R. trainman has gone to take his new run from Cataract to Elora. We wish him success in his new position.

Mr. A. W. Stubbs, of Seven Persons, Alberta, and his mother, who has been visiting him, arrived home last week. Bert still wears the smile that won't come off and he does not require any Pink Pills either.

Miss Jennie Morrison, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Geo. Hillyard, for the past month has gone to visit her other sister, Mrs. (Rev.) E. R. Black, at Miami, Florida.

Mr. Wm. Moffatt has been confined to his home by a bad attack of lumbago. Dr. Thomas is in attendance and we wish for a speedy recovery.

Reeve Quinn is attending the sessions of the Peel County Council this week.

The annual meeting of the Caledon Public Library was held in the library building on Monday evening, Jan. 25th. The meeting was well attended and a real live interest in the success of our library was manifest. Our library is making splendid progress, and we look for still greater improvements during the year 1915, under the management of the Board of Directors, composed of the following members:—

Wm. Rutledge, Honorary Chairman; Rev. Jenkins Burkholder, Chairman; Dr. J. T. Thomas, Secretary Treasurer; Miss L. Rutledge, Miss Maude Scarland, Messrs. E. F. Wilson, Herbert Stuckey, Homer Hillyard, W. J. Atkinson and Dr. W. F. R. Stubbs.

The Caledon Branch of the Women's Institute will hold an open meeting in the basement of the Presbyterian Church in Charleston on Wednesday, Feb. 3rd, at 2.30 p.m. The District President, Mrs. Dorrington, of Alton, will give an address on Institute Work. Music will be provided by Misses Vogan, Glassford and Dodds. All ladies are cordially invited to attend.

The Old Dramatic Club scored a big hit in the Town Hall on Friday night, when they produced that bright and pleasing drama "The Danger Signal," under the auspices of the Women's Institute Society. Despite the fact that the weather was very unfavorable, it being both cold and stormy, the Hall was well filled. The proceeds, which amounted to $50 will go in aid of the Patriotic Fund.

The drama is entirely new and is given in two acts. We cannot recommend it too highly. It is undoubtedly one of the best plays ever given here. In the scene where "the Storm" arises, the effect is very fine. The stage grows dark and gradually loud peals of thunder and brilliant lightning burst forth.

Dr. Stubbs as "Pat, the Irishman," made a splendid display of Irish wit. Norman Harrison as the Darky Clown, Persimmon, brought forth great laughter.

The characters were all well taken, and are as follows:—Chas. Norman—Robert McKim, a dignified gentleman; Enfield N. Brown, a Repentant Villian; Peter Bullock—Wesley Speers, a City Boarder; Dr. Valerian—Will Dodds, a Theory Man; Chester Norman—Rutledge Wallace, a City Gentleman; Pat Maloney—Dr. Stubbs; Persimmon—N. Harrison, Darkey; Stella Enfield—Miss Irene McArthur, an Adopted Daughter; Miss Angle — Miss Cardwell Stubbs, a Lady from the City; Norah—Miss J. K. Groat, a Witty Irish Girl; Mother Foresight—Mrs. John Warnock, a Gipsy Woman. Caledon orchestra was in attendance and rendered splendid music.

MONO CENTRE

The recent storm has made the roads rather heavy for travelling. The mail courier from Orangeville failed to put in an appearance on Monday.

The debate on Saturday night drew quite a crowd. The subject: "Resolved that Conscription is better than Voluntary Defence" was keenly contested, the affirmative being taken by J. E. Arthur and Peter Bremner, while the negative was taken by J. A. McFadden and Miss Hortop. The judges gave the decision in favor of the negative by a narrow margin. Next Saturday night the debate will be taken by Mr. Lyman Waller and Mr. Boyd McLaine. The subject will be, "Resolved that Anticipation affords more pleasure than Realization." A good program will be provided.

Mr. George Waller, of Flesherton, paid a flying visit to friends around Mono Centre this week.

Mrs. G. F. Halbert, of Shelburne, and Mrs. H. J. Conn, of Perdue, Sask., paid a visit to Mono Centre friends the past week.

Mr. Wm. Lundy had a wood bee on Saturday buzzing poles and got a good supply of wood cut.

One of our nearby residents puts in a great time trying to sympathize with some who have been brought to task recently. Strange to say there is always one black sheep in a flock.

Our library board has put in a new assortment of books, including some of the very latest war books. Those desiring good reading would do well to join our library.

The Mono Centre Branch of the Women's Institute will meet at the home of Miss Barclay, on Thursday, February 4th, at 2.30 p.m. Sewing meeting. Will members kindly bring all unfinished sewing.

LAUREL

Our merchant, W. R. Grosskurth, is now running a butcher business in connection with the store, porter-house steak being the chief line.

We expect to see our butter factory in working order soon.

Many of our town houses now have the new Aladdin lamps installed. They are proving a great success.

Our Epworth League spent a pleasant evening at Grand Valley on Monday night as the guests of the Grand Valley League, who invited our leaguers over to a skating party. The skating was followed by a literary programme and lunch.

We regret to learn of the occurrence of a fire, which completely wiped out one of our large wood industries at the corner of the 4th line. Mr. J. Staveley's winter residence, his furniture, clothing and also supplies belonging to the cook were destroyed by fire on Monday forenoon. Mr. Staveley, who is an honest and hard-working man, has the sympathy of the neighbourhood in his loss.

The Box Social given here under the auspices of the Women's Institute was a great success. The hall was packed to overflowing by an appreciative audience which listened attentively to the choice programme that had been provided. It would be impossible to mention every item, but the sketch "Dr. Cure All" was especially good and mirth-provoking. The violin music of Mr. Petrie and his uncle was all that could be wished for in that line, especially the rendering of Annie Laurie.

We understand that our butter maker for the coming season has arrived in town. More particulars later.

We are pleased to note the smile of happiness on the face of Mr. Elijah Dynes on his frequent visits to Laurel. It is a girl.

Drama at Price's Corners

Price's Corners Dramatic Club will present the drama "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" in the Presbyterian Church at Price's Corners on Friday night, Jan. 29th. The popular Dyer Bros. orchestra will furnish music between acts. Programme at 8 o'clock. Admission 25c. Proceeds in aid of Patriotic Fund.

WEST MONO.

Divine service will be held (D.V.) on Sunday next, Jan. 31st, as follows:—St. George's, 11 a.m.; St. Luke's, 3 p.m.; St. Matthew's, 7 p.m.

"SHAUN AROON."

Caledon Dramatic Club Entertains an Orangeville Audience.

Amateur Thespians Present Irish Drama in Creditable Fashion.

One of the most important amateur theatrical offerings "Shaun Aroon," a remarkable comedy-drama, full of present day situations, was staged in the Opera House on Friday night last by the Caledon Dramatic Club, under the auspices of St. Mark's Church. The play with its original cast, has been seen on two or three other occasions, in the villages of this district, and the name it has made for itself attracted a fairly good house. Shaun Aroon is a comedy-drama setting forth vividly the conditions that have been and are existing in present day Irish life. It is an unmasking of modern Irish landlordism, chiefly concerning the grasping character of an agent by name of Fergus Riordan, who, by false documents and outrageous lying, nearly brings destruction and poverty to the O'Grady family, who hold a leasehold on the estate of Lord Fermoy. However, with all his cunning the agent is brought to book in the final scene with a lie stuck in his throat.

The curtain rises in the home of Dan O'Grady. Seated at a table are Fergus Riordan, the agent, and Dan O'Grady, the tenant of the leasehold. Both are discussing a way to raise £200, which Riordan says O'Grady must furnish on the order of Lord Fermoy, in exchange for an extension of the lease, which is about to expire. O'Grady cannot raise the £200 but offers £100. Riordan offers to get the other £100 from one, Hennings, a veritable old Shylock, if O'Grady will back the note. O'Grady agrees thereby falling into a trap cunningly devised by Riordan, who never intended to turn the money over to Lord Fermoy. Shaun Aroon, who has been absent from the homestead for some years, arrives along with a friend, Bad Andy, by name, and immediately sets about mashing Maggie, the sweet little maid of the O'Grady household. Molly O'Grady, the daughter, likes Bad Andy, and a few cooing words escape the loving pair. Riordan tries his hand at love making with Molly, but meets with an icy welcome. Finding himself thwarted he tries force, but a timely rescue by Shaun Aroon, who severely thrashes the villian, saves Molly from harm. Tom O'Grady arrives from America, to which country he had flown in order to escape imprisonment for a shooting affair, of which he is innocent. The arch-fiend, Riordan, asks Dan O'Grady for his daughter's hand, under threat of expulsion from the home. The old man, true as steel, refuses absolutely. Riordan in a fury has Tom arrested, and also has a writ served on O'Grady. But the mills of justice grind slow but sure and the tables are slowly turning. Hennings, the moneylender, seeing his loan slipping away, asks Riordan for the £100 loan and—here's where a bomb dropped—the £100 which Riordan promised him for firing the shot, for which Tom O'Grady was accused. Hennings is told to get out, and Shaun Aroon and Bad Andy, who have been eavesdropping, and who know too much about Riordan for the latter gentleman's liking, are arrested at the instance of Riordan. At the trial of Tom O'Grady, at which Lord Fermoy is to act as Judge, but has not yet arrived, Riordan proceeds with the case. Bad Andy and Shaun Aroon are witnesses. A court disturbance ensues, out of which emerges a tragic transformation. Hennings turns King's evidence and implicates Riordan in the shooting and denounces him as a swindler and fraud. Bad Andy, throwing down his false beard, reveals himself as no other than Lord Fermoy, who has been trailing Riordan in disguise. Riordan now feels the loving embrace of the bracelets, which snap together with a metallic ring. The contemptible fakir pleads for mercy without avail. The play ends in good old love tale style. Molly, who loved Bad Andy, now gets a real live Lord. Shaun Aroon and Maggie, the pretty little housemaid, make love in very convincing style. Mr. and Mrs. O'Grady are overcome with joy at the happy ending, and retain their home for the rest of their lives.

Mr. J. Hilliard appeared to splendid advantage as Shaun Aroon, a rather difficult role, owing to the Irish brogue necessary to the character. Mr. T. Scarland's portrayal of the dual role of Bad Andy and Lord Fermoy was well acted. The role of Fergus Riordan, taken by Mr. E. Stubbs, compared very favorably with the average stage villian. The memorizing of this difficult part was very creditable. Mr. H. Hilliard, as Dan O'Grady, made an admirable old Irish gentleman, his make-up being realistic. Miss M. Nesbitt, as Molly O'Grady, must be commended for the way she captured the heart of a Lord. A maid more full of vim and fire than Maggie, could not be wished for. This delightful role was portrayed by Miss E. M. Scarland. Her gusty temper when subduing Riordan caused great amusement. The roles of Hennings, by Mr. R. Chambers, Patrick, by Mr. B. Clark, Tom O'Grady, by Mr. C. Limebeer, Mrs. O'Grady, by Miss Mallatt, and Nipper by Mr. T. Nesbitt were well interpreted.

Never Saw the War.

Killed by a golf ball while on sentry duty is the fate that recently befell a member of G Company of the 4th Black Watch (City of Dundee, Scotland). He had been doing duty as guard at Wormit, and was at a spot which adjoins Wormit Golf Course, when a ball driven by a lady from a considerable distance struck him a severe blow on the temple, causing a wound and a considerable flow of blood. He was conveyed in a dazed condition to a villa in which he had been billeted. It was supposed that he was recovering, but later he collapsed.

New Tobacco Area.

The annexation of German New Guinea, by the Australians has made a notable addition to the tobacco-growing area of the Empire. The tobacco plant is indigenous to New Guinea, but it has never been cultivated for export in the British section of the island. The German colonists discovered, however, that New Guinea tobacco, properly treated, finds a ready sale in the European market, and they formed a syndicate which exports the leaf in great quantities.

REV. MARMADUKE PEARSON

A well-known figure among Canadian Methodists passed away on Friday night, Jan. 15th, in the person of Rev. Marmaduke Pearson, who died at his son's residence, 6 Burlington Crescent, Toronto, following a stroke of paralysis, the fatal attack being the second which he had suffered. The late Rev. Marmaduke Pearson, who was one of the Methodist preachers of the old school, was born in Ireland, his family coming to Canada in 1845, at which time he was a child of three, and settling at Consecon, near Picton, in Prince Edward County. He became a local preacher, and was ordained to the ministry, in which he served until his superannuation four years ago. During his long ministration Mr. Pearson filled pulpits in numerous centres, among other places being the Cities of Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto. He was pastor of Grace Church, Brampton, for four years. His last Toronto charge was at Berkeley Street Methodist Church, and just prior to his superannuation he was minister at Strathroy. Surviving him are four brothers, E. P., Charles, Wesley and Arthur, of Toronto, and three sons and two daughters. The sons are Rev. E. A. Pearson, of Chatham; Harold W., of Toronto, and W. T. now in South America. His daughters are Mrs. Edson White, of Chicago, and Miss Kathleen, at home.

NEW JOB FOR MAYORS.

Chief Executives of Montreal and Toronto Now Matrimonial Agents.

A new vocation has sprung up for Mayors of Canadian cities. They are being called into service as matrimonial agents. Every now and again the chief executive of an eastern city gets a letter from a bachelor somewhere, usually in the west asking him to pick out a bride from the city's attractive damsels. One of the civic fathers with such a job on hand is Montreal famous mayor, Mederic Martin, M.P. Last spring he announced that he had work for everybody that wanted it. There were five thousand men at the City Hall the next day looking for the job. They followed him to his home on Logan avenue and pestered him so much that he had to have police protection. Being mayor he found was a strenuous occupation.

Now, however, he has a worse task than ever before him — one that strikes terror even to his brave heart. He has to find a wife for a burly western farmer. That might not be so difficult in a city of 700,000 people if the would-be benedict were not so particular. She must be a Catholic; he prefers Canadian-born, although he would have no serious objections to English-bred. She must be good to look upon and be somewhere between the ages of 24 and 32 years.

The lady is going to get a model man, for he says of himself that he does not smoke, drink or swear, and that he has property worth $9,000 any day. Moreover, he says he is good-looking.

This is what gets the mayor's "goat": "I want a wife with dreamy eyes, one to attract the attention of a bachelor who has knowledge of the world, and I know you can help me get her." Mayor Mederic has the order of his life now. It's a sticker of a job, but Mederic will do his best.

In addition to his other duties, Mayor Hocken of Toronto may also be involved in the multitudinous worries of a matrimonial agency. Until the first business arrived recently, His Worship did not even know that he had anything to do with the connubial inclinations of bachelors and maids. But this is the letter that came to him the other morning:—

"I saw in a paper that any bachelors in need of a wife to apply to either Hamilton or Toronto. I am an engineer and mechanic; don't drink or use tobacco, 36 years of age. Now I don't like boarding out and I will take a good wife as soon as I find what I want. If you will give me the address of a good person, I will write and see about them. I will not have anything to do with English people as I am Scotch."

The mayor is waiting to hear from applicants.

Canada's Finances.

The October statement of the Finance Department reports that in the month the net debt of Canada increased $9,288,814, and now stands at $352,675,399. The revenue for the month was $10,641,254, a decrease of $3,584,344, as compared with October last year. For the first seven months of the fiscal year the revenue totaled $80,972,466, a decrease of $20,130,848 as compared with the same period last year.

The total gross debt of the country on October 31 was $609,478,952, as against $498,894,937 on October 31, 1913.

The customs revenue for October was $5,331,508, as against $9,044,845 a year ago. For the seven months the total is $47,238,177, a drop of $19,000,000. The excise for the month was $1,613,641, a decrease of $320,000, while for the seven months it was just even with last year. The postoffice revenue was $950,000, an increase of $25,000 for the month.

The capital expenditure on public works, including railways, was $4,479,119 for the month, as against $3,343,026 a year ago, while the total for the seven months is $22,181,794; an increase of $4,500,000. The expenditure on current account for October was $9,696,064, as against $8,749,737 last year, and for the seven months the expenditure was $65,211,703, as against $57,446,828 for the same period last year.

Defence of the Toad.

Our reference last week to the loafers who were hanging around this town as being of as little use to the Empire in this crisis as a hop toad, has brought forth a vigorous protest from a Brant farmer, who claims that it is slanderous libel on a good toad to compare it to a useless loafer who don't work and won't fight for his country. The toad is fighting the foes of vegetation all its life, and as an asset to the nation in keeping the grubs and insects down is enough to make idle loafers look cheaper than Mexican money with holes in it.—Bruce Times.

Old Enemies Friends.

Prof. L. W. R. Mulloy of the Royal Military College, the blind hero of the Boer war, is a friend of State Commandant Cronje, who met the Rebel General De Wet's force at Sand River Bridge, Doorberg, Orange Free State, and fought a battle in which Gen. De Wet's son was killed. The two were at Oxford University in England six years ago. Commandant Cronje is a nephew of Gen. Cronje of the Boer war. Prof. Mulloy says he was one of the brightest young men at Oxford and a good fellow.

Apples For the King.

The prize barrel of apples of Lambton County Fruit Show held at Sarnia recently, has been sent to his Majesty King George by the Department of Agriculture. The apples were grown by E. G. Augustine of Alvinston. The prize box grown by Johnston Bros. of Forest was sent to the Duke of Connaught.

ALMOST EVERY ONE NEEDS A TONIC

Almost everyone—man, woman and child—needs a tonic at sometime. It is often said that a man is lazy because he takes little or no interest in his work; but the truth is he is not well. He needs a tonic. The same is true of a woman who does not hustle over her home work, but only feels fit to be in bed. She is not merely tired, but ill. A dull pain in the head or back, poor appetite, loss of strength with low spirits and loss of interest in life show that you need a tonic to brace up the nerves and give you a new lease of life. The proof is that when the right tonic is taken all the trouble quickly disappears. The one tonic—the only tonic—for weak and ailing men, women and children is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which speedily bring back abundant health, strength and energy. They have done this in thousands and thousands of cases as is proven by the following. Mr. Ed. A. Owen, Burdett, Alta., says:—"About two years ago my health was in a wretched condition. My whole system seemed to be run down and the doctor seemed puzzled at my condition. I had no appetite, exertion would leave me breathless, and I was troubled much with dizziness. All the medicine I took did me no good and I was steadily growing weaker. My mother urged me to try Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and before I had taken them very long I began to feel like a new man and continuing their use I was restored to complete health. I now recommend them to all run down in health as they are the best medicine I know of."

Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SEEING BY WIRE.

The New Invention, Televista, and How It Works.

Dr. Archibald M. Low, a London consulting engineer, claims to have discovered a method by which light may be transmitted by wire. The invention is thus described: The contrivance consists of a transmitter and a receiver connected by wire. The transmitter is a screen divided into a large number of small squares—cells of selenium, the electrical resistance of which element varies according to the light that touches it. Over the screen is passed a synchronously running roller consisting of a number of pieces, which are alternately conductors and insulators. The roller is driven by a motor of 3,000 revolutions per minute, and the resulting variations of light are transmitted along an ordinary conducting wire. The receiver is made up of a series of cells operated by the passage of polarized light through thin slats of steel, and at the receiver the object before the transmitter is reproduced as a flickering image.

The process is referred to by the inventor as a "kinematographic application of common electrical principles." The system has been tested through a resistance equivalent to a distance of four miles, but in the opinon of Dr. Low there is no reason why it should not be equally effective over far greater distances.

It is stated that the selenium in the transmitting screen may be replaced by any diamagnetic material. The cost of the apparatus is considerable, due to the fact that the conductive sections of the rollers are made of platinum and that many wires are required for the transmission of the images. The invention is called the "televista."—Consular Report.

Plenty of Excitement.

The "chicken thieves" at Coldwater are now stealing turkeys. When last heard from Editor Chester's lone duck was still safe, but its mate had not been returned. Coldwater is not like a town dependent solely on the war news for excitement. — Orillia Packet.

Much Pain From Kidney Disease

Kidney derangements are often associated with disorders of the liver and bowels, and under these conditions ordinary kidney medicines usually fail to effect cure. It is because of their unique, combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so generally successful, even in the most complicated cases.

Mr. Emanuel Bernard, farmer, St. Paul's, Kent county, N.B., writes:—"About eighteen years ago my wife was bad with kidney disease, and suffered greatly from headaches, pains in bowels and stomach, and her heart was affected. For a year she was treated by her doctor, with no apparent benefit. She then used five boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with most satisfactory results. This gave us such a good opinion of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills that we always keep them in the house to be used for all derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE STOLID ENGLISH.

How the People of Four Nations Behaved In War Crisis.

Here is the interesting narrative of a tourist who had to journey through four countries after the Austrian declaration of war upon Servia. It shows the extraordinary contrast between the English and the continental attitude in the grave crisis which has developed into general war.

"On Monday, July 27, we tried to enter the Parliament building in Vienna, but they were closed to visitors owing to the war. All newspaper offices had large crowds outside reading the telegrams posted up and waiting for more. Extra leaflets with the latest news were issued in thousands every hour or so. By evening the situation had become much graver. Mobilization was to begin on the morrow and only one train, starting at 7.55 a.m., was guaranteed for Vienna.

"By 6.30 a.m. on the following morning, the first day of the mobilization, we were in a cab on the way to the station. We saw many soldiers on their way, too, accompanied by their families.

"Over touching parting between sad-eyed pale men, weeping women and dazed children, I will draw a veil. The departure of individuals on their way to the various headquarters presents a very different sight from a regiment with a band and cheering crowds. The agonized farewells brought home one of the appalling sides of war in a way that perhaps is rare.

"I talked with some tourists on the train. They would not believe that the situation was very grave and considered the station scenes sentimentally foolish. No wonder accounts of affairs vary! Heart-rending partings occurred at all the stoppages on the line. All bridges were guarded by soldiers.

"Berlin station was a pandemonium of shouting, struggling, gesticulating masses of people who thronged every part. No porters were to be had. Woe to those who were unable to carry heavy hand luggage, or who had registered luggage. Amongst other experiences, we were all turned out of the train at the Dutch frontier, and had to get into a Dutch train. Rumors of non-starting boats did not add to our peace of mind.

"Endless illustrations of folly and thoughtlessness occurred. One was that practically everyone except ourselves had omitted to bring provisions for the journey; another was of people who had left England only a week ago with things in the state they were, and then regretting waste of tickets, money, time, etc. We reached Rotterdam shortly after noon on Sunday. The town was swarming with Dutch soldiers, mostly drunk—a disgusting sight, and a great contrast to the Austrian, Hungarian and German men. The bank was crowded with the usual withdrawers of money. The money exchange bureau would give nothing but paper money, and the shops would sell nothing for paper. This threw travelers into endless difficulties. We overcame them by first eating our lunch at a restaurant, and then proffering paper in payment. It was that or nothing, so it was accepted, and we got our coin as change.

"About 1.30 p.m. on Sunday we reached Liverpool street station, London. Where were the excited crowds seizing newspapers and discussing war? We saw only Bank-Holiday-makers reading novelettes! The contrast was extraordinary. Truly, the English are a strange nation!"

Zeppelins Have Bomb Cage.

The method used by Zeppelin airships in dropping bombs has been described by an English refugee who has arrived in London from Belgium. The dirigible hovers over its objective at a sufficient altitude to keep it out of range of the enemy's guns. At the same time, to get a better aim, it lowers a steel cage attached to a steel wire rope 2,000 or 3,000 feet long.

This cage is divided into compartments, and it carries one man, whose duty it is to throw down the bombs. The cage is sufficiently strong to make rifle fire against it ineffective, and because of its small size and the fact that it is kept constantly in motion it is very difficult for heavy guns to hit it.

Human History.

There is no such thing as human history. Nothing can be more profoundly, sadly true. The annals of mankind have never been written, never can be written. We have a leaf or two torn from the great book of human fate as it flutters in the storm winds ever sweeping across the earth. We decipher them as we best can with purblind eyes and endeavor to learn their mystery as we float along to the abyss, but it is all confused babble, hieroglyphics of which the key is lost.—Motley.

This One Did It.

"Tell me, honestly," said the novel reader to the novel writer, "did you ever see a woman who stood and tapped the floor impatiently with her toe for several moments as you describe?"

"Yes," was the thoughtful reply, "I did once."

"Who was she?"

"She's a clog dancer." — London Tit-Bits.

Fun In the Family.

"See, darling," and Mrs. Justwed held up for her husband's gaze three mirrors arranged so as to give as many reflections, "I can get a triple view of myself."

"Jump!" gurgled her brute of a man, struggling with his collar. "You seem to be quite popular with yourself!"

Many women with disfigured complexions never seem to think that they need an occasional cleansing inside as well as outside. Yet neglect of this internal bathing shows itself in spotty, and sallow complexions—as well as in dreadful headaches and biliousness. IN NAGASAKI HARBOR.

Where Japanese Women Work at Coaling Ships.

There is at least one place in the world where a woman may earn as much as a man for the same labor and where the two sexes work side by side. This is at Nagasaki, Japan. When a liner comes into port the passengers who have been viewing the beautiful harbor observe a fleet of barges laden with coal which are lying in wait near the anchorage. On most of them are 20 to 30 men and women, the latter predominating.

In contrast with the kimono-clad women at Tokio and Yokehama and Kobe, these wear short skirts with cloth stockings and their heads are covered with thin cotton cloth bearing a peculiar Japanese design in blue print. Some of them have babies with them, and as the ship draws near they hastily bind them on the backs of little girls and boys and make ready for work.

In a trice, it seems, at each of the coal ports a pyramidal series of platforms is rigged up, the lowest level being just above the deck of the barge. Then on each platform two women, or a man and a woman, take their position while a lot of men hurry down to the bunkers of the ship to receive the coal after it has been passed in and stow it away. From the end of the platform a double line extends to where men do nothing but throw a big shovelful of coal in a shallow basket, which holds about a peck or a peck and a half. The basket travels from hand to hand, but part of the effect of gravity is overcome by the forward motion, for the receptacle does not stop from the time it is once in the air until it reaches the ship's side. The empty basket is dropped with the same swing that discharges its contents, and an old woman sitting behind the man on the top platform does nothing but toss the baskets to the barge below.

Nagasaki has the name of being the "fastest" coal port in the world, though the labor here is all done by hand. An army captain tells of being on the transport Thomas at Nagasaki in April, 1912, when she took on 2,600 tons in seven and a half hours.

To count the workers who are engaged on the job is difficult. Fresh barges keep coming up all the time and fresh workers. Often there are as many as 900 men and women at work. They fairly swarm along both sides of the ship. The pay for this labor is by piece. Workmen and workwomen each get one yen, or 50 cents for a day's work of eight to nine hours.

It is bewildering to watch the workers, for the baskets come up so steadily it looks as though they must be moved by machinery. Practice has taught men and women to make each motion count and the whole effect is that of clockwork.

One Hundred Years From Now.

"On yonder hill," cried the general, scanning the battlefield with his glasses. "I see a black mass of humanity. What are they?"

"Camera fiends," replied the second-in-command.

"And who are occupying that field to the southwest?"

"Those," answered the S.-I.-C., "are operators for the Go-ahead Picture Comapny."

"I see a battalion with curious-shaped uns."

"They are not guns; they are gramophones and phonographs, in which are to be recorded the roar of cannon and the cries of the wounded."

"'Tis well!" exclaimed the general, fondling his beard complacently. "Let the battle begin."

Prisoner's Model Airship.

Some of the prisoners of war at Fort Henry, near Kingston, have had some experience in the manufacture of airships. One German, who is handy with a penknife, has amused himself for some days in cutting a model of an airship out of pieces of wood picked up around the grounds inside the walls. A few pieces of wire were used to put the machine together. Pieces of cotton form the wings on the ship. The maker takes great pride in his work, and has the model hanging from the ceiling in the room where he is confined. It is stated that there are other men in the fort who have had considerable experience in the work.

Care of the Finger Tips.

A simple method of keeping hands and nails in good order is to halve a lemon, insert the fingers, and turn them round and round in the pulp. This will tend to prevent the skin from growing up round the nails and hiding the white crescent which should always appear at the base of the nail. After washing the hands well in warm water and soap, the skin surrounding the nails should be pushed down by the fingers, or, better still, by a bunt bone instrument made for the purpose.

Persia's Crown.

The Persian crown is made of pure gold, incrusted with precious stones. The Persians declare that the crown is 3,000 years old and belonged to Saladin. A new emerald is added at each coronation. It was formerly the custom for the crown to be suspended by a chain and for the Shah to stand under it, but now two statesmen place it upon the ruler's head.

Holy Cities.

Allahabad is the holy city of the Indian Mohammedans, Benares is the holy city of the Hindus, while Cuzco is that of the ancient Incas. Jerusalem is the holy city of the Jews and Christians. Mecca, Medina and Damascus have first place in the affections of the Mohammedans. Moscow and Kiev are the holy cities of the Russians.

A Big Crane.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th, 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box. 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FUNNY JOHN BUNNY.

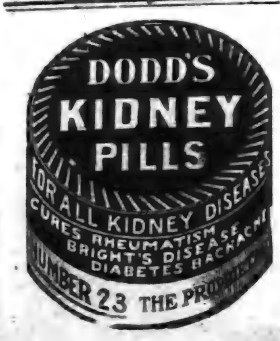
His Is One of the Most Familiar Faces in the World.

The face of John Bunny (the funny fat man of the movies) is at once his fortune and his misfortune. It has established him as one of the highest salaried actors in the world and at the same time has made him so easily recognizable that he cannot hide. If Mr. Bunny enters a Broadway restaurant the diners stop dining long enough to wave a Chautauqua salute. If he goes to a prizefight or ball game the fans stand and cheer his entrance. If he walks down the street a crowd follows and congests traffic.

It seems scarcely necessary to state that John Bunny is the very funny fat man who falls out of airships and tumbles off skyscrapers in the movies, since it is estimated that more than 7,000,000 people in the United States and between fifteen and twenty million in the world attend the movies daily and most of these at some time or other have laughed at Bunny's antics.

When Mr. Bunny had been acting for the films only a year and a half he went abroad to be photographed in photo plays with foreign backgrounds. His trip proved a triumphal tour from the moment he mounted the gangplank. At every station at which the boat train to London stopped the loungers recognized him immediately be stepped upon the platform. In London whenever he walked upon the Strand or in Ludgate Circus he was given a young ovation. In Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg the cry, "There goes Bunny!" in as many respective languages always greeted his appearance in public.—American Magazine.

Infielders and Outfielders.



It would take a modern Solomon to select the premier ball player from the galaxy of headliners. Leaving out the twirlers and the heavy stickers, and taking only the field work of the players at large into consideration, I have found that a majority of fans agree on the proposition that infielders are more useful than outfielders, and that, if a man to stand at the head of the baseball class is selected for his general usefulness, he will be chosen from among the men covering first, second, third or short. Take Cobb and Collins, for instance, who are wonders at fielding their positions. Last year Cobb had 300 chances to retire batsmen and Collins had 804. Speaker, out among the daisies, had 488 opportunities to make errors, while Weaver had 980, and McInnes 1,595 chances.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

A Bargain In Pearls.

Five fine pearls for 2 cents apiece was the bargain picked up by Miss Grace Lane shortly before the war broke out. Passing down a busy street in London, she saw a peddler with a trayful of pearls and a placard inscribed, "Real Pearls—Two Cents Each." Afterward she found that they were worth $50 apiece. A jeweler had hawked the pearls around to win a wager, firmly convinced that nobody would believe they were real, and so nobody would buy them.

INCA TREASURES.

Priceless Remains of Peruvian Civilization May Be Recovered.

New attempts are being made by a number of explorers who have formed a company to discover the ancient gold deposits of Peru.

Many efforts have been made to find the hidden treasures of the Incas, but so far without success. After the Spaniards under Pizarro killed the Inca King Atahualpa, they marched upon Cuzco, then the fabulously wealthy capital city of Peru. But the Indian knew their foe's greed for precious metals, and the greater part of the immense Inca treasures was buried secretly.

Tradition says that the millions of dollars' worth of treasure was thrown into the little Lake Urcos high up in the Andes.

There was a great golden chain which ran around the main piazza of the capital, relates a traveler now in the Inca country. This plaza remained intact until a few years ago. It was about 500 feet long and several hundred feet wide, so that the length of the chain was probably between one and two thousand feet.

The chain was, according to old accounts, of pure gold, wrought into links about a foot long and as large around as the wrist of a man. The links were so heavy that a man could not lift more than one of them at a time, and it is said that hundreds of Indians were required to carry the chain.

They took it up the valley of Cuzco and threw it into the lake, and there it is supposed to lie to this day, although many have searched for it in vain. The treasure hunters have dived into the waters and clawed over the mud near the shore.

They have also dragged the lake with grappling hooks, but in places it is exceedingly deep, and so far the treasure has not been discovered.

At one time a syndicate was organized to drain the lake. This syndicate had a capital of $5,000,000 and its plan was to tunnel the mountainside. But the rock was tough, political reasons interposed, and the enterprise was abandoned.

The amount taken from the temples of Cuzco alone is said to have been worth more than $90,000,000, and a part of this went to Cajamarca to free the Inca Emperor Atahualpa when he was treacherously imprisoned by Pizarro.

The Inca Emperor had come in friendship. He was carried to Cajamarca in a litter of massive gold covered with a cloth embroidered with the plumes of tropical birds.

This cloth was studded with gold and silver plates. Atahualpa's hair was decorated with gold. He had on a golden crown, and around his neck was a collar of emeralds.

At the start Pizarro treated Atahualpa well, but a little later on charged him with treachery, and put him in a prison about 14 feet square. The Inca King took a stone and scratched a mark on the wall as high up as he could reach, telling Pizarro that he would fill the room to that height with gold if he could only be free.

This proposition was accepted, and gold in the shape of vases, utensils and plates was brought in from all parts of the Empire. It was melted down by the Indians under the direction of the Spaniards.

When the prison room was filled to the mark made by Atahualpa, he was released. But he was still kept under surveillance, and a little later was accused of plotting against the Spaniards. He was given a mock trial, and was condemned to be burned, his execution being commonly attributed to Friar Valverde, who was afterward made Bishop of Cuzco.

Yawning Fish.

The mouth of the turbot is twisted to one side, rather as if it had belonged to a round fish which some one had accidentally trod on and squashed half flat. The yawn begins at the lips, which open as if to suck in water. Then the jaws become distended, and it is seen that this is going to be a real, genuine fish's yawn. But the yawn goes on, works through the back of its head, distending the plates of the skull, and comes out at the gills, which, open, show the red inside and are inflated for a moment, and then, with a kind of stretching shiver of its back, the fish flattens out again.—London Mail.

The First Firearms.

The early history of firearms in the sense of tubes from which missiles are thrown by the action of a detonating compound of the nature of gunpowder is wrapped in obscurity, though it may be inferred from the few early records that such weapons were first employed in warfare soon after the beginning of the fourteenth century, if not some time before. The country of their origin remains uncertain, but it was most probably Italy.

A Difficult Lesson.

"It is next to impossible for a man to teach a pretty girl how to whistle," said a musician who is a good whistler.

"How is that?" he was asked.

"Well, providing she is not your wife or sister, when a pretty girl gets her lips properly puckered she usually looks so bewitchingly tempting that he kisses her, and the consequences is she doesn't have a chance to blow a note."

Slandered.

"Millie, dear, what is your papa's objection to me?"

"He says you don't seem to have any definite object or purpose in life, Harry."

"Yet he knows I've been coming to see you for five straight years!"

COURTNEY—SIMPSON.

An exceedingly pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Simpson, Grand Valley, on Wednesday, January 20th, when their eldest daughter, Margaret Pearl, was united in holy matrimony to Norman Stanley Courtney, of Teeswater, formerly of Waldemar. To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march rendered by Miss Violet Simpson, sister of the bride, the happy couple took their places under a beautiful arch in the drawing room where the ceremony was performed in the presence of between 30 and 40 guests. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Lila Simpson, and the groom by his brother, John Courtney, of Mount Forest. As the bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, her two brothers acted as ribbon bearers, the Rev. Edwin Wyle, B.A., officiating. The bride was daintily gowned in ivory charmeuse trimmed with chantilly lace and pearls, wearing the gift of the groom, a pearl bridal brooch; the Juliette cap and bridal veil and carrying a bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid's dress was of pink brocaded satin trimmed with lace and fur and she carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bride's mother wore black satin and a bouquet of violets, the groom's mother's dress being of black satin and violets.

After congratulations and while the register was being signed, Mrs. A. C. Simpson sang, "Oh Promise Me," after which all retired to the dining room, where ample justice was done to the sumptuous repast, the tables being artistically decorated in white and pink flowers in great profusion. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. E. Wyle, and responded to by the groom in well chosen words. Other toasts were to the host and hostess, bridesmaid and groomsman, and the ladies.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts, showing the high esteem in which she is held by her many friends both in church and communal life.

The friends present from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Courtney, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Simpson, of Fergus; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Youmans, of Arthur.

Amid showers of confetti, flowers and good wishes the newly wedded couple left on the 5 o'clock train for an extended trip to Niagara Falls and points in the eastern states, the bride wearing a suit of navy cloth and black hat trimmed with white osprey.—Star & Vidette.

Renewed Vigor in Old Age

This Letter Brings a Message of Cheer to the Aged—Results of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the declining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter.

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes:—"At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their health and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. A Dastardly Trick.

There appears to be no limit to the dastardly deeds of the Germans. Their latest is to attach a mine to a boat and turn the craft adrift. When a ship, thinking a disaster has occurred, comes along to render help, her errand of mercy is converted into one of death.

The master of the Grimsby steam trawler Agatha on Wednesday reported that whilst his vessel was fishing in the North Sea a ship's boat was sighted, and, concluding that a disaster had occurred, the trawler sent a boat out, and discovered that the derelict was a ship's lifeboat.

The trawler took it in tow; but directly towing commenced a terrific explosion occurred, luckily too far from the trawler to cause damage. Close examination showed that a mine had been attached to the lifeboat by ropes and wires in such a manner as to blow up any ship which steamed alongside to pick the lifeboat up.

She Was In Bed For Seven Weeks

Then Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Madame Berube.

Montreal Lady tells how, after Four Years' Illness, She Found a Complete Cure for all Her Troubles.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 25.—(Special)—Madame J. Baptiste Berube, residing at 1393 Logan Avenue, this city, asserts that after four years' suffering from kidney disease she has been completely restored to health by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I had a pain in my left side around the heart," Madame Berube says in her statement. "I suffered constantly with headache and backache, and for seven weeks I was in bed with kidney disease and feebleness. The doctor could not help me, so I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"After the first box I was some better. I continued to use Dodd's Kidney Pills till now the palpitation has left me, and I am a well woman, able to do my work. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me and I recommended them to all persons who suffer as I did."

Notice how many women are rising to tell their suffering sisters they can find relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills. The reason is that nine-tenths of women's ills spring from diseased or disordered kidneys. Every woman whose kidneys show signs of weakness should use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Geo. Flatt Dead.

Former Resident of Mono Township Passed Away in N. Dakota

From the Fargo, N.D., Daily Republican we learn that George Flatt, a former resident of Mono town ship, died in a hospital in that city on Wednesday morning, Jan. 20th, after a lingering illness. Deceased, who resided in Sheldon, N. D., was 68 years of age. Death resulted from cancer of the stomach. A brother, J. D. Flatt, also of Sheldon, was at his bedside during the last moments. The late Mr. Flatt was born in Mono township on Nov. 18th, 1851. He went to North Dakota in 1881, but subsequently returned to Ontario and farmed in Mono for a number of years. He went to the West a second time twelve or fifteen years ago and was engaged in farming near Sheldon. Deceased is survived by three brothers and four sisters, namely, J. D. Flatt, of Sheldon, John Flatt, of Fargo, Alfred Flatt, of Orangeville, Thos. Flatt, of Crookston, N. D., Mrs. Jno Burgess, of Velva, Mrs. Cauthers, of Collingwood, and Mrs. Storey, of Alton. The remains were interred at Sheldon, N. D., on Friday afternoon, Jan. 22nd, the funeral being held from the Methodist church

George Lamb's Death.

Word has reached The Banner of the death at Benzonia, Mich., of George Lamb, a son of the late Thos. Lamb, of East Garafraxa. John Lamb, of East Garafraxa, who is a brother, has just returned from Benzonia, where he has been assisting to look after the business of winding up his brother's estate. The deceased was 54 years of age and unmarried. He went to Michigan about 30 years ago and had gone well there. His estate, we understand, is valued at about $17,000.

"Chappie" Houston Dead.

His local friends will regret to learn of the death of a former well-known resident of Erin, in the person of Mr. J. Houston, familiarly known as "Chappie," for 17 years tu editor and business manager of the Erin Advocate. Mr. Houston left Erin some years ago to take the position of editor of the Alio, Mich., Telegram, which was burned out last fall. Misfortune has dogged his footsteps of late years. First he lost his wife and then suffered from fire which destroyed all his household furniture, his daughter barely escaping with her life. Mr. Houston had been afflicted with an internal trouble for a considerable time and finally went to Guelph Hospital, where he succumbed to his malady on Sunday, Jan. 10th. He leaves to mourn his loss a son, Roy, living in Hamilton, a daughter, Agnes, in Guelph, four brothers and a sister. The late Mr. Houston was an enthusiastic member of the Sons of Scotland, and was a leading spirit in Erin's famous curling rink. He was also a member of the Masonic order. He was of a jovial and convivial disposition and had a host of friends, who will regret his untimely end while sympathy goes out to the family in their loss.

In 1903 he commenced private banking business in Thedford and was engaged in this business until his death. He took great interest in municipal matters and served frequently on the municipal boards of Bosanquet and Thedford and was a school trustee throughout the building of the new school. In politics he was an Independent-Conservative. In 1905 he was appointed a J.P. by the Whitney Government, and was an efficient and conscientious magistrate. He was a strong supporter of church union and of temperance. During his long association he was a strong factor in the business life of Thedford and his loss will be keenly felt by his friends. KILLED BY EXPRESS.

Farmer's Tragic Death at Dangerous Level Crossing Near Brampton

The driving snowstorm, and the dangerous level crossing on the first line road about a mile north of Brampton combined to bring about the instant death of William Roshier, aged 37, a farmer, who lived on the Poyntz farm, when his cutter was struck by a southbound G. T. R. express on Saturday evening. Florence Arnold, a servant, was also in the cutter, but miraculously escaped injury.

Roshier and the horse were killed outright. The train stopped immediately and took the dead man's body to the station at Brampton. Coroner Dr. J. A. Lawson was summoned and a jury empanelled with John Speers as foreman. After the viewing of the body the inquest was adjourned until Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the town council chamber.

Florence Arnold, who was with Roshier, was in such a state of nervous collapse that she was unable to tell her version of the accident. She apparently jumped from the cutter when she saw the train coming and just saved herself. She ran down the road to Arthur Fletcher's farmhouse nearby.

The level crossing in question is said to be very dangerous and has been the scene of several accidents. It is about 14 feet above the road level, and is in such a position that it is hard to see trains approaching. Roshier is said to have been rather deaf and coupled with the driving storm, he prossoly did not see the train until it was almost on top of him. He leaves a widow and one young child.

Fell In a Faint.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

ESPIONAGE AT OTTAWA

SUSPICIOUS LOOKING MEN ARE COMMON AT THE CAPITAL.

Sometimes They Represent Themselves To Be Representatives of Manufacturers Seeking To Sell War Material and Often They Are Merely Looking for Jobs—Many Went Home at Outbreak of War.

The efficiency of the German system of secret service and the perfection of their methods of espionage have long been one of the proudest of many boasts of the Fatherland, and unquestionably constitute a strong contributory factor in the plan and execution of its military operations. How it works in Canada, where its operations are carried on and the character and design of the general scheme are subjects of constant investigation by the authorities of the Dominion Government.

Ever since the war broke out—and previously, for that matter—our own secret service agents have been keeping in close touch with the situation, and to them has come fairly convincing evidence that Canada has not been at all overlooked by Germany in the allocation of those who engaged in hostile espionage or the supply of information calculated to be of more or less vital advantage to the enemy.

Cases are known where this plan of campaign has been going on for years. The German who ostensibly was in Canada to reside permanently or was here on business without the remotest apparent association with war, has in many instances since hostilities broke out, disappeared, having accomplished his purpose.

For one that has gone, however, a score remain. Every city and district in Canada to-day furnishes to them, in greater or less numbers, a hospitality which in most instances is open and unsuspecting.

Many of these have disappeared and been replaced by others, who from their appearance and the character of their supposed callings would be less likely to arouse suspicion. In any event, that they are still with us in uncomfortable numbers admits of no doubt. Not a day passes but that the Government is overwhelmed with communications calling attention to supposed acts of espionage. Allowing that many of them are unfounded and that in most of the rest there is an insufficient warrant for apprehension, the extensive existence of the system cannot be questioned, nor can the need of caution by the Canadian people be too strongly emphasized.

Concrete cases, of which there are a good number since the war began, are hard to get at because of official reticence, and the perhaps questionable view that publicity might be a deterrent or injurious factor. A number of them, however, have come to light in Ottawa and furnish instructive illustrations of the methods in vogue by the German agents.

The war had been on a week or so and the Militia Department was at its busiest; prep[illegible] the dispatch of the first divisio[illegible] well-dressed man, polished [illegible] approached one of the [illegible] officers of the Department.

"Would [illegible] how many rifles the Canadian militia possessed?" was the [illegible] question. When asked his [illegible] in making such a query, he represented [illegible] as being connected with a British armament firm, which could readily replenish any scarcity in the domestic supply, but of course would like to know all about [illegible] rifle equipment, the ammunition used, and account of it and rifles on hand and the capacity of our factor[illegible] remains out more.

This man was no stranger. He had been around Ottawa for a couple of years, ostensibly a mineralogist, with a reputation as a good fellow, and more or less prominence in certain social sets. It is need[illegible] to say that the information [illegible] not forthcoming, and the gentl[illegible] was, in fact, advised to make his disappearance in relatively short order.

The instance above cited is by no means isolated. Just a few days ago, a stylishly dressed young man, obviously a German, but ostensibly a former Swedish naval officer, now a "naturalized and enthusiastic Canadian," applied at a Department in Ottawa for a clerical position. The Department in question has much to do with war correspondence.

Curiously enough he was highly recommended by a Canadian of prominence. The assumption is that the good-hearted Canadian who furnished the letter of credentials was innocently enough assisting the employment of a spy designing to get at confidential information. Again the proof is lacking but the strong suspicion remains. He didn't get the job.

Care was very properly observed and a censorship of news established in regard to the movement of our troops, but there is no reason to doubt that Germany was kept advised of doings at Valcartier; of the embarkation at Quebec, and of the date of sailing of the contingent. The mines strewn off the Irish coast, according to despatches, are believed by the Admiralty to have been laid for Canadian transports. German submarines likewise laid in wait. The scheme failed but the information as to the movement of our troops was flashed indirectly to Germany and doubtless it was done by German secret service agents in Canada.

A more pacific but nevertheless effective plan of activity, carefully being watched by the Government, concerns the maintenance of German trade with Canada and the forwarding from Canada of supplies destined for Germany. Evidence has come to light of extensive attempts to buy up Canadian produce to ship to the United States, have it forwarded from there to Holland or some neutral country, but ultimately to reach Germany. No effort is being spared to completely block any such hostile enterprise.

NEVER AGAIN!

A Narrow Escape

By FRANK CONDON

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

It's a very strange thing about women.

Education, training, youthful surroundings, companions, home influence and other conditions or circumstances of the past will generally present to the observer of a man at least an inkling of what that man will do under certain conditions.

In the case of a woman you may have the history of her entire life at your finger tips, and when you attempt to prophesy her actions or to explain them after she has acted—well, if you're over seven you know precisely how many thousand miles wrong you'll be.

Nowhere could one find a young woman more peaceful and contented than Mrs. Madeline Trimble Grant.

Young Mrs. Madeline had a fine home, a French bulldog, imported Persian rugs, an eighty-eight note piano player, a maidservant of ebony hue, money in the bank and a private check book.

Robert—that was Mr. Grant—caught the 8:46 each morning and made money until the 5:40 at night.

Then he went home to Madeline with a box of bonbons, a bundle of flowers or a book.

The Grant sky was blue and serene. Robert was so happy that he with difficulty restrained himself from cheering each time he reflected upon it, and so was Madeline for a long time.

On an unlucky afternoon a lady called to visit Madeline, and when she went away she presented her hostess with a new book called "Marriage as a Fine Art."

That was the beginning of considerable trouble in the erstwhile happy family of the Grants. Nothing happened upon which one could put one's finger, but it became apparent to Robert that Madeline was troubled.

On a sultry, unpleasant afternoon Robert returned from New York worn out, wilted of collar and ready to take a cool bath and forget the worries of the city.

"WHO IS THE WOMAN?"

He entered his home, walked into the dining room and stopped very suddenly. Madeline was sitting before the table with her head on her arms, and she was weeping in long sobs that shook her entire body.

"What's the matter?" Robert asked simply.

"You know very well what it is," Madeline said.

"I do not know what it is," he retorted. "I'm asking you because I want to know. Has somebody poisoned the goldfish?"

"Make a joke of it if you like," she said coldly, "but I assure you it has gone beyond the stage of jesting. Haven't I been a good wife to you?"

"You surely have, my dear. You're the best wife a man ever had. But what has that to do with it? Haven't I also been a good husband to you?"

"You have not!" she declared bitterly. "Who is the woman—the woman?"

Robert, who had been standing, sat down abruptly.

"The woman!" he gasped. "Madeline, would you be kind enough to sit down and tell me quietly what on earth you are talking about?"

"You carry it off very well," she answered, eying him coldly. "I have been everything that a good wife could be. I have tried to make your home happy, and I only thought of you and your happiness. Everything that I could do in an effort to make myself as perfect a wife as possible I have done, and you repay it all, how? By forgetting me—by casting me off for another woman."

"That isn't the truth, Madeline," he answered gently. "You are the only woman I care for. There is no other woman anywhere in the world except you. You have made a horrible mistake of some kind, and I can't understand it."

"Perhaps you can understand this better, then," she continued.

Madeline, tragedy in her step, walked to her husband and placed in his hand a folded sheet of paper.

"What is it?" he asked without looking at it.

"Read it," she said.

He slowly unfolded the paper and read.

"Dearest Rob," said the paper, "you are the only man in this world I shall ever love, and I shall always love you more than any other man, and I am the only woman and of this I am certain—whom you will always love, no matter what other woman may come into your life."

It was signed "The One Woman."

Robert looked up from the missive, blank wonderment in his countenance. The handwriting he had never seen before.

"Is it a joke?" he asked uncertainly.

"That letter I found in the pocket of the suit you wore yesterday to New York, and I am not surprised at finding some evidence of your guilt. I am not very observing, but I have seen the change that has slowly come over you, and I suspected its cause. Do you think that a loving wife can be blind to such things, no matter how unsophisticated she may be? No; she feels things she cannot explain, and of late I have felt that your love for me has dwindled and that some other woman has taken it from me."

Madeline began to weep softly.

"It is all a mistake," Robert said. "It is either a joke or a trick, and I can't understand it. I know no woman who could send me such a letter. I do not know the handwriting, and I cannot explain how the letter was in my pocket. All I can say, Madeline, is that I love you, and you only. You must not distrust me, because there is not the slightest reason for doing so. Suppose we tackle this intelligently and try to find out whether some deluded friend is playing a practical joke on us or whether an evil minded mischief maker has sought to bring trouble to us both."

Madeline wept afresh.

Robert moved over and sat down beside her. He placed his arms around her, and she did not repulse him.

He spoke to her gently and soothingly, and after a time she dried her tears and smiled.

"You don't believe it?" he queried, stroking her hand.

"No, Robert, I do not believe it," she answered. Her smile increased. Her good humor returned almost miraculously.

"Now," Madeline said, "I am positive that you care for no other woman but me. I am sure of it because you have proved it to me, although for some time I have been miserable with doubts and suspicions."

"How," Robert said wonderingly—"how have I proved it? You are convinced that I know nothing of 'The One Woman?'"

"Yes, dear," Madeline purred sweetly. "I am sure you do not know such a woman because I wrote the note and put it in your pocket. Rather, I had Helen, our girl, write it at my dictation."

Robert suddenly rose from his couch. He was very stern.

He gazed down at Madeline, and a threatening frown was on his face.

"Why," he demanded coldly—"why did you do such a thing as that?"

"Listen, dear," his wife pleaded. "In the book called 'Marriage as a Fine Art' there are chapters which tell a wife how to know the state of her husband's affection for her. Invariably, the book explains, a husband who is disloyal to his wife will when accused of her break into a violent storm of indignant denial. He will deny everything in the bitterest, harshest tones—if he is guilty. If he is innocent he will be kind and gentle. You are innocent, dear Robert. I ask your forgiveness for ever having suspected you, but I love you too dearly to bear the thought of losing your affection. Say that you forgive me."

"I will forgive you upon one condition," her husband answered in his sternest voice. "Where is the book called 'Marriage as a Fine Art?'"

"It is in my room, Robert," Madeline meekly replied.

"Bring it to me," he commanded. "Upon that condition I will forgive you for everything you have done."

"But it belongs to Mrs. Tewksbury, dear."

"Bring it to me!"

Madeline went upstairs and returned with the mischief producing volume. She handed it to Robert.

"This is a fine, worthy little book," he said, skimming rapidly through the tome. "It will serve a good purpose."

Then Robert walked into the kitchen, followed by his wife. Helen Murphy was preparing the potatoes, and at the moment Robert entered her domain a steaming pan was in her hands, and the lid of the stove was off.

For the next half hour "Marriage as a Fine Art" blazed merrily among the coals, accompanied by the fraudulent letter Madeline had written and placed in his coat.

At the end of that time Robert came warily into the kitchen, having heard Helen Murphy stirring in the coal cellar.

He removed the lid from the stove.

Then he reached into the pocket of his coat and took therefrom another letter in a small envelope, addressed to him in fine, feminine handwriting and odorous with the perfume of violets.

He looked at it as one looks at something from which one has had a narrow escape, and, raising his hand in an attitude of never again, he dropped the letter upon the still smoldering ashes of "Marriage as a Fine Art."

WAR'S INTOXICATION.

Medical Man's Interesting, if Unconvincing, Argument.

"War," says a writer in a medical journal, "belongs in the category of stimulants or narcotics, to the number of which civilized man has constantly added to relax the strain and confer temporary oblivion of actual existence. It is indeed a question worthy of debate whether the abstinence from alcohol and tobacco now enforced in many places for economic reasons, together with the adoption of merciless 'speeding-up' processes, has not so increased nervous disequilibrium as to render a welcome relief. Force upon men unnatural speed and concentration and take away their accustomed sedatives and you drive them to a more potent lethan stream.

"Nothing can compare to the glorious intoxication of war in the mind of the healthy adult at his best between the ages of 18 and 30 years; middle age, like night, brings counsel. The normal young man fights and makes love, both occupations deplored and sneered at by the older, whose tissues are hardening. War-like youth puts on its handsomest and most becoming raiment, takes along its most stirring music, heedlessly leaves property behind, to be made good by justifiable loot, kisses its sweetheart good-bye in sure anticipation of more or less willing loves among the enemy's womankind. Even his horse is said to sniff the battle afar off and laugh.

"Apart from the irresponsible excitement of war, there are the healthful open air life, the coarse but wholesome food, the absence of any necessity for original thinking, all of which cause a superb euphoria. The chances of agonizing wounds, of death itself, are cheerfully accepted along with this tremendous joy of living.

"War is an irresistible temptation to man, still not quite civilized. Some day, perhaps, a boy caught playing at 'war' will be treated like one who should to-day be caught torturing a dumb animal; that will be a long time hence, when not only a new kind of education will be universal, but there will be comparatively fewer and wiser people. A scientifically regulated birth rate may furnish a world of population that has had all childhood's rights and privileges and is, consequently, strong physically and self-controlled mentally. Such a population may well believe that it is too good merely to furnish food for powder."

Dustless Street Cleaning.

Canada's climatic conditions, to a certain extent peculiar to herself, impose handicaps in the care of pavements which are hard to overcome.

The dust of the asphalt pavements on business streets is the admitted cause of immense damage to stocks of merchandise, and also is very disagreeable to the individual. This is especially so in early spring and late autumn, when the water sprinkled on the pavements freezes, resulting in accidents to horses and pedestrians.

Water used on pavements at such times is also the cause of serious damage to them, as it soaks into the crevices in the pavement, and freezing, causes the upheaval and disintegration of the asphalt. This is especially noticeable along the curbs and street car lines.

Dustless street cleaners, operated on the combined vacuum and sweeper principle, are in use in a number of North American cities. It is claimed that their work is entirely satisfactory, that after cleaning, no sprinkling is necessary, as the dust has been thoroughly removed. The advantages of this system are numerous, including the absence of the dust nuisance, resulting in conservation of both health and property; the saving of water and a large percentage of the cost of sprinkling; the saving of labor in street cleaning, and the avoidance of damage done by water to pavements in frosty weather.—Saturday Night.

A Big Sale.

One of the biggest sales that Orangeville has ever witnessed is being conducted at the present time by the liquidators of the stock of W. E. Rogers, who assigned a few weeks ago. The Sale, which was extensively advertised, thereby demonstrating the value of printers' ink, opened at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. In a few minutes the store was so crowded that the management found it necessary to close the doors until the inside bargain hunters satisfied their wants. This process was repeated at frequent intervals throughout the day. All day the entrance to the store was jammed with people anxious to gain ingress. At times the jam extended clear across the sidewalk and nearly twice the width of the store. People were here from near and far. Numerous buyers came in on the trains from points outside the Orangeville district. Broadway was almost as badly congested yesterday afternoon as it is on one of the big monthly fair days. The Sale will continue for ten days.

An Adaptation of Tipperary

A subscriber suggests the following verses as an addition to the famous Tipperary song :—

Irish Paddy wasn't long in getting to Berlin
He got there in time to see the Kaiser's troops give in,
And as they put the Kaiser and his sons upon the train,
Then Irish Paddy shouted "Boys, we'll sing that good old strain."

It's a long way to Tipperary,
It's a long way to go.
It's a long way to Tipperary,
To the sweetest girl I know.
Good-bye then to Belgium,
Farewell, France, then, too ;
It's a long, long way to Tipperary
But I'm going there.

Paddy reached beloved Tipperary one fine day in June,
Shortly after Kaiser Bill had been sent to his doom ;
He was met by Irish Molly, who had waited true,
Said Paddy, as he kissed his Molly, "At last my dream's come true."

It seemed a long way to Tipperary,
It seemed a long way to go ;
It seemed a long way to Tipperary,
When in France I faced the foe.
But now I am in Tipperary,
Belgium's free again,
So I'll never leave my Tipperary,
Never leave again.

Robinson-Thompson.

Mr. E. A. Robinson, West Broadway, and Miss Bertha Thompson, of Woodbridge, were married in Toronto on Tuesday. The ceremony took place in St. Anne's Church, Rev G. W. Tebbs, rector of St. Mark's Church, Orangeville, officiating. The newly wedded couple are expected home at the end of the week. The Banner joins their many friends in extending its hearty congratulations.

Horner-McCulloch.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. McCulloch, lot 4, con. 2, Adjala township, on Wednesday, Jan. 20th, when her youngest daughter, Bertha, was united in marriage to Mr. D. C. Horner, of Newton Robinson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. H. Quaife, of Mono Mills. Promptly at 12o'clock, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride, the couple entered the parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by her brother, George. The bride, who wore a dress of brown broadcloth, trimmed with silk net and gold lace, was given away by her brother, Goldie. After receiving the congratulations of those present the happy couple led the way to the dining room where a dainty repast was served. The bride was the recipient of many useful and pretty presents. Their many friends wish the happy couple a long, pleasant and prosperous life.

The house was beautifully decorated in yellow, pink and green. The wedding was quietly celebrated. The guests consisted of the members of the family and Rev. and Mrs. G. ture of the occasion was the presentation to the bride and groom by the members of the family of a well filled purse of gold.

Councillor Morton, of Mono, Corrects Errors re. Township Finances.

Glencross, Jan. 25th, 1915.

Editor of The Banner :

Dear Sir,—

Please allow me space in your newspaper to say a few words to the ratepayers of the township of Mono regarding two typographical errors in the balance sheet for 1914 and one in my open letter in a recent issue of The Banner. In the statement there were two items of wire fence of 120 rods each charged to R. Buchanan, lot 18, 2nd line, whereas one of these items should have been charged to R. Gray on the 3rd line. In the other case two items of interest were shown in the Bank account, each amounting to $65. Only one of these was included in the total, which was right. There was also a mistake in the figures representing my expenditure as given in my letter in The Banner. The figures printed were $203, whereas they should have been $283. This was through no fault of mine as I gave the correct figures to the editor of the paper.

I want also to say that I will advocate strict economy in all matters regarding the business of the township. This is my plain duty, more especially when Canada as well as the Mother Country is at war against German militancy and brutality of the worst kind. In conclusion I wish to again thank the ratepayers for their hearty support and the confidence they have expressed by their votes. This I will endeavor to repay by honest administration and strict economy in the conduct of their affairs.

Yours Respectfully,
JAS. A. MORTON.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank the electors of Orangeville for the large vote they gave me in Tuesday's election. Under the exceptional circumstances which affected my candidature, I am more than pleased with this expression of the continued confidence of the electors.

L. K. JOHNSTON

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to tender my hearty thanks to the electors of Orangeville for their splendid support in Tuesday's election. As I have been a resident of the town for only two years, the large vote which I received is particularly gratifying. I shall endeavor to serve your interests diligently and to your advantage.

FOR SEVEN YEARS.

Rev. Frank Higgins' Long Struggle for Ordination.

Rev. Frank E. Higgins, the "lumber jack's sky pilot," whose death at his old home near Primrose, was reported in The Banner last week, was a regularly ordained minister of the Presbyterian Church. His ordination, however, was only secured after a wait of seven years and repeated appeals to the Presbytery. The story of his final appeal is told in a recent issue of The Continental as follows :—

"For seven years he struggled for ordination. After being refused the seventh time he told Presbytery: 'I need not tell you that the decision of this body is disappointing, for I have long desired the boon of ordination. During the last seven years I have appeared before you many times, and asked to be set aside to the ministry. I know my insufficiencies—no man can know them better. I do not blame you for withholding the laying on of hands, but I was ordained of God long years ago to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, and although unsanctioned by man, I shall still preach the message with which he has provided me. I have asked ordination for the last time. I am satisfied with the call of God.'"

It is gratifying to be able to add that at a special meeting held shortly afterwards Presbytery reconsidered its action and Higgins was regularly ordained. In August, 1902, he was commissioned by the evangelistic committee of the Presbyterian Church to take charge of the lumber camp work in Minnesota. Since 1908 he worked under the Board of Home Missions, superintending the work in the logging camps all through the country, and established work in Washington, Oregon, Arkansas and the Adirondacks of New York State on the model of what he had himself developed in the woods of Minnesota. He also set several of his converts to preaching on circuits of Minnesota camps."

Brampton Still Borrowing.

At its first meeting Brampton Council for 1915 passed a by-law to authorize the municipality to borrow $16,275.67 by debentures to pay for a concrete pavement and curb on Queen St., east. By-laws were also passed to provide $4,289.47 for sidewalks and $20,565.14 for local improvements.

Cared for 42 Inmates.

Peel and Halton counties House of Refuge cared for 42 inmates during the past year, according to the report of County Treasurer Robert Crawford, issued recently. Of these 21 were from Peel, 20 from Halton, and one from Dufferin. The average cost per capita per week was $2.61. The total cost of the institution for the year, including salaries, maintenance, light, heat and fuel, was $5,716.77. $943 worth of stock was sold off the farm during the year.

Fined $100 and Costs.

The notorious "Jimmy" Farrell, of Streetsville Junction, was last week found guilty of keeping a large quantity of liquor for sale without a license and was fined $100 and costs. The accused denied the charge but Inspector J. D. Orr in his evidence said that on Jan. 11th he paid a visit to the Farrell place at Streetsville Junction and found Mr. Farrell serving a man with beer. He searched the premises, found a quantity of whiskey hidden upstairs, and found a number of kegs of beer in the cellar, some half full, one quite full and others from which a quantity had been removed, about fourteen gallons in all.

Watford Man Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. Robt. Taylor, Sr., After Suffering for Two Years, Tells of the Benefits He Got from Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Watford, Ont., Feb. 1st. (Special)—Mr. Robert Taylor, Sr., a very estimable man living here, is telling his friends that the pain in his back, from which he suffered for some time, has disappeared, and that he gives all the credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills. "My trouble started with a cold," Mr. Taylor states, "and though I was treated by a doctor I got no permanent relief. I had cramps in my muscles and stiffness in my joints, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing and I perspired freely with the least exertion. I had attacks of rheumatism and sciatica, and though I tried many medicines I found no relief until I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. I must say they were a great benefit to me."

Mr. Taylor's troubles came from his kidneys. The diseased kidneys failed to strain the uric acid out of the blood and the results were as he has stated. Dodd's Kidney Pills put the kidneys in working order, the uric acid was strained out of the blood, and the troubles went with it.

Dufferin County Need Not Worry Over the "Money Pinch" or Dull Times.

Treasurer has Enough Money to Keep the Wheels Moving Until June Levy.—Report of Last Week's Meeting of County Council.

It was late on Friday afternoon when the County Council completed the work of its January meeting. Practically the last matter dealt with was the question of making a grant for Patriotic purposes. Some of the members were in favor of making an addition to the county levy for this purpose, but the proposition did not secure the backing of the majority. Eventually the Council decided to make a straight grant of $1,200—$500 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, $500 to the Belgian Relief Fund and $200 to the Red Cross Society. The motion making the grant was fathered by Messrs. Clarke and Park.

At the session on Thursday morning the Clerk read a letter from Alfred Collier, Deputy-Registrar, complaining that the Registry Office was not properly heated. The Clerk also laid before the Council the award of the arbitrators appointed to consider the formation of a Union School Section between Amaranth and East Garafraxa.

Thursday afternoon the Finance Committee submitted its report. The report recommended the following grants :—

The Salvation Army	$ 5.00
Sick Children's Hospital	5.00
National Sanitarium Asso.	10.00
Orangeville, Shelburne and Grand Valley Agricultural Societies, each	250.00
Rural School Fairs	100.00
Daughters of the Empire ...	300.00
Dufferin County Poultry Show	50.00

No action was taken regarding the application for aid to carry on the work of the Children's Aid Society. The Committee recommended that Division Court Clerks be required to order supplies for their offices through the County Clerk.

The Council held a very short session Friday morning. The afternoon sitting was devoted chiefly to presenting and adopting reports.

On the recommendation of the County Property Committee, Chairman Fairbairn was given authority to expend a sum not exceeding $35 in equipment for the Sheriff's office.

The Committee on Roads & Bridges presented a lengthy report. Some of the more important recommendations were :—

That Mr. McDonald, the contractor, be paid $307.50 forthwith and a balance of $30.00 when he has completed the work agreed upon on the Park bridge on East and West Garafraxa townline. The contract-price was $347.50, but the engineer deducted $10.00 for defective work. Mr. McDonald will also receive 75 per cent. of the contract price for the abutments and the balance when the bridge is fully completed.

That road grants be made as follows :—

Hockley Road, Mono, $50, Mono to supplement with $50.

Prince of Wales Road, Mono, $100, Mono to supplement with $100.

Mono and Mulmur townline, $150, Mono and Mulmur to supplement with $150 each.

Mono and Caledon townline, $50, Peel County, Mono and Caledon townships to supplement with $50 each.

Broadway, west of Orangeville, $35, Orangeville and Mono to supplement with $35 each.

River Road, Mulmur, $100, Mulmur to supplement with $100.

Mulmur and Tossorontio townline, $50, Simcoe County, Mulmur and Tossorontio townships to supplement with $50 each.

Townline, west of Shelburne, $140, east of Shelburne, $10, Amaranth and Melancthon to supplement with $150 each.

Melancthon and East Luther townline, $25, Melancthon and East Luther to supplement with $25 each.

Melancthon and Proton townline, $25, Melancthon to supplement with $25 and Proton with $50.

Gravel Road, south of Grand Valley, $35 ; north of Grand Valley, $90 ; west of Grand Valley, $50; and east of Grand Valley, $15, East Luther to supplement with like amounts.

Orangeville and Reading Road, $50, East Garafraxa to supplement with $50.

East Garafraxa and Amaranth townline, $100, East Garafraxa and Amaranth to supplement with $100 each.

Leading roads in Amaranth, $125, Amaranth to supplement with $125.

Townline East Garafraxa and Caledon, $50, Peel County, East Garafraxa and Caledon townships to supplement with $50 each.

That the Chairman of the Committee, Warden, County Engineer and Commissioners Williams and Burnett examine the bridge at the south end of the 5th line, Amaranth, and report on its condition during the June meeting of Council.

That the Chairman, the Warden and County Engineer inspect all county bridges which need rebuilding and repairing as early as possible in the spring and report at the June meeting.

That a Committee, composed of Messrs. Kidd, Hilborn, Falconer and Marshall, attend the Ontario Good Roads Association meeting for the purpose of supporting resolutions to bring about special legislation for the particular needs of Dufferin county.

The Education Committee reported in favor of the payment of the following accounts for Dufferin County pupils :—Dundalk High School, $267.-13 ; Owen Sound Collegiate, $24 80.

The Committee also recommended that the Council pass a by-law to appoint arbitrators to adjust the boundaries of S. S. Nos. 7, 9 and 11, Amaranth township. A by-law was subsequently passed naming Judge Fisher, Inspector Liddy and Mr. James White, of Mono, as the arbitrators.

The Standing Committee on Legislation recommended in its report that the Legislature be requested to amend the Municipal Act by reducing the number of electors necessary to entitle a municipality to a deputy-reeve from 1000 to 800. The decrease in rural population was given as the reason for the recommendation.

In his annual statement to the Council, Treasurer C. R. Wheelock made the satisfying statement that the cash surplus of $3605.94 to the credit of the County at the beginning of 1914 had increased to $5,804.-20 at the beginning of the current year. This surplus, Mr. Wheelock stated, should be sufficient to meet all ordinary expenditure up to the time of making the annual levy next June.

Before the adjournment the Council passed a resolution expressing its deepest sympathy with the family of the late George Bailey, a long and faithful servant of the people of Melancthon township and an ex-Warden of the County of Dufferin.

Tuesday, June 15th, was fixed as the date for the opening of the June meeting of the Council.

The suggestion that there should be a conference of representatives from Ontario and Quebec to discuss, and if possible pave a way for the solution of the difficulties regarding the teaching of French in this province is not likely to commend itself to the judgment of the people of Ontario. Ontario's educational system is a purely provincial matter and the idea that it should be modified to suit the views of the people of Quebec is so absurd that we cannot see why it should be seriously entertained even for one moment. Doubtless, a conference of this kind would suit the interests of the French minority in Ontario, for Quebec would naturally have an equal representation and an equal voice in its deliberations. In a word the French would have nothing to lose and possibly a great deal to gain from such a conference. The teaching of French in Ontario's Schools is of too vital importance to be settled in this fashion. It is for the people of Ontario, themselves, to say whether their public and separate schools shall be used for this purpose.

THE COOPERS COMMITTED

Father and Son Sent Up For Trial on Theft Charges.

The preliminary hearing of the case of Rex vs. Henry Cooper took place before Police Magistrate Pattullo in the Court House on Monday. Quite a number of interested spectators were present for the hearing. County Crown Attorney J. L. Island conducted the prosecution, and Mr. A. A. Hughson appeared for the defendant. The Crown witnesses were Mr. John Harshaw, his son, Mr. John M. Harshaw, who lives on the farm where the theft was committed, and High Constable Wm. Marshall, whose effective work led to the arrest of the Coopers. Mr. Harshaw identified a scoop shovel and bagholder, which Marshall found at Cooper's place, as his property. The articles were also identified by his son. Both witnesses identified samples of the stolen oats, buckwheat and chop feed. Mr. Harshaw estimated that about 1.0 bushels of oats 4 or 5 bags of chop and two bags of buckwheat were taken from his farm. The theft took place on Thursday night, Jan. 14th, and was discovered by the younger Harshaw early on Friday afternoon. It came out in Mr. Harshaw's evidence that Harry Cooper had formerly worked for him and was therefore well acquainted with the premises. Constable Marshall told of his search for the missing grain and of finding part of it at Peter Cooper's in Mono Centre and some of the chop and buckwheat at Harry Cooper's place near Angus. Witness had also discovered some of Harshaw's grain bags at each of the places. Marshall swore that after his arrest and after he had been duly cautioned, Harry Cooper had confessed to him that he and his father had taken the grain. They took it all from Harshaw's place in one load, but after driving some distance his father had gone home for a team, met him and helped to divide the load.

The hearing of the charge against the elder Cooper took place yesterday morning. Crown Attorney Island again prosecuted and the prisoner was undefended. The Harshaws and Constable Marshall gave evidence similar to that given by them on Monday, Mrs. Cooper, wife of the younger prisoner, testified that Peter Cooper had repeatedly written letters to her husband asking him to come down to his place. Harry Cooper was placed in the box for the Crown and made a clean breast of the whole affair. He and his father had gone to Harshaw's together to steal the grain. Witness held the bags while his father shovelled in the grain. The understanding they had was that they were to divide their ill-gotten gain.

At the close of the hearing the Magistrate committed the two prisoners for trial. They will be brought before P.M. Pattullo next Monday for a preliminary trial on some further charges. One of these is based on the alleged theft of some farm implements from William Canning, a Mono farmer.

IMPRESSIVE TRIBUTES.

Members of Congress Testify to Worth and High Character of "Bob" Bremner.

Day Set Apart for Services in Memory of Former Representative.

From a copy of the Congressional Record, which has just reached our desk, we learn that the House of Representatives set apart Sunday, Jan. 24th, last, for services upon the life, character and public services of the late Hon. Robert G. Bremner, a Representative from the State of New Jersey. The House agreed to the following resolution by unanimous vote :—

Resolved, That the business of the House be now suspended that opportunity may be given for tributes to the memory of Hon. Robert G. Bremner, late a member of this House from the State of New Jersey.

Resolved, That as a particular mark of respect to the memory of the deceased and in recognition of his distinguished public career, the House, at the conclusion of these exercises, shall stand adjourned.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

Resolved, That the Clerk send a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased.

A number of the members spoke to the resolutions, delivering impressive tributes to the worth and character of Representative Bremner. Space will not permit us to publish these, but we have selected from them the eloquent address of Representative Eagan, who spoke as follows :—

"Mr. Speaker, almost a year ago there passed from among us one of the most remarkable men who ever sat in this legislative body, Robert Gunn Bremner, a Representative from the seventh congressional district of New Jersey. Following the old and beautiful custom of this House, we pause to-day in our legislative labors to pay our tributes of respect to his memory and to tell as best we may the story of his short but very useful life and to point out the lesson of that life.

It was not my good fortune to know Bob Bremner until election to this House brought us into association with one another. In the all too short time between our first meeting and his death I saw but little of him, and yet that little was sufficient to convince me that Bob Bremner was one of the noblest of men. I must leave to those of my colleagues who knew him longer and more intimately the pleasant task of recounting his many and more intimate virtues.

Membership in this great body has its responsibilities and its cares, but it also has its compensations. One of the greatest of these is the intimate and enduring friendships which we form with one another. My friendship—aye, my love—for Bob Bremner began, as it did with every one else who had the good fortune to know him, from the moment almost of our introduction. That friendship will be one of the dearest memories I shall take with me when I leave this House. The old saying, "To know him was to love him," applied with special force to Bob Bremner.

The world surely is better because Bob Bremner lived. Every Member of this House who knew him at all—indeed, every man and woman in America who followed his manly fight against the ravages of the dread disease which was slowly but surely overwhelmning him, is the better because the Almighty saw fit to place the great soul of Bob Bremner in its tenement of clay for a few short years.

Bob Bremner was indeed "a brave man struggling in the storms of fate." Coupled with indomitable courage and great optimism was a never-failing cheerfulness, which enabled him to smile while undergoing the most intense pain. He possessed in a rare degree the ability to look on the brighter side of life and to impart to all who came within his reach much of the cheerfulness which radiated from him.

His all-pervading good humor made him a welcome addition to any group of his fellows. His entrance into this Chamber was always the signal for many eyes to be turned on him in admiration of his manly struggle against fate, and for a number of his colleagues to gather around him to inquire how he was getting on and to be entertained by his quaint and witty comments on men and events.

I shall never forget the last visit made to him by Congressmen Hart and myself at Dr. Kelly's sanitorium in Baltimore a few days before his death. We found him propped up in bed with Bible on one side and a volume of Shakespeare on the other. When we entered the room it was plain to us that the shadow of death was even then upon him. I believe that he knew that he had but a very few days to live and yet he was as cheerful as when I first met him. He assured us that he would be back at his work in a short time and told us of the plans he was making for his return to the House and to his congressional labors. He appeared to take as keen an interest in events as if he really expected to be back at his work the following week. We recited at some length the story of our patronage and other troubles of the preceding week, to his great amusement. He recounted to us his own troubles along the same line with his usual zest and good humor. It was impossible to realize that a spirit such as his was about to leave us.

Bob Bremner was as unselfish as he was heroic. His heroism and unselfishness can be expressed in no better way than in the simple statement from what was to be his death-bed that even if the treatment to which he was being subjected were to prove unsuccessful in his own case, he was glad to suffer if the experiment should result in relieving others afflicted with the dread disease which was soon to claim him for its own. He suffered intense agony in these experiments, not so much, I believe, in the hope that it might benefit himself as that it would benefit others.

I can not conclude this feeble tribute to the memory of my friend and colleague without a reference to the sisterly devotion and affection of Miss Helen Bremner. Miss Helen was with her brother constantly. She aided him in his congressional work, and when the heavy hand of illness was laid upon him and he was unable to go to his office she was his very able and courteous substitute. At the end of each day she dropped the role of secretary to take up that of nurse.

While Bob Bremner's death was a very great loss to all the members of his family, it was, if possible, an even greater loss to Miss Helen, who never left the bedside of her brother during the last eight days of his illness.

Bob Bremner's friends were legion. By none was he more esteemed and loved than by President Wilson and his lamented wife. It is fitting that I should close with this tribute to his memory by President Wilson :

"I am deeply grieved by the loss of Bob Bremner. He was a personal friend, whom I greatly admired, and was such a man as attracts deep affection. Throughout his suffering, which was long-continued, he seemed never to think of himself, as he certainly never spoke of himself, and he was throughout as keenly interested in the diligent performance of his public duties and in kindly offices to others as if he had been free from pain. I feel that a beautiful spirit has gone out of the world."

Revenue From Auto Licenses

East Garafraxa Council has gone on record as being of opinion that all the money which the Provincial Government receives from auto licenses should be handed over to the counties in which the autos are owned. The matter was discussed at the last meeting, the discussion ending in the Council passing the following resolution fathered by Councillors Carney and Thompson :—

"That this Council places itself on record as of the opinion that a change is required in the disposition of money received by the Ontario Government from automobile licenses. We believe that all the money received by licenses issued to owners of autos in the counties should be returned to the counties as the ratepayers have to expend an extra large amount of money to keep the roads in repair owing to the fact that autos are very destructive to the roads. And that a copy of this resolution be sent to C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., with the request that he bring the matter up in the Legislative Assembly.
